N. J. Wins Hauptmann For Baby Killer Trial; U.S. Agents Drop Case

Lawyers Frame Appeal Against Extradition Mandate.

Bronx Extortion Case Will Wait

Stage Set at Flemington Near Scene of Baby's Kidnaping.

Developments last night in the Lindbergh kidnaping case were:

Gov. Lehman of New York signed papers authorizing the extradition of Bruno Richard Hauptmann from New York to New Jersey to stand trial on charges of murdering the Lindbergh baby.

Defense Attorney James M. Fawcett announced he would make a vigorous court fight against the order and hurried from his conference with the Governor in Albany to carry his fight to the Bronx County court.

The Department of Justice announced here it was withdrawing from the Lindbergh case, giving rise to the impression that the search for a possible accomplice of Hauptmanns has been abandoned. It also was indicated that the withdrawal, closely following the definite linking of Hauptmann to most of the ransom money, was brought about, in part, through friction between Federal officers and New Jersey police. It has been asserted that Federal agents felt they had received little cooperation from the Jersey officials and that some of the more valuable evidence had been withheld from them.

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—Extradition of Bruno Richard Hauptmann to New Jersey to stand trial for the abduction-murder of the Lindbergh baby was ordered at Albany late today by Gov. Herbert Lehman.

A vigorous defense fight to stave off extradition was in prospect.

The order was delivered tonight by Arthur Corscadden, representative of the Governor's office, to Inspector James F. McGrath, of police headquarters here, who said the order would be transmitted immediately to Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine.

Police headquarters officers said routine procedure would necessitate notification of Sheriff John J. Hanley of Bronx County, in whose custody the prisoner is lodged, as their next step.

As Gov. Lehman signed the papers at the executive mansion, acceding to New Jersey's claim of first lien on the stowaway from Germany, Defense Attorney James M. Fawcett was hurrying to New York to prepare for the court test.

"We'll fight extradition to the end," the attorney said.

Would Snag N. J. Trip.

Fawcett said he would apply tomorrow in a Bronx court for a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that New Jersey authorities had failed to establish adequate identification of the prisoner.

If granted, extradition would be held in abeyance until a court could hear Hauptmann's refutation of charges that he stole the first-born of the flying Lindberghs from his Hopewell home the night of

"Runaway Kids From Montana"

Mrs. Josephine Kline, 60 (left), and Mrs. Helene Sherwood, 61, who walked the 2,140 miles from Livingston, Mont., to Washington to see President Roosevelt yesterday.

2 Women, in Sixties, Hitchhike Across U. S. to See Roosevelt

Trek to Ask Aid Here Revealed as Saga of Fortitude.

This is a story of adventure, a story of romance after life has passed its peak.

It extols stubborn courage, this story of Mrs. Josephine Kline, aged 60, and Mrs. Helen Sherwood, aged 61, who hitch-hiked the 2,140 miles from Livingston, Mont., to Washington to search for justice.

"The two runaway kids from Montana," they call themselves. And well they might. For run away they did. Together they slipped out of Livingston, their home, in the middle of the afternoon of September 26—just two weeks ago yesterday—and set their faces toward the Capital, telling neither relative or friend their destination.

You can see them, Mrs. Sherwood, tall and straight, in her long brocaded blue serge coat; Mrs. Kline shorter and a bit stout, in a dress of some flimsy material and a sweater, each with 30 pounds of suitcase tugging at an arm, plodding along a mountain road through a melting autumn snow, mum or evasive to the queries of puzzled acquaintances.

Mrs. Kline left a daughter and three grandchildren; Mrs. Sherwood, a son. And their mission ended at the White House.

These women, for whom most of life is a memory, marched those

President Rejects Cash Left in Westerner's Will

Los Angeles, Oct. 10 (AP).—President Roosevelt, who was left $1,000 in the will of Leon Grant McBurney, of San Pedro, has assigned his interest in the estate to McBurney's children, Superior Court records disclosed today. McBurney's will also bequeathed $1,000 to Joseph Stalin, of Soviet Russia, with the statement, "I owe him more."

The document, written in pencil on newsprint paper, provided the children should each receive $1 from the estate "for reasons they all know."

Cost of Food Drops to Halt Long Advance

General Decline Is Four-Tenths Per Cent, With Pork Chops Leading.

Retail food prices in Washington and the United States showed a decrease in the period ending September 25, the Bureau of Labor Statistics announced yesterday. This marked the end of a gradual but steady advance in prices, which began April 24.

The price decrease here was half of 1 per cent. For the entire country it was four-tenths of 1 per cent. But despite these decreases, prices remained considerably higher than a year ago and two years ago, the bureau's study revealed.

As compared to prices in Washington on September 15, 1932, retail food costs 15.8 per cent more now. For the entire country, the prices are 16.1 per cent higher than in 1932.

Of the 51 cities covered by the survey, 29 registered declines, 3 showed no change from the preceding period and 19 showed advancing prices. The greatest decrease was shown by Peoria, 1.7 per cent, while Portland, Oreg., showed the largest increase, 1.9 per cent.

Foods showing drops in price were led by meats which fell 1.6 per cent, due to declining prices for lamb, pork chops and steak. Dairy products decreased one-tenth of 1 per cent.

Of the 42 articles of food in the Bureau's index, 10 showed weakening prices, 13 remained at the previous level and 19 recorded price advances.

Oil Baron's Wife Seized By Kidnaper

Mrs. Berry V. Stoll, of Louisville, Held for $50,000 Ransom.

Abductor Slugs Victim, Binds and Gags Her Maid.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 10 (AP).—Mrs. Berry V. Stoll, young society leader and wife of a wealthy oil man, was seized from her fashionable home late today by a kidnaper who left a note containing a threat and a demand for $50,000 ransom.

Beaten by the abductor, who gained entrance to the house on a pretext and left her maid bound and gagged, Mrs. Stoll was spirited away in an automobile. Federal, city and county authorities immediately began a wide search.

Maid Tells of Struggle.

There was blood on the floor of the home and Mrs. Fowler Willett, 24, maid, who was found bound and gagged, told Mr. Stoll that the man had beaten Mrs. Stoll in a struggle with her and at the point of a pistol had bound the maid to a chair. The hands of Mrs. Stoll, a slender brunette, who is 26 years old, were then bound with tape.

Mr. Stoll, who discovered the maid when he returned home shortly after 5 o'clock, later issued a statement addressed to the kidnaper:

"Berry Stoll has just found the note regarding the ransom and arrangements are being made accordingly."

He declined to make its contents public, but it was learned that in addition to demanding money it contained a threat that William A. Stoll, president of the Stoll Refining Co., was "next on the list." He is a brother of Berry Stoll, the vice president, and is president of the Louisville Board of Trade. Stoll said the ransom note was found in an upstairs bedroom. The amount demanded was revealed by Maj. William Smith, night chief of police.

Suspects Former Convict.

"When I came in," said Mr. Stoll, "I immediately untied the maid from her chair. I got from her a description of the man. She said he was very white of face and that his lips were unusually red. I think he must be a former convict. I then ran to the Clarke (James Clarke, jr.) home and telephone the police. I also called William Speed, my wife's father, and others.

"When I came back home I found the note on a bed upstairs, and it contained the information about the ransom. Apparently the kidnapers have me confused with my father, C. C. Stoll. The note kept referring to him. Yet the kidnapers must know me. Maybe it was some one in the Army with me, because the maid told me the man

Colorado Retrenches, Auctions Biggest Auto

Denver, Oct. 10 (AP).—The State of Colorado is offering its shiniest and biggest automobile for sale.

It just won't fit into anybody's official budget.

The car first belonged to the military department, which paid its bills for a month or two and then shifted it to I. R. Taylor, purchasing agent, who tried it and turned it over to the Governor's office.

The Governor never used it, but it's still running up bills for storage, so the State executive council decided today to get rid of it.

Higher Price Level Sought By President

U. S. Solvency Restored, He Says, but Holds Off Stabilization.

Prevention of Runaway Values Chief Concern of Roosevelt.

By Elliott Thurston.

President Roosevelt believes the price level has risen to a point restoring the solvency of the country, but seeks further rise before attempting stabilization. He does not accept the theory that 1926 prices should be the goal.

How much more of a rise in the general price level is desirable is undetermined. The Administration wants to prevent runaway prices or values. Study is being devoted to the question of rising prices and to means for preventing them from going through the roof. The Administration is concerned with the question of proper balance between agricultural and industrial prices. A parity of farm prices based upon 1909 to 1914 levels is sought.

The President believes there are a great many factors in the question of price and that it is impossible to be didactic about it. A change in the gold content of the dollar may be one factor, but he is not prepared to say. The objective remains to find ways in the future of preventing the wide fluctuations which characterized commodity prices between 1920 and 1934. The Administration is interested in the balance between agricultural and industrial prices, and in the question of real wages.

Shed Light on Issues.

These generalities serve to shed light on a number of important questions foremost in the minds of the country's economists and business leaders. Without drawing final conclusions from these views, it seems evident that Mr. Roosevelt for the first time definitely disavows the 1926 price level, which has been the goal of various groups, including the Committee for the Nation and some of the farm organizations.

Although the President has never publicly espoused the 1926 price level as such, he has described his price objective in terms which were generally taken to mean the 1926 level. Economists have objected that the 1926 price goal was undesirable, even if attainable, and that the important thing to attain was a fairer balance among prices. Insofar as the President disclaims the 1926 goal, he appears to be in accord with the most representative economic thought in the country.

It also is evident the Administration is alert to the dangers, much discussed among economists, of runaway prices, caused not from budgetary collapse and paper inflation, but by ungoverned or ungovernable credit expansion. Many have noted, including the British broker, Maj. Angas, whose "The Coming American Boom" temporarily excited Wall street, that the Government's monetary policy, devaluation of the dollar and creation

'Alias Jimmy Valentine' Gets $220 in Stickups

Los Angeles, Oct. 10 (AP).—With the request, "Wait a minute, James," a masked man stepped early today from an expensive sedan, its door held open by his chauffeur, and robbed a beer parlor of $100.

A short while later he robbed a service station of $120. Then, as he stepped into the machine the man was heard to say, "Home, James."

Anti-Italian Disorder Flares in Yugoslavia; Ship Bears King Home

As Slain King Saluted Before Shots

King Alexander of Yugoslavia, with Foreign Minister Louis Barthou of France, acknowledging the cheers of the crowds at Marseille a few moments before he and Barthou were assassinated.

Neighbor Called Brains of Assassination at Marseille.

Aids of Murderer Sought by Police

Passport Held Forgery; Believe Killer Drew Terrorist Lot.

Major developments in the European political situation arising from the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia were:

Anti-Italian demonstrations were reported throughout Slovenia as the populace charged Italians were the "brains" behind the assassination. Police guards at the Italian embassy and consulate were increased.

Serbian leaders were reported planning a military dictatorship if civil war broke out.

Accomplices of the assassin, Petrus Kalemen, were hunted by police as a Yugoslavian destroyer bore home the body of the king.

Queen Marie prepared to go to Paris to break the news of the tragedy to Peter II, newly proclaimed King.

The assassinations of the King and Louis Barthou, French Foreign Minister, were viewed as endangering still further the hope of an agreement at the naval talks to begin in London this month.

Belgrade, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—Anti-Italian demonstrations were reported from throughout Slovenia tonight. The population was tremendously excited, charging Italians were "the brains behind the assassination of King Alexander and must accept full moral responsibility for the crime." Police dispersed most of the demonstrators. Late tonight they strengthened their guards in front of the Italian embassy and consulate general.

The evening newspaper Pravda printed this headline: "Our national enemies killed our King."

The peasants of Yugoslavia, reared in a tradition of independence, faced the specter of a possible military dictatorship tonight.

The country seethed internally as indications increased that a military directorate, controlled by the Serbian army clique, may seize control of the nation in the name of King Peter II, the 11-year-old schoolboy whose father was slain by one of his subjects, believed to be a Croatian, in Marseille yesterday.

Yugoslavs long have realized the greatest danger to their kingdom is national disunion. The death of the King, it was feared, might bring active hostilities between the warring elements. To prevent this, the Serbians, who control the army, were believed planning a dictatorship based on their own strength.

Artillery regiments, which had concluded their autumn maneuvers Monday, preparatory to dispersing to their cantonments, were reported reassembled and returning to Belgrade.

Military Action Possible.

It was regarded as possible that the army chiefs, headed by Gen. Peter Zhivovitch, Yugoslavia's "strong man," and Gen. Josef Koftvich, might even establish their power before the boy King reached the capital from England.

If the military chieftains do not seize the power, then the old cabinet must resign and make way for a new government.

Any civilian government probably would find Gen. Zhivkovitch as premier and possibly foreign minister. A regency, declared under the political testament of King Alexander, is said to be considering declaring a state of national emergency, which would be done instantly if a coup d'etat were attempted.

Public opinion was apparently favorable to the regents selected by King Alexander. The leader of the regency, Prince Paul, possesses a keen sense of Yugoslavian internal politics, but never has mixed in it. Other members are Dr. Radenko Stankovic, senator and former minister of education, and Dr. Ivan Perovic, governor of the province of which Zagreb is the capital.

Substitutes named by the king are Gen. Vojeslav Tomic, com-

Queen to Break News of Death To Peter, Yugoslav Boy King

(Copyright, 1934, by United Press.)

Paris, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—King Peter II, a carefree boy of 11, still unconscious that destiny has called him to the throne of his father, arrived in Paris tonight wondering at the attention he was receiving—the display of guards, the respect, the curious glances cast upon him.

He was to spend the night at the Yugoslavian legation, where he will be told—when his mother, Queen Marie, has arrived and summoned the courage—the significance of the dramatic change from an "English" schoolboy to a European monarch.

"He has asked innumerable questions," an intimate friend of the royal family said, "but he has not been told of the tragedy. The task has been left to his mother, because no one else has the courage."

It was known that Peter, who was smiling when he arrived with his sorrowing grandmother, Queen Marie of Rumania, expressed great surprise at the secrecy with which he was taken from the train, and at the display of military and police force and the milling crowds.

The train in which the Dowager Marie and the little boy were traveling stopped outside the Gare du Nord, and the royal figures were smuggled hastily into a limousine, reaching Paris by a detour to avoid the thousands of spectators who lined the streets.

Along the way, however, from London to Paris, there was ample evidence for the youthful monarch that something tragic had happened in his life. Flags flew at half-staff, people surrounding him seemed considerate toward him, and the Police Seek Pair Who Stayed at Hotel With Assassin.

Zagreb, Yugoslavia, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—After an examination of telegraphed pictures of the assassination of King Alexander, police tonight announced the assassin, Petrus Kaleman, had been indentified as a native of Zagreb. Kalemen's record showed he was an odd-job laborer here. Police also learned the murderer recently had worked in mines in Belgium.

Marseille, Oct. 10.—The bullet-torn body of Alexander, King of Yugoslavia, was started back to his homeland on a destroyer today as authorities announced discovery of definite proof that the Czech passport found on the body of his assassin was forged.

Meanwhile officials at Aix-en-Provence sought two men who stayed at a hotel there for two days with the killer, tentatively identified as a Croat.

A flower-and-flag-draped coffin on the after-deck of the Yugoslav destroyer Dubrovnik carried the body of the ruler, shot yesterday as he entered France to seal new compacts for the preservation of Europe's peace.

The weeping, widowed Queen Marie turned toward Paris to join her eldest son, Peter, Yugoslavia's

Pilgrims Snub H.S. Vanderbilt

Rainbow's Skipper Retires Early; Sopwith Paid Honor at Dinner.

London, Oct. 10 (AP).—Practically everybody except Harold S. Vanderbilt, skipper of the victorious Rainbow in the recent America's Cup yacht races, was present tonight at the Pilgrim's banquet in honor of T. O. M. Sopwith, who sailed the British challenger, Endeavour, Mrs. Sopwith and the yacht's amateur crew.

While dozens of bemedaled admirals, generals and other officers toasted the defeated crew of Endeavour and spoke fondly of cordial relations between England and America, Vanderbilt presumably retired early at his hotel nearby. The victorious skipper's name was neither mentioned directly nor by inference.

Sopwith's remarks were much in the same tenor as those he made before leaving the United States, regretting that he and the New York Yacht Club were unable to agree upon interpretations of the rules.

"I still have hopes," he said, "that I may in the near future start all over again on a proper basis. No one in the New York Yacht Club is any more satisfied with the result of this series than I am."

Mrs. Sopwith had the distinction of being the first woman to attend a Pilgrim dinner. Lord Derby explained that the committee, looking for a precedent for her invitation, had discovered women were among those aboard the Mayflower.

The First Lady Is 50 Today; White House Bakes a Cake

Life begins at 50 today for Anna Eleanor Roosevelt.

The tall, gracious First Lady, whose vigorous travels rival those of her husband himself, will pause briefly at the White House tea table to celebrate it with her family.

There will be a birthday cake, but chiefly because the children want it. For herself, Mrs. Roosevelt thinks "the more you forget your birthdays as you grow older, the younger you stay."

Overruled on this point, she relented and planned a small family party at tea time this afternoon. Birthday parties—and cakes—are too old a tradition with the Roosevelt family to be abandoned.

Besides the President and perhaps a friend or two, as many of her five children as are able to return to the White House will be present as well as two of her grandchildren—Sistie and Buzzie Dall.

It will be the fourth birthday celebration in as many weeks. While at Hyde Park, the Roosevelts observed the eightieth anniversary of the President's mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, and the birthdays of two sons, Elliott and Franklin, jr.

At 50, Mrs. Roosevelt is far too busy to take more than passing notice of another milestone. Few of her friends can keep pace with her crowded days; none with her whirlwind dashes out of town.

There was little likelihood that another birthday would disrupt her daily schedule of countless conferences, meetings and speeches, to say nothing of a voluminous correspondence.

On a typical day, she rises about 7, swims in the White House pool or exercises before breakfast. Then in conference with her secretary, Mrs. Malvina Scheider, she goes over her mail and engagements.

There are committee meetings to attend, luncheons, receptions and dinners to arrange. Frequently she accepts evening invitations, calling for speeches before local or National audiences.

Many week-ends she spends out of town at Hyde Park, New York, or other places that hold her interest. Saturday she will go to Reedsville, W. Va., to visit the subsistence homestead she has long championed.

Gloria 'Poor Orphan,' Grandmother Asserts

Mrs. Vanderbilt Lacked Any Instincts of Maternal Affection, Mrs. Morgan Testifies; Judge May Talk With Child.

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—Ten-year-old Gloria Vanderbilt, heiress to millions, was treated "substantially" like a "poor orphan" by her mother, it was charged today in testimony during Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt's court fight for custody of her child.

Mrs. Laura Kilpatrick Morgan, mother of Mrs. Vanderbilt and grandmother of little Gloria, made the statement behind the closed doors of the courtroom where the action is being tried, with public and press excluded.

Supreme Court Justice F. Carew, summarizing testimony at the close of the session, said Mrs. Morgan had given "substantially" the same testimony she gave in an affidavit in which she described Gloria's treatment by her mother as that of a "poor orphan."

"Mrs. Morgan testified in general terms that the child's mother was lacking in maternal affection and instincts," he said.

The justice disclosed that he may see and talk to Gloria, to help him determine whether the girl would be better cared for by her mother or her aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, who now has her in charge.

Mrs. Whitney's attorneys want him to question the child, he said, whereas Mrs. Vanderbilt's attorneys have emphasized that a child of that age is "very susceptible to surrounding influences."

If he does talk to Gloria, Justice Carew said he preferred to do it in the presence of everyone concerned.

A report that the case, which has aligned mother against daughter and brought accusations against the character of Mrs. Vanderbilt, had been settled out of court was denied today by attorneys for both sides and the justice as well.

Mrs. Morgan wept several times during the day, saying she loved her daughters. Justice Carew said Mrs. Vanderbilt, too, "showed emotion" as she heard her mother attack her own maternal fitness.

Asked whether Mrs. Morgan corroborated the testimony of Emma Keislich, Gloria's nurse, about the two women looking through a crack in the door and seeing Prince Hohenloe in Mrs. Vanderbilt's bedroom, he replied:

"Her testimony was of such a nature that the law says it may be taken in private."

Prominent Virginian Accused Of Feeding Arsenic to Wife

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 10 (Spl.). Edward P. Bell, 60, prominent Fredericksburg business man, was free on $5,000 bail tonight following his arrest this afternoon on a warrant charging him with attempting to poison his wife, Mrs. Madge W. Bell, an invalid.

Bell was arrested by City Sergt. J. Conway Chichester on a warrant that charged the former with "felonious and malicious attempts to poison one Madge Bell with arsenic." Repeatedly asserting his innocence, Bell was taken to police headquarters, where Police Justice Henry Dannehl released the accused under bond with the latter's brother, W. A. Bell, as surety.

Physicians and nurses who examined Mrs. Bell said that the poison had been mixed with food and medicine, police reported. Her condition tonight, however, was described as being not serious.

The popularity of the family involved in the case apparently had made itself shown tonight by reason of a statement made by Commonwealth's Attorney B. F. Cole that he was withdrawing from the case due to personal feelings. Commonwealth's Attorney Albert V. Bryant, of Alexandria, will represent the State in the case, it was reported.

Questioned tonight regarding circumstances which opened the investigation into the alleged poisoning of Mrs. Bell's food and the subsequent arrest of her husband, officers refused to confirm or deny a report that Bell's son, Edward C. Bell, jr., 23, a student at the University of Virginia, had analyzed his mother's food and found traces of arsenic. Examination of the food was unofficially reported to have taken place after the son became worried over "sinking spells" which Mrs. Bell suffered.

The Bell family has for generations been prominent in Fredericksburg. Mr. Bell is a civic leader and a member of the board of deacons of the Baptist Church here.

The withdrawal of Commonwealth's Attorney Cole from the case was explained tonight as being due to the fact that his brother, Dr. John E. Cole, was one of Mrs. Bell's attending physicians.

Police Press Trail Of Child's Slayer

Chicago, Oct. 10 (AP).—Chicago and Detroit police tonight were hot on the trail of a man they believed to be Merton W. Goodrich, alleged slayer of 11-year-old Lillian Gallaher in the Michigan city.

Dr. William R. Pattis, a South Side physician, said that on September 27 he informed police he had treated, the night before, a man who resembled Goodrich. Lillian's body was found in a trunk in a Detroit apartment September 26.

He said the man confided he was nervous and needed a tonic. The next day, the doctor said, he saw a picture of Goodrich in a Chicago newspaper. He said his patient had given the name of J. J. Gagnier.

New Deal Unit Now Protects Building Loans

Insurance Corporation Gives Approval to 37 Associations.

By Robert C. Albright.

Promising an insurance blanket for millions of investors in building and loan associations representing savings of some $8,000,000,000, another New Deal agency moved into practical operation yesterday.

Applications from only 37 Federal chartered savings and loan associations having $1,200,000 of insurable capital were approved by the new Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation in yesterday's modest launching.

But eventually between 6,000 and 7,000 of the home financing institutions will be brought under the insurance screen—up to $5,000 for each investor—Chairman John H. Fahey, of the Federal Home Loan Bank board, told newspapermen.

Rules and regulations rigidly fixing requirements for the Government-operated insurance system were promulgated by Federal trustees, as Fahey called reporters into his office and explained the operation of the program.

Closely paralleling the protective screen laid down by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, covering small bank depositors, Fahey outlined a plan he called "liberal enough to admit to its advantages all of the solvent savings and loan associations of the country which apply for it."

Insurance Is Compulsory.

"I consider this program just as important in its way as the bank deposit insurance plan," Fahey said. "Savings of tens of millions of wage earners' funds invested in approved building and loan institutions will ultimately be protected."

Under the Federal housing act, insurance is compulsory for all Federal savings and loan associations numbering some 550 in all, and optional for State-chartered institutions of the building and loan type. The Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation experts estimate about 7,000 institutions of the latter type will be found eligible for coverage.

"What will happen to associations found ineligible?" the white-bearded HOLC chairman was asked.

"Where they can not qualify, I suppose they will have to find means of merging, consolidating or straightening out their affairs," replied Fahey. "They would be pushed to that anyway. Our regulations are not drastic or arbitrary, and we haven't set up any qualifications that should not apply."

Questioned about reports that many of the stronger institutions of the optionally insurable type will not apply, Fahey said that was "like saying that a man in good health does not need life insurance."

He said he could see how executives of many institutions might hesitate to apply for insurance requiring a premium of ¼ of 1 per cent of their total accounts and creditor obligations. In the end, however, he declared "the wishes of their own 8,000,000 shareholders and depositors would determine whether institutions of the optionally insurable type would apply for such insurance."

Insurance Chief Factor.

He said a recent independent survey indicated that nine out of ten people prefer to have their savings insured and to accept a slightly lower dividend return.

The chairman branded as "dangerously misleading" statements that since the insurance of any institution can be canceled by the Government at any time, investors might thereby be deprived of their insurance protection.

He said any such cancellation could be ordered only upon actual violation of the law or regulations. Where insurance of such institutions is terminated by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, the accounts of investors would continue to be insured for five years after the cancellation. In these cases, the institutions would be compelled by law to pay insurance premiums for the full five-year period.

Regulations issued by the board of trustees place no restriction on interest rates paid by building and loan institutions. They lay a major emphasis, however, on "soundness" of financial policies and management, require a Federal insurance reserve account to which institutions would credit one-half of 1 per cent of insured accounts for the purpose of absorbing losses, and recommend a model set of lending practices.

"We believe that the broad benefits of such insurance will be many," states the foreword to the regulations. "Maintaining and increasing the confidence of the investing public is, of course, the greatest benefit to be expected. Further, this union of sound associations into one solid aggressive group should advance the cause of thrift and home-financing institutions in the country."

Although there were 10,000 to 11,000 building and loan associations in the country, Fahey said he doubted if more than 6,000 or 7,000 could qualify under the corporation's regulations.

3 Missionaries Lost; Captured by Chinese

Chungking, Szechman Province, China, Oct. 11 (Thursday) (AP).—The Chungking office of the China Inland Mission announced failure today in attempts to locate three foreign missionaries, including Miss Grace Emblen, a British subject formerly resident in the United States, who were captured by outlaws Tuesday.

The fate and the whereabouts of the missionaries remained a mystery. Their captors have not yet demanded ransom. The three missionaries were captured while returning from a conference at Kweichow.

Between You and Me

Danger Seen Ahead for Democrats in Now-Conceded November Landslide.

By Raymond Clapper

THERE is a little disposition—but not much—to question Sunny Jim Farley's prediction that after the coming election the Republican party will find itself at the lowest ebb in Congress since the Civil War.

True, the Big Dealer is apt to give the New Deal the benefit of the doubt. But the Democrats keep an uncannily accurate set of figures. When Farley makes a forecast—this one leaked out prematurely—everyone in Washington knows he is talking from data prepared by Emil Hurja, the party's statistical wizard, whose preelection predictions have made the Literary Digest polls almost unnecessary. Of course, Gen. Farley might put in a little padding, but less than is customary in preelection claims. Democrats don't need to stretch their claims this year. That they will sweep the country now is pretty well taken for granted.

In fact, that is the greatest danger confronting the Administration, as some of the more sharp-eyed strategists size up the situation. It is dangerous, they realize, for two reasons:

The first reason is that on a landslide they are likely to pick up a new lunatic fringe which will come rampaging on Washington demanding inflation, debt moratoriums, a flat 30-hour week law, and the Lord only knows what. It is notorious that a big majority is harder to handle than a small, compact one in which all have to stand together.

This new lunatic fringe will include not only wild Democrats, but a number of Republicans who will be elected by proposing to out-deal the New Deal. Policies of the Republican National committee at Washington do not at all represent the pledges upon which a considerable number of Republicans actually are seeking to be elected. Easy money from Washington is demoralizing not only Democrats but Republicans.

Such Republican candidates, seeing the popularity of the Administration's heavy distribution of cash, are ready to go further. Republican candidates for Congress in Illinois are hot for AAA and are pledging themselves to oppose its repeal. Some of them are insisting that AAA red tape be cut so that benefit payments will be made more promptly. In Wisconsin, the young Republican Senatorial candidate, John B. Chapple, is advocating debt moratoriums, payment of the veterans' bonus, complete reimbursement from the Government of all depositors in closed banks, and in general conducting a campaign which has earned the lad the title of the Upton Sinclair of Wisconsin. No wonder some big business men are saying privately now that before this thing is over Mr. Roosevelt will be the conservative against a real left-winger.

That is only part of the danger. The other part of it is that in the excitement of victory the Administration may misconstrue its meaning. Some of the more cautious figures in the Administration are already sounding warnings.

"The victory which we expect must not be taken as a license," one of them said yesterday. "It will be a vote of confidence. That is, a mandate for the President to use his best judgment."

Democratic victory, in other words, will not mean a command from the country to continue with everything that has been started. It will be an order for Mr. Roosevelt to do whatever he thinks best, whether it means scrapping one policy or enlarging upon another.

The assassin who killed King Alexander and Foreign Minister Barthou could not have operated as he did had the methods of the United States Secret Service been used. The royal automobile was guarded by troopers who rode alongside. The assassin swung one horse around and darted through to the car. He had a clear path to fire point blank before the trooper could get his horse headed around within striking distance.

American operatives work on foot. In a parade they group themselves around the automobile. Several stand on the running board. Others walk around the car while it moves slowly and crowd into a fast car of their own a few feet to the rear when the procession speeds up. They form a human screen and are in position to leap on an assailant approaching from any direction.

A. F. of L. Hears 3-Ply Assault On NRA Rule

Woll Fears Enslavement of Labor Under Collective Bargaining Clause.

San Francisco, Oct. 10 (AP).—A three-pointed attack on the NRA as it applies to workers was launched before the American Federation of Labor convention here today.

Robert J. Watt, a Massachusetts delegate, charged the collective bargaining clause of the recovery act had been "used against the workers themselves." He asserted employers, including Henry Ford, had been permitted to interpret the act as they pleased.

Matthew Woll, of New York, a federation vice president, said the recovery act virtually required employers to organize among themselves, but said there was no comparable requirement that labor would join in a majority movement for its own benefit.

Fears "Enslavement."

Labor, said Woll, must obtain the same right to organize as capital "or labor will be enslaved under the NRA instead of made free."

Decisions of the National Labor Relations Board were criticized by Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union.

"If we are to have a vital application of the NRA to the right of organized labor unions to bargain with employers," said Howard "the Federation will have to get proper interpretation of the recovery act."

After hearing the criticisms, the convention adopted its executive council's report on unemployment, which placed the total number of unemployed at about 10,000,000.

Before the outbreak of NRA criticism, the convention approved the council's recommendations favoring changes in the recovery set-up to strengthen the hand of labor.

An incipient clash over a remark on the floor yesterday that "rubbish" had come into certain labor organizations during the last year was sidetracked by the rise of NRA criticism.

During a jurisdictional argument yesterday between the Brewery Workers and the International Teamsters Union, Daniel J. Tobin, of Indianapolis, president of the latter organization, said:

"Our organization is made up of staunch unionists. We have none of the rubbish that has come into other organizations during the last year."

Gorman Voices Objection.

Francis J. Gorman, a leader of the recent textile strike, asked the convention to expunge from its record the Tobin remark.

Tobin was not present at the time and Federation President William Green asked Gorman not to press his case until the teamster executive could reach the floor.

Green then addressed the convention, saying:

"Every one of these workers from mass production industries is welcome to the ranks of the federation.

"I lack comprehension of the aims and ideals of the American Federation of Labor if I fail to state it is the purpose of our organization to extend a hearty welcome to every man and woman in America who works for wages."

Green's remarks were cheered.

TVA Declines To Take Orders Issued by State

Power Chairman Declares Body Will Not Submit 'Voluntarily.'

Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 10 (AP).—Testifying at a hearing marked by sharp clashes between attorneys and witnesses, David E. Lilienthal, power director of the Tennessee Valley Authority, expressed the opinion today that provisions of the Constitution will prevent the TVA from "voluntarily" accepting regulation by State agencies.

While saying that "I dislike to be asked to commit my board (of directors) on questions that have not arisen yet," Lilienthal told the State railroad and public utilities commission that "my recommendation to the board would be that we can not under the Constitution voluntarily subject ourselves" to State regulatory action.

The hearing, which involves the sale of Tennessees Public Service Co. properties at and near Knoxville to the TVA for $6,191,000, was interrupted frequently by objections of TVA counsel to questions advanced by Fordney Johnston, Birmingham, of counsel for petitioners protesting the transaction. Objections have been filed by two TPS preferred stockholders and a group of Tennessee ice and coal companies.

Johnston demanded detailed information regarding the TVA program generally after Lilienthal had testified that acquisition of the TPS holdings was a part of the "yardstick program" under which Knoxville and other municipalities are to receive TVA power.

Lilienthal and Johnston engaged in a sharply worded exchange when the attorney produced a copy of a letter from the TVA to the Alabama Public Service Commission stating that the Authority would not submit to the commission's jurisdiction. The power director demanded to know how Johnston obtained the communication, and Johnston termed the question "an impertinent inquiry."

James L. Fly, general TVA solicitor, rose to protest, but Chairman Harvey H. Hannah, of the commission, rapped his gavel for order and Commissioner W. H. Turner instructed Johnston to proceed with his questioning.

Gandhi's Woman Aid Comes Here to Lecture

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—Madeline Slade, former English society girl who nine years ago became "Mirabai," chief woman lieutenant of Mahatma Gandhi, arrived today to "give Americans a clear conception of Gandhi." She traveled third class in the Majestic, and said she regretted having been unable to use even more humble accommodations.

Miss Slade said she came on the invitation of the Rev. John Haynes Holmes, chairman of the American League for India's Freedom, for a lecture series "to do her best to give Americans a clear conception of Gandhi and what he stands for."

150 Railroads Renew Attacks On Pension Act

Is Social Experiment at Their Expense, They Tell Court Here.

A second attack on the constitutionality of the railroad retirement act was launched in the District Supreme Court yesterday by a group of approximately 150 of the country's leading carriers.

In a prior attack on the act, which the railroads say will cost them $60,000,000 a year for the first five years, with gradually increasing costs in the following years, Justice F. D. Letts held that because of the small amount of money that would be assessed against the individual carriers, there was not a sufficient showing of "irreparable" injury to entitle them to a preliminary injunction.

Plea Is Renewed.

The carriers renewed their plea before Chief Justice A. A. Wheat in the District Supreme Court yesterday. This time they are seeking a temporary injunction which would have the effect of forestalling payment into the United States Treasury of the amount of money each carrier is to be called upon to pay to insure payment of old age pensions to their employes.

Chief among the contentions of the carriers was their charge that 20 per cent of their employes who are covered by the "social legislation" are white-collar workers who are not engaged in interstate commerce work and are not therefore subject to National legislation.

On the other hand, Hammond Chaffetz, special assistant to the Attorney General, said that it was within the powers of Congress to regulate the railroads in the manner in which their employes should be pensioned because the retirement of employes was within the "public interest." He said that because of the effect upon interstate commerce, it was necessary to regulate the pay of retired employes.

The carriers contend some 200,000 or 300,000 "white-collar" workers will be affected by the act and will be made subject to automatic retirement because of the act's provisions, although they are not in any sense "interstate" employes.

Hearing in Early Stages.

While the hearing, which reached only the early stages yesterday, is on a technical "preliminary" injunction, attorneys for the Government and for the rails asked Chief Justice Wheat to consider the case as a request for a final ruling on the motion to enjoin the retirement board from enforcing the payment of money, or to bar it from assessing heavy penalties because of the failure to pay the retirement funds into the Treasury.

The carriers pointed out that a number of railroads were not in the hands of receivers, and that a great percentage of them were failing to earn interest and carrying charges. To saddle them with additional heavy costs now, they contended, would be to cause them to run deeper into "the red."

The railroad retirement act is the first major social legislative act of the present Administration. It was described as "an experiment" at the cost of the carriers in their complaint.

Eastman Predicts Gains for Railways

Insists All Transportation Must Be Coordinated.

Chicago, Oct. 10 (AP).—Joseph B. Eastman again advocated public regulation of all forms of transportation today and envisaged a great increase in the business of agencies in that field.

The Federal coordinator of transportation set forth his views in addresses before the Chicago Association of Commerce and the American Life Insurance convention.

"Public regulation is needed for the welfare of industry itself, to promote order and stability, prevent exploitation and curb destructive competition and waste," he declared. This supervision should be coordinated under a single head, he pointed out.

"Public regulation of all forms of transporation can not be imposed for the benefit of railroads alone," he added. "You may dismiss from your minds any thought that public regulation will remove highway or water or air competitors from the railroad path. Those forms of transporation meet public needs which otherwise would not be met and are here to stay."

Cubans in Key West Remember the Maine

Key West, Fla., Oct. 10 (AP).—Key West paused today in its fiesta observance of "El Grito de Yara" to remember the Maine.

Cuban and United State officials, visitors and citizens of Key West went in solemn procession to that iron-fenced plat where 24 victims of the Maine disaster are buried. The cry of Yara—"El Grito de Yara"—was "Cuba Libre" shouted by those patriots, headed by Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, later president, who shouldered arms for freedom in the tiny town of Yara 66 years ago today.

Kay Francis, Back, Denies She'll Wed 'Bill or Maurice'

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—The liner Rex came to port today with two of its fairest passengers busily engaged in denying rumors of engagement.

First it was Kay Francis of the movies. Even the rumors were a bit mixed as to Miss Francis. One report said she was engaged to William Powell; the other had it Maurice Chevalier.

"Poor Bill, after all these years," was Miss Francis' disposition of the Powell report. "We've made six pictures together and now we're engaged. I can only deny it."

And as for the gay Maurice, she said:

"I've no intention of marrying again as long as I am in the pictures. Maybe I will when I get old and doddering."

Eileen Gillespie—the Park avenue girl whose broken engagement to young John Jacob Astor a year ago was publicised—was the other fair passenger who replied to inquiries with a denial or two.

Tree Belt Left Up to Congress

Forestry Head Claims McCarl Ruling Will Delay Funds.

(Associated Press.)

The proposed 1,000-mile tree belt across the Midwestern plains won't be built unless Congress says the word.

F. A. Silcox, head of the Forest Service, said yesterday a recent ruling by Comptroller General McCarl had caused the decision to put the project up to Congress.

Approximately $15,000,000 had been alloted for work on the shelter belt, which would stretch from the Canadian border to the Texas Panhandle to alleviate drought and soil erosion, but McCarl held that only $1,000,000 could be allocated for the trees.

He said the $15,000,000 was from the $525,000,000 drought relief fund and that expenditure of more than a nominal sum would be contrary in spirit to the act of Congress which authorized the entire fund, and that expenditure of $15,000,000 would virtually obligate the Government to proceed with the work.

From the $1,000,000, however, preliminary work is going forward.

Administrative offices for the project have been opened at Lincoln, Nebr. Research is being carried on at the Lakes States Forest Experiment Station at St. Paul, and other problems are being studied.

"But," Silcox explained, "the work is of an exploratory nature and will be valuable even if Congress refuses authorization."

Farm Checks Not for Votes, Davis Declares

Benefit Cash to Go Out as Quickly as Possible, He Asserts.

Recent heavy distribution of benefit checks to farmers participating in Federal crop reduction programs was unrelated to the November elections, Chester Davis, farm administrator, declared yesterday.

"These payments," he said, "have gone out as rapidly as the contracts could be put through, without regard to elections or anything else. We have no intention or desire to hold them up."

Asked whether he believed the checks would influence farmers to vote for Democratic candidates, Davis responded:

"Increasing farm income always has some effect. It is evidence that the administration is doing something positive on farm progress.

"We don't regard these payments as subsidities at all. The consumer pays the processing tax and the processing tax is just as much a part of the farmer's income as the market price."

He reported processing tax collections totaled $505,000,000 as of October 6, while disbursements in rental and benefit payments totaled only $406,000,000.

"You must remember," Davis added, "that there was an unusually heavy volume of benefit payments at this time last year when no elections were approaching."

The administrator predicted benefit payments between now and January 1, would total $282,000,000. He said he did not know how much of that sum would be distributed before the elections.

An additional $7,000,000 he revealed, has been allotted for purchase of some 500,000 to 600,000 head of cattle in the drought area. A large amount of the money is expected to be spent in Texas, although he did not designate the States involved.

Davis announced incomplete returns from the recent farm referendum indicated "a substantial majority of farmers" desired continuation of the corn-hog control program.

Stock Juggling By Insull Firm Is Told at Trial

Effort to Omit Writeoff From Statement of Concern Aired.

Chicago, Oct. 10 (AP).—The story of efforts to omit a $34,954,153 writeoff from the statements of Corporation Securities Co. of Chicago was unfolded today in the mail fraud trial of Samuel Insull and 16 codefendants.

A letter inquiring into the legal justification for the omission was added to the heap of the prosecution's evidence while Van Lamont, former comptroller of Halsey, Stuart & Co., occupied the witness stand.

Lamont also related that stock purchased by the concern Insull had founded immediately prior to the financial debacle of 1929 at a cost of $3,500,000 was written up on the books at a value of $15,000,420, and that stock bought at $13,000,000 was written up to a value of $30,000,000.

Lamont Testifies.

Further questioning by Government attorneys elicited testimony from Lamont that while the corporation was selling its allotment certificates to the public at $75, it was buying them on the open market at $100.

The heavy write-off was made on the company's inventory preliminary to the filing of its statement with the Chicago Stock Exchange in the fall of 1929. Lamont brought out the corporation's desire to avoid embarrassing reference to it in identifying a letter written by Clarence T. Macneille, a defendant and secretary of Halsey, Stuart & Co., to W. J. Parker, of the law firm of Schuyler, Weinfield & Hennessy, in January of 1930.

In the letter, the admission of which was not protested by the defense, Macneille reminded Parker that the latter had advised that in all statements of the corporation securities company the write-off should be mentioned.

"This procedure," the letter said, "while undoubtedly being proper from a legal standpoint, means continually bringing up a sore spot and constantly keeping before our stockholders and the public a matter which it seems to us should be disposed of and forgotten once it has been explained.

"This was certainly our intention when making the write-off, and we hoped that we would be able to start off fresh as of our adjusted balance sheet on November 15, 1929, and forget the past, so to speak.

"The matter comes up at this time in connection with its treatment of our annual report to our stockholders, and if there is any possible way by which we can refer to the matter in this report, and then forget for all time so far as to mention it in our annual statement is concerned, we would like to do it."

Oil Baron's Wife Held by Kidnaper

declared to her, 'If Berry comes in, I'll kill him.'"

Mrs. Willett, the maid, whose husband is caretaker for the Stoll estate, was on the verge of hysteria when police and reporters arrived. She said the kidnaper gained entrance to the home by pretending he had come there to repair the telephone.

"He hadn't been in the house but a minute before he drew a pistol and pointed it at Mrs. Stoll and me," she added. "The first thing he did was to tie me in a chair and stick a gag in my mouth. Then he beat Mrs. Stoll and made off with her to his car."

The maid told investigators Mrs. Stoll was bleeding as she was dragged out of the house.

Police Hunt Employe.

Willett, a caretaker, was away from the home at the time. A Great Dane dog owned by the Stolls apparently gave the kidnaper no trouble. Police started looking for a colored employe on the estate, who usually leaves at about the time the kidnaping occurred. It was thought he might be able to provide some clews.

James Clark, who lives near the Stoll home, told reporters he saw a large sedan bearing four men in a lane near the Stoll estate shortly after 3 o'clock in the afternoon. One of the men asked them for directions to the Wilcox home, which is nearby.

Telephone wires in the Stoll home were cut by the kidnaper, but the connection had been reestablished tonight and the wire was being kept clear for a possible call from the abductor.

Mayor Neville Miller and Director of Safety Dunlap Wakefield were among the officials who went to the scene.

In addition to asking publication of his announcement to the kidnaper, Mr. Stoll had the same words broadcast over radio stations.

Within a short while after the kidnaping, city and county police had thrown out a dragnet and blockade over the country. Federal agents joined the case. All were seeking a Ford V-8 coupe. Mrs. Stoll was dressed in a negligee and over it she wore a blue and white checkered coat. Police bulletins gave instructions to all officers to be on the lookout for the car containing a brunette of slender build, probably smeared on the face and shoulders with blood.

Floyd Accused in Massacre of Five

Richetti, Miller Named as Aids in Slayings at Kansas City.

(Associated Press.)

Three outlaws, all with records as killers, were named by the Federal Government yesterday as men who dealt machine-gun deaths to four officers and their prisoner in Kansas City, June 17, 1933, and investigation was pursued last night into a possible connection with the recent ambush slaying of John Lazia, a Kansas City political leader.

Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd, Oklahoma desperado, his confederate, Adam Richetti—both fugitives—and Verne C. Miller, who since has been killed near Detroit by gangsters, were accused of slaying the officers during an attempt to rescue the prisoner, Frank Nash, in front of the Kansas City Union Station.

James La Capra, a small-time gangster, who is held for protection in a death cell of the Jackson County (Mo.) jail after gangsters twice failed recently to kill him, supplied the Government with startling information.

The Kansas City Star says La Capra named Lazia, for long a right-hand man in Kansas City's Democratic organization, as the man who arranged a meeting of Miller, Floyd and Richetti in that city the night before the station slayings.

Tells of Outlaws' Escape.

The newspaper also says that Lazia men aided Floyd and Richetti in escaping from Kansas City after they had fled the Union Station for a stay of 24 hours in a local hideout.

La Capra was an enemy of Lazia, reputedly because of being denied a larger share in the profits of certain "rackets."

"Although Federal agents have weighed the prisoner's enmity with the Lazia group, they have investigated a part of his information and discovered it tallies with evidence they have obtained," the newspaper says.

The Government in its announcement yesterday named 12 other persons as involved in the station slayings through conspiracy.

The quintuple slaying resulted from an attempt to free Frank Nash, an escaped Federal prisoner who was being returned to the Federal Prison at Leaventworth, Kans., after he was captured at Hot Springs, Ark.

As the officers placed Nash in an automobile outside the union station, about 7 a. m., for the last lap of their journey, a shout rang out:

"Let 'em have it."

The blasts of machine-gun fire followed immediately.

Otto Reed, chief of police of McAlester, Okla.; William J. Grooms and Frank E. Harmanson, Kansas City detectives, and Nash were killed instantly. Raymond J. Caffery, Department of Justice agent, received wounds from which he died shortly after being taken to the hospital.

R. E. Vetterli, at that time agent in charge of the Kansas City office of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice and F. J. Lackey, another agent, were wounded.

A minute later the killers sped away in a motorcar.

Officials theorized Nash had been slain accidentally by his friends because he was sitting in the front seat of the car, whereas they had expected he would be in the rear seat. An officer in the rear seat was injured.

Man Hunt Is Revealed.

Tracing the intensive investigation it launched immediately after the slayings, the Department of Justice said it had learned Miller, who was a close associate of Nash, had enlisted the aid of Floyd and Richetti in the attempt to free the prisoner.

Richard Talman Galatas and his wife, Elizabeth, who were arrested in New Orleans September 22, were brought to Kansas City yesterday for arraignment on conspiracy charges growing out of the killings.

Mrs. Galatas pleaded not guilty when charged with conspiracy to defeat the ends of justice, and her bond was set at $25,000. Galatas was not formally arraigned, as he has been indicted by a Federal grand jury. No bond was fixed for him when he said he preferred to remain in jail.

William Stanley, Assistant Attorney General, said investigation had shown it was Galatas who informed Mrs. Nash her husband had been arrested at Hot Springs.

Mrs. Nash then communicated with "Doc" Louis Stacci, proprietor of a roadhouse at Melrose Park, Chicago, Stanley said. Galatas accompanied Mrs. Nash to the home of Herb and Esther Farmer, at Joplin, Mo., where last-minute telephonic instructions were given Miller for the attempt to free Nash, the Assistant Attorney General said.

The 15 persons named by Maurice M. Milligan, United States district attorney in Kansas City, are implicated in the case, are Floyd, Richetti, Miller, Harvey Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. Farmer, Mrs. Nash Stacci, Mr. and Mrs. Galatas, Hobert C. Brady, Mrs. Louis Conner, Hot Springs, Ark.; Frank Mulloy, Kansas City; Wilbur Underhill and Mrs. Vivian Miller, wife of the slain killer.

Underhill was slain some months ago in Shawnee, Okla. Brady was killed early this year near Paolo, Kans., as he fled from the Kansas State Prison with several other convicts. Bailey, one of the kidnapers of Charles F. Urschel, Oklahoma oil millionaire, is imprisoned in Alcatraz Prison, in California.

Streamline Train To Smash Record

62-Hour Run Across U. S. Set for This Month.

Denver, Oct. 10 (AP).—A dart-like six-car stream-line passenger train will travel from Los Angeles to New York this month on a schedule of 62 hours, 24 hours under regular schedules, and 12 hours under the transcontinental railroad record.

Plans for a record-breaking run were disclosed by the Union Pacific Railroad here today as the train, recently completed, was undergoing tests on the main line west of Cheyenne, Wyo.

Officials emphasized the trip will not be to break records. At the same time they pointed out the schedule is far under present railroad records set by Walter Scott—"Death Valley Scotty"—and the late E. H. Harriman, railroad president.

"Death Valley Scotty" made a record trip in 1905 in a chartered train between Los Angeles and Chicago in 44 hours and 53 minutes. Harriman dashed from New York to San Francisco in 71 hours, 27 minutes at the time of the San Francisco earthquake in 1906.

Navy Men to Look Morro Castle Over

Will Decide if Salvaging Is Worth While.

In an attempt to ascertain whether the charred hulk of the Morro Castle would be of any value to the Navy, a special board of inspection will board the burned Ward liner at Asbury Park, N. J., in the near future, it was announced yesterday by Secretary Swanson.

Rear Admiral George C. Day, U. S. N., will head the group that will look over the hull and the machinery to determine if the value warrants salvaging operations.

Admiral Day will be assisted by Commander Hugh L. White, U. S. N., of the Bureau of Engineering, and Lieut. Comdr. Howard L. Vickery, Construction Corps, U. S. N. The Navy is undertaking the survey at the request of the Department of Commerce.

Jersey Given Hauptmann for Murder Trial

Lehman Orders Removal; Defense to Make Court Battle.

March 1, 1932; that Baby Lindbergh was killed in the perpetration of abduction.

He did not ask for a hearing before the Governor on the extradition request.

"I prefer to carry the case directly to the courts," he said.

Transfer Held Up.

Although Capt. John J. Lamb, of the New Jersey State Police, commissioned by Gov. Moore to take charge of Hauptmann's removal from the Bronx Jail across the Hudson, was on hand, there apparently was no chance that the prisoner would be removed tonight.

If a habeas corpus writ is granted to Fawcett tomorrow, Hauptmann would have to be brought into the jurisdiction of the New York court pending the hearing.

Gov. Lehman affixed his signature to the extradition papers at 5:04 p. m. He handed the papers to Joseph Canavan, his secretary, saying merely:

"I have signed them."

Canavan gave the papers to Corsgadden. The aid left the executive mansion at once to catch a train for New York.

In Flemington, N. J., county seat of Hunterdon County, the trial denouement of one of the most sensational crimes in history will be held if extradition is carried through.

Shortly after the extradition request was granted at Albany, District Attorney Samuel Foley of the Bronx said he would go into Bronx County Court tomorrow and ask for a week's postponement of the trial of the charges that Hauptmann extorted $50,000 ransom from Col. Lindbergh, even though the flier's son was already dead.

His statement was interprtted to mean that Jersey officials had anticipated a court test of the extradition and that, if the transfer is held up longer than a week, Foley would proceed with the extortion trial.

Hauptmann Weeps on Wedding Anniversary

New York, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—Bruno Hauptmann burst into tears today when his wife visited his jail cell and reminded him that this was their ninth wedding anniversary.

Settlement House To Open Sunday

Northwest Settlement House, new agency of the Community Chest and a member of the Council of Social Agencies, will open its doors for the first time Sunday from 5 p. m. until 8 p. m., the board of directors announced yesterday.

The affair will be open to the public. Regular activities of the house will begin Monday.

The project is the result of joint efforts of Interracial Committee of the Council of Social Agencies, the Tuesday Evening Club and the Finance committee, of which Clarence Phelps Dodge is chairman.

Located at 515 M street northwest, in the heart of a congested neighborhood of 72 square blocks with an approximate population of 25,580 Negroes, Northwest Settlement House is expected to provide excellent opportunities for recreation.

U. S. Drops Its Part In Lindbergh Search

Friction With New Jersey Police Indicated; Agents Withdraw After Most of Ransom Is Linked to Hauptmann.

The Department of Justice last night concluded its far-flung investigation of the Lindbergh kidnaping case with a formal announcement that $46,681 of the $50,000 ransom had been linked to Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

A statement that the Justice Department was withdrawing from the case in view of the indictment of Hauptmann in New York and New Jersey immediately gave rise to speculation that the search for an accomplice of the German alien has been abandoned.

Significance also was attached to the fact that the Justice Department's announcement was coincident with the agreement of New York authorities to turn Hauptmann over to New Jersey for trial on a murder charge, thereby postponing the extortion trial in the Bronx.

Many Federal officials were understood to feel that the suspect should have been tried first in New York, declaring an air-tight case of extortion had been built up against him, whereas the murder case is more circumstantial.

Officials declined to amplify the formal statement in this respect but suggested newspaper men might "draw your own conclusions."

The Justice Department's investigation revealed that since the payment of the ransom on April 2, 1932, Hauptmann, either in his name or that of other persons, deposited in banks and brokerage accounts a total of $26,016 in cash.

The investigation further disclosed that Hauptmann maintained in his name, or the name of his wife, accounts in two brokerage firms and made deposits in three separate banking institutions.

Justice agents were unable to establish definitely that the cash deposited was the Lindbergh money, but are reasonably convinced that Hauptmann, a carpenter out of a job, had no other known source for such a large amount of money.

The discovery of the brokerage accounts becomes more significant when linked with previous findings.

Chronologically, these findings are:

Prior to Hauptmann's arrest, $5,095 of the known Lindbergh money turned up in circulation, most of it in the Bronx, where Hauptmann lived.

Subsequent to Hauptmann's arrest, a total of $14,600 has been found hidden in his garage.

When arrested, the suspected kidnaper had a $20 ransom bill in his pocket.

Some $950 in expenditures by Hauptmann through the purchase of a radio set, field glasses, silverware and in the payment of bills have been accounted for. The rest of the ransom accounted for had been found in and near the Bronx, leading to the belief the suspect had placed it in circulation.

Justice officials have been divided in opinion since Hauptmann's arrest as to whether he had an accomplice in the crime of two and a half years ago.

An associate close to the attorney general several times has expressed the opinion that the intitial arrest practically solved the case.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the division of investigation, however, has intimated several times that new arrests would be forthcoming.

For the last fortnight, however, reports of suspected accomplices have dwindled and authorities appear to have concentrated their efforts on the task of making an airtight case against the one captive.

No U. S. Prosecution.

In withdrawing from the case, the Justice Department cited the two indictments and pointed out that no Federal indictment is being sought.

"Any information in the possession of the Department of Justice desired by either the New York or New Jersey authorities will be available whenever needed," an official statement said.

"Should authorities in either of these jurisdictions have occasion to utilize the facilities of the Division of Investigation, the fullest cooperation will be accorded."

Another possible reason for the withdrawal of the Justice Department was seen in the fact that the relations between the Justice Department and the New Jersey police have been increasingly strained.

The New Jersey police, in fact, showed a resentment against the entry of the Federal agency into the investigation upon the order of President Roosevelt, after the local authorities apparently had made no progress in locating the abductor or the ransom.

Columbus Day Rite Tomorrow

Italian Groups in Capital Are Combining for the Celebration.

Italian organizations in Washington are combining to celebrate Columbus Day tomorrow. The ceremony will open at 10:30 a. m. when a delegation will lay a wreath on the Columbus statue at the Union Station Plaza.

The entire personnel of the Italian Embassy and many officials of the District and Federal governments have been invited to attend a later celebration, to be held at 8 p. m. at Central High School.

Speakers at this meeting will include Dr. Walter Davidge, president of the Italian-American Society, and Prof. Giuseppe Prezzolini, of Columbia University. Malda Fani, a lyric soprano, will be heard in operatic arias and Italian folk song.

William Amoroso, president of the Italian Federation, will preside, while Hugo A. Carusi will act as master of ceremonies. The committee which is planning the entire program is headed by Vincenzo Di Girolamo, Mr. Carusi and Michele Strizzi.

Queen to Tell Son of Death Of Alexander

entire journey was surrounded by sadness rather than pomp.

The boy came out of his school to enter a large limousine. His face seemed saddened but he tried to smile when he saw a battery of cameramen ranged in the roadway. Detectives from Scotland Yard surrounded Peter as he entered the car, accompanied by his English tutor, C. C. Parrott.

The automobile carried the new king to the Yugoslavian Legation where the atmosphere was one of rigid formality. Dignitaries swarmed over the place in top hats and frock coats, many having called to present their condolences on the death of Alexander. At noon Peter was taken to the Ritz Hotel.

Whatever they told the boy when they awakened him at the school, it was understood his first words were: "I want to be with mother." He is to join her here.

With Queen Marie holding him by the hand, Peter motored to Victoria Station, where a large crowd had collected. The crowd cheered the new monarch and Queen Marie, who was clad in black, waved in response, summoning a faint smile. She was carrying lilies of the valley.

Each onlooker and each passenger on the train was subjected to the closest scrutiny by the men from Scotland Yard. The royal car was separated from the other coaches by a baggage car.

At Dover the royal party transferred to the French Channel steamer Cote d'Azur, where six cabins had been reserved for the brief trip to Calais.

A United Press correspondent managed to reach Queen Marie's side and she said, "Peter does not know his father is dead. He thinks only that Alexander was in a serious automobile accident."

Other passengers on the train said, "The boy-king is a carefree youth who certainly doesn't know yet that his father is dead."

They said he spent his time on the Channel boat playing deck games, laughing and joking with Queen Marie and others.

new King, after a dramatic farewell aboard the vessel. The 11-year-old boy left his English school early in the morning to return home.

Two French cruisers and six destroyers escorted the Dubrovnik as it swung out into the Mediterranean. Francois Pietri, French Minister of Navy, was aboard the Colbert, one of the cruisers.

Huge throngs stood on the shore with bared heads—the same throngs that 24 hours before had roared "Vive le Roi" as Alexander came ashore.

A military band played the Yugoslav national anthem as the last rays of the sun glinted through the masts of the Dubrovnik and the hundreds of fishing boats in the harbor.

Queen Marie came ashore from the destroyer just before it sailed, after mounting to the after-deck to bend over the plain oaken coffin trimmed with silver and to kiss the dead king.

The queen stood with President Lebrun, her eyes filled with tears, and watched the funeral fleet put to sea before preparing for the trip to Paris tonight to meet Peter and her mother, the Dowager Queen Marie of Rumania.

Also en route to Paris to join her were her sister, Princess Ileana of Rumania, and the latter's husband, Archduke Anton of Hapsburg, who took off for the French capital in Anton's private plane.

Assassin's Toll Five.

The toll of the assassin reached five today with the death of Mme. Dubrec, one of 15 persons wounded. Physicians indicated confidence that Gen. Alfonse Joseph Georges, one of those most gravely hurt, would recover.

Meanwhile, authorities continued efforts to identify definitely the 35-year-old fanatic, Petrus Kalemen, of Zagreb, Yugoslavia, whose pistol-like sub-machine gun spread consternation in Marseille's festive streets yesterday before police sabers and bullets mortally wounded him.

Authorities at Aix-En-Provence learned Kalemen and a companion named Chalny had breakfast in their hotel room there yesterday morning and afterward drank considerable liquor

Kalemen read everything pertaining to Alexander's visit, the hotel proprietor said. He said he was a brother of a companion who gave the name of Egon Kramer, said he was 24 years old and declared he was born in Fiume of Croation nationality.

Marseille police described Kalemen as the man chosen by lot among Balkan terrorists to slay Alexander. A skull and crossbones was tattooed on his right arm, and printed under them in Croat letters was "Imro" or "Ymro"—the initials of the famed Macedonian revolutionary society.

Nationality Not Certain.

He wore new clothes, and police recalled that terrorists, once the fateful choice has fallen on one of their number, customarily outfit him in new clothes, knowing his mission almost certainly means death to him.

The Surete National announced it had found Kalemen's passport, ostensibly issued by the Czechoslovakian consul at Zagreb and visaed by Yugoslav authorities, was forged. Consequently his nationality had not been established definitely.

Police in Paris and other French cities began raiding residences of Yugoslavss and other Balkan suspects in an effort to determine Kalemen's affiliations in France as the shock of the assassinations threatened grave political consequences in France.

The government Alexander left in charge when he set out on his tragic journey watched for symptoms of revolt in the Croatian regions, while they made preparations for Alexander's funeral, and the nation, recalling his World War gallantry, mourned him.

Hardly secondary in importance the death of Louis Barthou, France's 72-year-old foreign minister.

His dashes about Europe to mend French political fences forever at an end, the body of the little full-bearded diplomat was en route to Paris, accompanied by former Premiers Andre Tardieu and Edouard Herriot, on a special train that left a few minutes after the queen's train.

Since his death, that might have been averted had the taxicab bearing his wounded body been able to break through traffic jams, his body had lain with Alexander's in the great, high-ceilinged, candle-lit room of the Marseille police prefecture.

The state funeral for Barthou was set for Saturday, but an ordinary "40-and-8" box car was his hearse.

The Queen was on the verge of collapse as she went to her compartment, the blinds of which were pulled down.

Streets through which the King's body started its homeward journey were silent and grief-stricken. The cortege passed by the stock exchange square, almost over the exact spot where Kalemen shouted "vive le roi" and fired the fatal shots.

The Queen, who already has suffered several heart attacks, was under the constant care of physicians. Only the imperative need of going to Paris kept her from taking to bed.

End of Revolt Splits Leftist Groups in Spain

Anarchists, Communists Blame Socialists for Uprising's Failure.

Madrid, Oct. 10 (AP).—Bitterness among the leftist groups emerged from the ashes of the revolution today as the government planned stern disciplinary measures for arrested participants.

Several Anarchist and Communist leaders manifested grave pessimism, admitting "everything seems to be over."

Although they refused a direct statement, the Communists and Anarchists were bitter against the Socialists, on whom they placed the blame for the collapse of the movement. They indicated the Socialists failed to keep their promises, saying most of the fighting was done by Communists and Anarchists. They admitted, however, the Socialists joined them in Asturias.

One significant statement was the risk "Socialists leaders are running now, not from the government but from other sources; there is danger for them from the infuriated masses who were deceived by the movement."

From the provinces there came reports of restored order definitely in sight in Catalonia, the Belearic Islands, the Canaries, Albacete, Caceres, Badajoz, Toledo, Andalusia, Valladolid, Salamanca and Old and New Casitle.

Capt. Jacques Bosch, who took command of Catalonian civil forces during the province's short-lived insurrection last week, today was condemned to life imprisonment.

A court-martial sitting at the Montjuych fortress in Barcelona passed sentence on Bosch, first of the many prisoners taken during the rebellion to appear. Trials of others were scheduled for tomorrow.

Attorney General Antonio Callardo announced that Manuel Azana, Luis Companys, President of Catalonia and other officers arrested, will be brought to Madrid to be tried before the tribunal of constitutional guarantees.

For the first time in several days Madrid was free for disconcerting interruptions and rifle fire. The best evidence of a return to normal conditions was the large attendance in the cafes. Practically no clashes were reported.

The government has not relaxed its vigilance. Last reports were that the army in Asturias continues its domination in the mining districts.

The San Sebastian government is making a determined effort to break a five-day strike, threatening workers with loss of jobs if they fail to return.

mander of the Belgrade military forces, for Prince Paul; Senator Jova Banyanin, for Dr. Stankovic, and Senator Zec, for Dr. Perovic.

The assassination was the topic of excited conversation on the streets and in the cafes of Belgrade. Rumor mongers were busy spreading reports of Italy's "responsibility" for the death of the king, but there was also high popular resentment against France, since it was reported the French authorities declined Alexander's suggestion that he be accompanied by a strong personal guard from his own entourage.

A solemn proclamation by the government, informing them of Alexander's plans for carrying on of the monarchy, allayed much of the bitterness between Serbs and Croatians. That two loyal Croatians—and both their substitutes—were named by the king as regents was regarded as a gesture which would soften the Croats toward the new

The Yugoslavian Senate and House of Deputies met in joint session tonight, and swore allegiance to King Peter 2d. After this ceremony, all government employes were summoned to a mass meeting and the oath was repeated.

Alexander's testament, written January 5, 1934, on a single blue sheet of paper, read:

"Of my own free will, and in the firm conviction that I am doing this in the best interests of my dear fatherland, the Kingdom of Yugoslavia, my faithful people and my royal house, I order, under paragraph 42 of the constitution of the Yugoslavian Kingdom, that the governing power shall be executed by his royal highness Prince Paul of Karageorgevitch, Dr. Randekp Stankovic and Dr. Ivan Perovic."

Then, after naming the three alternates, the King concluded:

"This act I have written myself and signed with my own hand, in two original copies, of which one has been given to her majesty, Queen Marie, and the other to the prime minister. These two copies are in an envelope signed with my own seal * * * Alexander Karageorgevitch, King of Yugoslavia."

Announcing the King's will, the government issued the following proclamation to the people:

"Our great King, Alexander, died on the afternoon of October 9, as the victim of a malicious plot.

"With his blood, the martyred King sealed the work of peace for which he went to our ally, France.

"According to article 36 of the constitution, the first-born son of His Majesty, King Peter the Second, has taken the throne. The royal government has sworn an oath of allegiance to King Peter.

"The government of the kingdom will execute the temporary royal power under article 45 of the constitution.

"The legislative assembly has been convoked in joint session to swear to the oath according to articles 45 and 49 of the constitution. With his last words, which he was hardly able to speak, the deceased King has left his people this legacy: 'Guard Yugoslavia!' The royal government begs the entire Yugoslavian people gravely to fulfill this solemn legacy."

The proclamation was signed by the entire cabinet.

Democrats Urge Women to Vote

Fusion Party Is Assailed in Montgomery County Pamphlet.

Montgomery County women are urged to vote the Democratic organization ticket in November in order to forward the political recognition of women, in a pamphlet issued yesterday by the Democratic Women's Club of Montgomery County, Md.

The pamphlet, a four-page affair, attacks the Fusion party for its failure to place women on its ticket. An "open letter to the women of Montgomery County" on the front page appeals to the women to "avail themselves of an opportunity at home to become an active force in the county government and at the same time forward the political recognition of women" by supporting the Democratic organization at the polls.

The pamphlet harks back to Margaret Brent in 1649 and recounts the battle of women to gain a voice in the affairs of the State until the present time. It also contains sketches of the lives and accomplishments of the five women on the Democratic ticket and short sketches of the 20 candidates.

Croats Rid of Tyrant, Says Leader in Exile

Youngstown, Ohio, Oct. 10 (AP).—Dr. Branimir Jelic, Croatian exile and representative of the Croatian national committee in the United Statets, said today the assassination of KKing Alexander of Yugoslavia "was not a murder, it was the carrying out of a sentence of death imposed by the Croatian people on Alexander the Tyrant."

"The Croatian people are glad," Dr. Jelic said. "They are asking me for instruction as to what they should do and whether they should raise funds immediately. The Croatian people have been delivered from an oppressor. They want independence and freedom."

Croat Capital Now Pacified

Alexander's Will Setting Up Regency Regarded as Bond of Peace.

(Copyright, 1934, by the United Press.)

Zagreb, Yugoslavia, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—The capital of this Croatian province, hot-bed of enmity toward the Serbians who hold the governing power over Yugoslavia, appeared tonight to be reconciled toward the new political regime growing out of the death of King Alexander I.

Alexander's gesture in naming two Croatians to the regency which will rule in the name of King Peter II, Alexander's 11-year-old son, was regarded as the most effective bond between antagonistic elements since the creation of the kingdom.

Croat leaders, meeting when the news of Alexander's death reached Zagreb, decided to cooperate with the government "as soon as the government indicates that Croats and Slovenes will be given their proper share in the government."

On the surface conditions were normal in Zagreb. Business was being conducted as usual. Bells tolled for the king at hourly intervals. From many buildings small black flags were flying.

Some Croatians claimed there was a "moral justice" in the situation, for the life of their leader, Stephen Raditch, was lost in his fight for Croatia. Now Alexander has paid with his own life for what the bitterest of anti-Sserbians call his "unjust treatment of Croatia." One leader said:

"The scales of justice are now balanced. We and the Serbs have each lost our greatest man by murder. Perhaps this will halt the regime of senseless brutality, since the Serbs must see that Croats can not be coerced."

Down the hatch!—only don't toss CALVERT off, with a glass of water ready in your other hand. Take it slowly, relish its rich flavor, its silky smoothness. Drink it straight—CALVERT has real character.

The straight whiskey used in CALVERT was aged in charred oak casks for 5 years before being blended with neutral grain spirits. Then the blend was returned to remain in the same casks, to unite or "marry." The delicate aroma and full flavor so distinctive of CALVERT result from this "Perfect Marriage."

At length, this smooth liquor is put into its distinctive decanter bottle under the proud CALVERT label—a name that for generations has stood for the finest whiskey ever produced in the State of Maryland.

You will find that CALVERT has everything to your taste—even a reasonable price.

King's Murder Laid to World Radical Band

Police Believe Assassin Was Picked by Lot After Careful Planning.

Paris, Oct. 10 (AP).—Police of Europe today sought to pick up the trail of an international revolutionary ring suspected of naming Petrus Kalemen by lot to assassinate King Alexander.

From the moment the mysterious Balkan slayer crossed the French frontier from Vallorbe, Switzerland, until he leaped upon the king's automobile at Marseille, his gun spitting bullets, his movements are being traced.

Secret operatives are working in close cooperation to piece together the story of the suspected organization.

A gang of political terrorists, as yet unidentified, undoubtedly armed Kalemen and sent him to Marseille, secret police said. The conspirators are believed to have plotted the assassination carefully, then chose by lot one of their members, whose own death was a foregone conclusion.

Events Are Reconstructed.

Here is how the police reconstruct events leading to the tragedy:

Kalemen drew the fatal assignment. The band then provided him with a false passport, giving his nationality as Czechoslovakian to avert close scrutiny by French authorities, who have been checking Yugoslavians for weeks preliminary to the King's visit.

Paris police were busy throughout the day checking up on all members of the Yugoslavian separatist movement. Leaders and refugees were rounded up in a widespread search of the city and suburbs.

Homes of many natives of Alexander's country yielded photographs and documents. Many were held for questioning. The homes of Svitozar Pribitchevitch, former Yugoslav minister of the interior, and Vladimir Raditch, son of a Yugoslav Parliament member slain in 1928 in the House of Parliament, were among those visited by the police.

Sarraut Defends Measures.

Minister of the Interior Sarraut defended his department against criticism for not adequately protecting the royal visitor. He said more expulsions had been ordered so far this year than during the entire previous year.

The police learned much of Kalemen's last movements from the proprietor of a hotel at Aux en Provence, where he stayed with two companions until shortly before the crime, and drank liquor to prepare himself for the mission of death.

Kalemen and Sylvester Chalny passed two nights at the hotel, and another man, Egon Kramer, arrived Sunday and disappeared Monday.

The proprietor said Kalemen and Chalny had breakfast in their room yesterday morning and then drank considerable liquor. Kalemen read all available newspaper reports on the King's forthcoming visit. After lunch he went to Marseille, arriving in time to await the passage of the king's car.

Two Associates Hunted.

The police believe Kalemen was accompanied by at least two associates, and entered France September 28, going first to Marseille to familiarize himself with the territory.

The gang had supplied him with weapons and several thousand francs, part of which he spent in Paris on a new suit and shoes. The police believe Kalemen was a false name. He was traced to an inexpensive hotel in Paris, where he arrived early in October. The hotel proprietor recognized him from a photograph.

Kalemen then was accompanied by two men, who gave the names of Suck and Wladislas Benes. A fourth, named Nikomir, visited them. His name was on the list of suspects furnished the French by the Yugoslavian government.

It was from Paris the men went to Aix en Provence, 18 miles from Marseille. It was believed Kalemen delayed going to Marseille until the last minute because of the large number of detectives awaiting the arrival of the King.

Denver Kidnap Figures Called

20 Summoned to Testify Against Women Held in Boettcher Case.

Denver, Oct. 10 (AP).—Indications the Government has uncovered new evidence against Mrs. Fern Sankey and her sister, Mrs. Ruth Kohler, charged with conspiracy to kidnap Charles Boettcher 2d, Denver broker, were seen today when 20 subpenas were served on Denver witnesses in the case.

The witnesses, many of whom were not called to testify at the first trial of the two women, were ordered to appear at Sioux Falls, S. Dak., October 18.

The women are in jail at Sioux Falls. They are accused of participating in the conspiracy to kidnap Boettcher, who was abducted in Denver in February, 1933, and held until March 1, when his father, Claude K. Boettcher, Denver capitalist, paid $60,000 ransom.

Among those subpenaed today were Boettcher, the kidnap victim; James Q. Newton, broker and business associate of the elder Boettcher; Joseph McGregor, chauffeur, who aided in delivering the ransom, and George H. King, handwriting expert.

France Facing Political Upset In King's Death

Attacks on Government May Force Resignation of Ministers.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Paris, Oct. 10.—Petrus Kamelen's 20 deadly bullets tonight had left France shaken politically and Europe nervous over possible consequences of his deed at Marseille.

Fear that the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia and Foreign Minister Louis Barthou of France might shatter the continent's peace, as did the killing of Archduke Franz Ferdinand at Sarajevo 20 years ago, lessened overnight.

Nevertheless conviction was expressed in many quarters that Kamelen may have changed the course of events in Europe.

His Nationality Probed.

The question of the assassin's nationality, highly important because of its political implications, preoccupied police over the continent tonight, and everywhere authorities sought clews which might enable them definitely to identify him.

France's Surete Nationale and authorities at Praha, Czechoslovakia, insisted the Czech passport found on Kamelen's body, which apparently had been vissed by Yugoslav authorities at Zagreb, was forged.

His movements were being traced tonight, but for the moment police were assuming that Kamelen was of Croat birth because the tattooing on his body—the skull and crossbones and the initials "INROM" or "YMRO" beneath—was Balkan.

Whether he was Yugoslav, Czech, Bulgarian or some other nationality to which the destinies of the scattered Croats have been welded, they could not determine.

Homes of Yugoslav refugees in Paris and other capitals were being searched as French secret service men and police sought possible accomplices.

It was asserted that Marseille, Paris and Aix-en-Provence police had seen Kamelen with at least two other men and one woman recently.

Marseille police were said to be working on the theory that Kamelen's companions were in the crowds lining Alexander's route ready to complete his work if he failed.

Among documents seized in the homes of Yugoslav Separatists in Paris, police said, was one calling Alexander "tyrant king and traitor to his country."

Government Assailed.

Meanwhile, trouble for the Government of Premier Doumergue appeared to be brewing over responsibility for failure to protect King Alexander. Groups of demonstrators on the boulevards shouted insults at police and Albert Sarraut, minister of the interior, for failing to prevent the assassination.

Police dispersed the groups with little difficulty, but there were predictions Sarraut, and possibly other ministers, might be forced to resign.

Interpellations already have been filed in the Chamber of Deputies, and certain French newspapers have criticized the government sharply, while opponents have suggested it is time to overhaul the government of "tragically weakened authority."

Premier Doumergue took over the duties of Foreign Minister Barthou.

Motion pictures of the assassinations and the disorders at Marseille which followed have been banned from French theaters.

Members of the chamber finance committee decided to ask Doumergue that the films be preserved so that they can be examined later for evidence as to police measures taken to protect the King.

Police seized seven films of the assassination on their arrival at Cherbourg. A package of photographs of the bodies of Alexander and Barthou lying in state, as well as other views destined for London, were seized at Le Bourget Air Field near Paris.

Fishing Crew of Three Believed Lost at Sea

Eureka, Calif., Oct. 10 (AP).—The crew of three of the fishing boat Crescent was believed lost at sea when wreckage of the craft washed into the beach 15 miles north of here today.

Mountainous seas kept the Coast Guard power boat and crew in harbor, although the cutter Cahokia cruised in the vicinity of Trinidad fishing grounds looking for the bodies. The crew was last seen Monday when its catch was taken by the pick-up boat of a fishing company.

Saved King's Life During War, Says Louisiana Waiter

New Orleans, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—A New Orleans waiter recalled today how during the World War he once saved the life of King Alexander of Yugoslavia.

He is Albert Feugas, 46, president of the French War Veterans of New Orleans, and one of the four men left of the original French regiment in which he enlisted.

"It was in 1916," Feugas said. "King Alexander, then a prince, was visiting at the front in civilian clothes. He went down in the mud hole of a trench, which I, as sergeant, commanded.

"He started to climb over the top of the trench to make a speech to the German soldiers, who were about 25 feet away. I pulled him back and told him it was suicide. Then we showed him what would happen if he stuck his head over the trench wall. A periscope was raised and the Boche shattered it with bullets.

"The prince decided I was right. He stayed with us, belly-deep in water for about half an hour, and then continued his tour of inspection."

Huey Long Renews Attack on Walmsley

Returns From Victory in Judicial Election.

New Orleans, Oct. 10 (AP).—Senator Huey P. Long roared back into New Orleans today to resume his fight against Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley.

Reports were current here that the legislative committee tomorrow would resume its "vice" investigation of the city administration, which was halted while Long took the stump to name his candidate a justice of the Supreme Court in the Third District election he ordered for yesterday.

The Senator bounced back into the city investigation after the election of Lieut. Gov. John B. Fournet to the Supreme Court in a three-cornered contest against District Judge Thomas F. Porter of Lake Charles, with the Long dictatorship virtually the sole issue.

Unofficial returns from the election gave Fournet a majority of 4,460 votes over Porter with only two small boxes missing. The vote was: Fournet, 21,385, and Porter, 16,925.

Film Actress Records Dialogue by Phone

Hollywood, Oct. 10 (AP).—Paramount movie studio reported tonight that it had recorded by telephone from New York some lines spoken by Anna May Wong, Chinese actress, for a picture in which she appears, and thereby saved a lot of money. Miss Wong, after doing her part in the picture, left for New York en route to England.

When it became necessary to change some of the lines, mechanical experts set up a telephonic recording arrangement, Miss Wong was reached at her New York hotel, Director Al Hall coached her briefly on the necessary 17 words and the problem was solved at about the cost of a five-minute telephone connection with New York.

Pact Still Open To Yugoslavia Il Duce Holds

Official Organ in Rome Reveals Attitude on Alexander's Death.

Rome, Oct. 10 (AP).—A renewal of Premier Mussolini's offer for an understanding with Yugoslavia was made tonight on the heels of King Alexander's assassination at Marseille.

Virgino Gyda, editor of the authoritative Giornale d'Italia, which is known as the mouthpiece of the government, declared in an editorial that Il Duce's attitude in proferring an olive branch to Yugoslavia shortly before the King's death remains unchanged.

Mussolini took his stand for conciliation of differences between the two nations in an address at Milan Saturday.

He said that Italians, though deeply hurt by Yugoslav's press attacks on the bravery of Italy's army, were conscious of Italy's superior strength and hence Italy would be willing to reach an understanding, provided Yugoslavia established conditions conducive to such an accord.

A 21-day period of court mourning was decreed by King Victor Emmanual as the Italian press expressed profound sorrow over Alexander's slaying and paid high tribute to his ability as a soldier.

The entire press expressed the hope that hostile factions in Yugoslavia will now get together and establish peace. Tonight's editorials displayed an apparently strengthened pro-French attitude, asserting that the death of Foreign Minister Louis Barthou can not halt plans for an understanding between Italy and France.

Safecrackers Call On Store 14th Time And Click Again

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 10 (AP).—For all the nice weather and a good breakfast, W. E. Kerr, druggist, was troubled as he walked to work today. There was something he had meant to do and it just wouldn't be recalled to mind.

As he entered his building he snapped his fingers in sudden recollection.

On the floor was a smashed safe and littter of postage stamps. Fifty dollars was missing. Kerr had again been robbed, the fourteenth time in 19 years.

"Now I know what it was," Kerr said through clenched teeth. "I forget to get burglary insurance."

Your Eyes

—are they, like so many faithful servitors, too apt to be taken for granted—to be ignored until frequent headaches warn of trouble ahead? Yet, how impossible it is to overestimate their importance to your physical and mental well-being. And how simple a matter it is to take the few precautions necessary in order that they may function properly.

First, of course, is the avoidance of strain, through having sufficient light at all times—especial consideration being given where close and constant application is necessary. An examination, at least once every two years, should also be made by an eye physician or a competent optometrist—so that any necessary change in prescription may be made, if you already wear glasses—or correct glasses prescribed, if, for the first time, you are found to need them.

The first sign of strain is your warning that your eyes need particular attention—and wisdom dictates your immediate consultation of an oculist or optometrist—so that further strain may be avoided and the condition that caused it corrected.

To Help You Towards Better Vision —Expert Optometrists Here

Here you may have your oculist's prescription filled or, if you prefer, our optometrists are well qualified to prescribe for you when medical attention is not required. If, upon examination of your eyes, we find you need an oculist's services, we immediately recommend that you seek such attention.

Mountings and frames in wide variety are here, too, for your selection—and we shall be glad to aid you in choosing the most suitable and becoming type. Our prices are most reasonable.

King's Death Held Blow to Germany

Closest Ally in Balkans, View at Berlin.

Berlin, Oct. 10 (AP).—Although maintaining great reserve concerning possible ramifications of yesterday's assassinations at Marseille, Wilhelmstrasse circles tonight in intimate personal conversations made it no secret that King Alexander's death hit Germany hard.

No man in authority in the Balkans was more closely allied to Germany than the slain Yugoslav king, these circles said. They considered him a counter force to Premier Mussolini's plans for close alliance between Austria and Italy.

The Wilhelmstrasse, it was stated, regarded Foreign Minister Barthou of France as an enemy of Germany, but felt at the same time he was no unknown quantity. Now, official sources said, the future of Franco-German relations is uncertain.

Civic Session Is Set Tonight In Arlington

County Federation Seeks to Avoid Congestion at Board Election.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

In an effort to avoid the confusion resulting in the last election for county officers, when there were 52 candidates for the county board, which consists of five members, the special committee of the Arlington County Civic Federation, of which I. C. Buchanan is chairman, will hold the first of a series of meetings at the courthouse tonight to find a solution to the problem.

The meeting tonight, Chairman Buchanan said, will be largely devoted to hearing the suggestions of those persons who were candidates for the board three years ago. All citizens of the county interested in the movement are invited to attend and take part in the discussions. At future meetings, dates of which will be announced, the committee will hear the views of county leaders and all others who are interested.

The committee is unanimously of the opinion that none should be elected except by a majority vote. This was not the case at the last election.

Because of the steep grade, Washington street is not suited for the through approach to the Arlington Memorial Bridge, County Manager Roy S. Braden told the members of the Rosslyn Precinct Civic League at its meeting last night. He stated that the completion of the Lee boulevard to the bridge will greatly relieve the present traffic along the Wilson boulevard.

Braden asserted there are really no satisfactory approaches to any of the four bridges leading into the District of Columbia, and said that he hoped to work out a program of development to eliminate many dangerous curves.

Answering the demands for proper lighting of the Wilson boulevard extension to the Memorial Bridge and the business section of Rosslyn, Braden said that the work of installing the lights is now in progress by the Braddock Light & Power Co.

Bids were opened by County Manager Roy S. Braden yesterday for the road equipment for Arlington County. The bids will be considered by the county board at its meeting on Saturday, at which time it is expected the contract will be awarded.

There will be a meeting of the Clarendon Volunteer Fire Department at the firemen's hall tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

Records in the county clerk's office show that during the first quarter of last year from July 1 to October 1 there were a total of 569 hunting licenses issued as against 509 for the same period this year. In revenue it shows an increase of $173.50.

Honor roll at Stonewall Jackson School, at Mulhall, as announced by Superintendent Fletcher Kemp, includes the following students by grades:

First grade—Dorothy Ferguson, Gwendolyn Jones, Marylou Masser, Aileen Sinclair and Ann Underwood.
Second grade—Mildred Hannah, Rose Marie Massey and Earl Munson.
Third grade—Maynard Beard, Munson Lane and Evelyn Underwood.
Fourth grade—Frank Anderson, Norma Hanna, Nell Mansfield, Annie Rusk and Ethel Taylor.
Fifth grade—George Dulaney, Patricia Franks, Mary Elizabeth Lane, Mary Stevens and Eston Taylor.
Sixth grade—Lillian Munson and Wada Wade.

Woodrow Wilson School.

First grade—Gilbert Pender, Betty L. Hillery, Hildegard Herwig, Margaret McNuss and Helen Thompson.

850 Are Placed On Voting Lists

Democrats Record Heavy Gains in Montgomery Registration.

Final registration in Montgomery County, Md., this week placed approximately 850 new voters on the county poll lists. Democrats made a net gain of about 350 this week compared to a Democratic gain of 225 last week and 2,156 on September 11 which was the heaviest registration this year.

Complete unofficial returns from all county precincts last night gave the Democrats 591 and the Republicans 240. Heavy Democratic gains were shown in Bethesda where one precinct registered 32 Democrats and no Republicans, Takoma Park No. 6 with 31 to 1, Chevy Chase No. 5 with 25 to 2, Glen Echo, 17 to 2, Silver Spring No. 2, 14 to 0 and Silver Spring No. 8, 10 to 0.

Republicans received a majority in only two precincts and were tied in three others. The Republicans led in Laytonsville, 20 to 8, and in Brookeville, 18 to 17. An even break was recorded in Olney with 15 to 15, Darnestown, 27 to 27, and Chevy Chase No. 2, 3 to 3.

This week's registration raised the total for 1934 to slightly more than 4,500 and brought the county registration to approximately 31,000 in which the Democrats hold a 2-to-1 majority.

Silver Spring Acquires New $3,000 Fire Truck

Purchase of a new truck, costing approximately $3,000, was announced this week by officials of the Silver Spring (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department. It is especially designed for fighting fires in rural districts.

The truck will be equipped with a 400-gallon water tank, an individual booster pump and other equipment used in fighting brush and field fires. It will have a battery of portable floodlights. Delivery of the apparatus is expected within the next month.

Night Schools Costs Reduced At Alexandria

Operating Expenses Fixed at FERA Figure, Williams Says.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Operating expenses of the two opportunity night schools being operated in Alexandria under the FERA have been cut to $150 a week, as suggested by the FERA, according to T. C. Williams, superintendent of schools. The cut was arrived at by reducing the salaries of all employes of the schools.

The new salary scale will be: White teachers, $40 a month; colored, 30; white principals, $40; colored principals, $35, and supervisor, $50 a month. This will effect a saving to the Government of $81 a week. There are now approximately 500 pupils enrolled.

Lodge Celebration.

Liberty Rebekah Lodge, No. 16, Odd Fellows, of Alexandria, celebrated charter and roll call night Tuesday, with Mrs. Hilda Hudson, noble grand, presiding. There were 89 members to respond to roll call.

This lodge was organized in 1918 with 45 charter members, of whom these were present at the charter night meeting: W. L. Martin, Mrs. F. L. Bartlett, W. Clifton Cunningham, Mrs. Lillie Cunningham, George M. Reynolds, Mrs. Reynolds, Mrs. W. E. Latham, jr., C. E. Remington, Mrs. Remington, Miss Josephine Williams, James Haynes, George W. Bontz, C. W. O'Meara and J. K. Williams. Those who have died since the organization of the lodge are Mrs. W. L. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Webb, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Latham, sr., W. L. Clark, R. W. Studds and Frank Chilcott.

Hellmuth to Speak.

Commander Everett A. Hellmuth, of Alexandria Post No. 24, American Legion, will be the guest speaker at the meeting of the American Legion Auxiliary tonight in Gadsby's Tavern. Mrs. E. B. Ale, president of the auxiliary, will conduct the meeting. A social session will be held following the business meeting.

Kiwanians to Meet.

Dr. Thomas E. Green, director of the speakers' bureau of the American Red Cross, will be guest of honor and principal speaker at the weekly meeting of the Alexandria Kiwanis Club, in the George Mason Hotel tonight, at 6:30. Robert W. Eayes, vice president, will have charge of the meeting in the absence of President Tom Jones, who is attending the Capital District convention.

Roger C. Sullivan is program chairman, and women members of Kiwanians' families are invited to attend.

Store Is Robbed.

A colored man entered the store of Abe Cohen, on King street, just before closing time Tuesday, and asked the price of suits of clothing. While the attention of the clerk was temporarily distracted, the man seized a suit of clothes, valued at $30, and ran out of the door. According to the report made to the police, he jumped in a waiting automobile, operated by a white man, and both drove rapidly off. The automobile is said to have borne District license tags.

Democrat Rallies Will Hear Ritchie

He Will Make Three Talks October 19.

Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland will be the featured speaker at three Democratic rallies to be held October 19 in Montgomery County, Md., State's Attorney Stedman Prescott, county Democratic leader, announced yesterday. Other members of the State ticket also will talk.

Gov. Ritchie will speak at a mass meeting in the Rockville High School at 3 p. m. and at two evening meetings. The two night meetings will be held in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School and the Takoma Park Firehouse. The Governor's schedule has been arranged so he can speak at both.

The Governor will talk on behalf of his candidacy for reelection to a fifth term and the election of the State and county Democratic candidates. The 20 county candidates also will appear at the meetings.

The two Montgomery County National Guard units, the Service Company of Silver Spring and the Howitzer Company of Kensington, will act as an escort of honor for the Governor.

Montgomery Selected for Social Work

County Is Chosen as State Training Center After Federal Survey.

Montgomery County has been selected as a State training center for social work executives and aids in Maryland as a result of an investigation by four Federal social workers from New York City, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, secretary of the Montgomery County Welfare Board, announced yesterday.

The investigators visited the county September 10 and spent a week studying records, auditing accounts and visiting 100 relief families selected by the investigators, Mrs. Clapper said. The investigation included case work methods, eligibility for relief, policy governing the administration, and all questions which would imply partisan discrimination.

Text of Statement.

"It has been the very earnest desire of the Montgomery County Welfare Board to keep relief free of partisan implication. Relief to those in distress in the county has been given regardless of and without any question concerning race, religion and politics.

"The staff is directed by a trained professional executive, chosen because of her ability as a social worker. She came to Montgomery County in June, 1934, from the Family Society of Allegheny County, Pittsburgh, Pa., chosen after an extensive search to make sure that a qualified professional person, capable of maintaining high standards, would direct the work in this county.

"Every member of the staff was selected by State competitive examination and through the State merit system. Beginning September 10, Montgomery County was one of six Maryland counties in which a Federal investigation of the relief program was conducted. We were included in this study at the request of the County Welfare Board.

100 Families Visited.

"Four trained Federal social investigators of New York City came to Montgomery County September 10, 1934, and spent a week studying records, auditing accounts and visiting 100 relief families selected by the investigators. This investigation included case work methods, eligibility for relief, policy governing the administration, and all questions which would imply partisan discrimination.

"As a result of this investigation Montgomery County has been selected as a State training center for social work executives and aids in Maryland.

"A complete report of the Federal investigation probably will be published by the State Welfare Department in the near future.

"In Montgomery County the welfare board is appointed by the Governor, subject to recommendation of the State relief director."

County Makes School Award

Rockville Youth Receives Military Academy Scholarship.

A scholarship to Charlotte Hall Military Academy has been awarded to Garner Collins, of Rockville, Md., by the Montgomery County Board of Education, Dr. Edwin W. Broome, superintendent of county schools, announced yesterday.

The board accepted the resignation of Mrs. Merritt O. Chance as trustee of the Brookeville School and appointed the following trustees: Mrs. Ida C. Cole and George L. Brigham, Derwood School, and Daniel Howard, Unity Colored School.

Bids received September 28 for purchase of two school buses were rejected by the board. New bids will be asked in accordance with revised specifications. Bids will be opened at noon October 19.

The following bids were accepted by the board, all being lowest on each project: Digging well for Sandy Spring School, H. E. Van Hoy, $1.40 a foot; digging Fairland School well, Edwin Brown, base bid, $165; repairs to heating plant at Potomac School, W. W. Gingell, Bethesda, $174.75; provision of water and sanitary provisions for Brookeville School, of which the county and the community each will pay half, Moxley & Jones, $754.

Glenmont P.-T. A. Meets Tonight.

The Glenmont (Md.) Parent-Teacher Association will hold its first meeting of the year tonight in the Glenmont School. Following the business session a motion picture will be presented.

ABC Shop Doomed By Bristol's Vote

707 Against, 352 Favor Sale of Liquor.

Bristol, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—Citizens today went on record against continuance of the State Alcohol Beverage Control Board dispensary in this city, and against the sale of wine or beers containing more than 3.2 per cent alcohol.

The vote was: For retention of the store, 352; against retention of the store, 707.

Under the act establishing the ABC Board, the store must cease sales here within 60 days. The dispensary served as an attraction for visitors from Tennessee and North Carolina. Established June 14, the store's sales for the first 12 weeks aggregated $132,000.

Higher Price Level Sought By Roosevelt

U. S. Solvency Restored, He Claims, but Holds Off Stabilization.

of the Treasury's stabilization fund, have so eased credit and created such a potential redundancy, sharply exhibited in execess reserves of the Federal Reserve banks, that a runaway credit boom might result.

Concerned Over Increases.

The fact that the President is studying these matters suggests that he is more attentive to the possibilities of price increases resulting from volume and velocity of credit than from monetary manipulation. And monetary manipulation is now referred to as only one factor—which may or may not figure in the Administration's future policy.

This will interest those economists who have never agreed with Prof. George F. Warren and the other once prominent but now absent advisers of the White House. It has been known long since that Mr. Roosevelt has lost faith in the commodity dollar theories—if he ever had anything more than curiosity to try them out.

While the President is not yet prepared to say how much more of a price rise he considers desirable, the inference is that this can not be put into figures, percentages, dollars or cents. The President has never accepted the theory often expressed in the press that 1926 values should be restored although this has been represented as a definite Administration policy. Mr. Roosevelt has never said this. His view is that some 1926 prices and some 1924 and 1925 values are all right. In the case of farm products, it was agreed at a meeting of farm organizations in Washington that parity should be based upon 1909-1914 prices.

Many Factors Involved.

However, there are a great many factors involved about which one can not be didactic when saying the desire is for better prices. At the same time the Administration does not want runaway prices or values. Progress so far has been substantial.

Apropos of newspaper publication of statistics showing the highs and lows of commodity prices from 1920 to 1934, the President's view is that such wide fluctuations mean that something must be wrong with business and finance to allow such conditions—some of the swings representing a change of 800 to 1,000 per cent. It is impossible to plan ahead, to have stabilization, if prices vary that much.

The Administration seeks to prevent fluctuations of that sort. As for the technique of raising, then controlling, prices, the President believes the Administration is learning day by day; there has been much study recently not only of rising prices, but of preventing them from going through the roof.

As for manipulation of the gold content of the dollar, that might be one factor; it might play a part, but the President is not prepared to say. As for real wages—the wages of labor keeping pace with rising prices—the Administration feels that if prices go up 10 per cent, then dollar wages should go up by the same amount.

Assets Now Ahead.

The Administration believes the country's asset column has risen until it exceeds the liability column by a small margin.

With regard to whether the point has been reached to put the brakes on rising prices, the Administration view is that not much more of a rise is sought. The commodity price index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics shows farm products now at 72.8 for the week ended September 29, which is very close to what they were in the 1910-1914 period. Their low point for 1934 was 57.4, and the low point of the depression, in March 1933, was 42.8.

All commodities stood in 1913 for instance, at 69.8, compared with 77.2 for last week. That is, the general price level is now materially higher than it was in the pre-war period considered equitable for farm prices. However, as now indicated, the Administration is concerned with a still more favorable ratio for farm prices and the situation is complicated by numerous other factors, among them the artificiality of fixed or controlled prices under the NRA, to say nothing of the AAA program.

At the same time, the ruling out of the 1926 goal, when the general index number stood at 100, further implies that the Administration envisages no great increases of prices. If the goal were the 1926 level, it would mean that the general index number would have to be pushed up from the 77.2 figure of last week to 100. This would be a long way to travel. At the low point of 1933, the general index figure was 59.8. It is now up about 17 points from that low. To reach 100 it would have to gain another 23 points.

Equitable Balance Sought.

In other words, the Administration apparently is convinced that the more important questions to be considered are first, restoration and maintenance of solvency, affecting the whole banking-insurance-industrial structure and, secondly, equitable balance of prices, rather than attempts to achieve some predetermined, preexisting price level.

After talking with many leaders in industry, agriculture, finance, mortgages and farm credits a year ago, Mr. Roosevelt found the consensus to be that a price rise was necessary to relieve the debtor-creditor situation. Before the crash the country's assets exceeded the liability column by from 75 ot 150 billion dollars. After 1929 the asset column fell rapidly, while the liability column remained constant, until by March, 1932, the assets were actually lower than the liabilities.

The Administration's view of this situation is represented thusly:

There were three possible procedures to restore a proper relationship and get back into the black ink again. One was to cut the liabilities by some rule of thumb, but this was impossible under the Constitution. A second was to raise the asset column by increasing values. This was undertaken. A third was debt readjustment. Farm credits were extended to reduce interest charges. Through home and farm loans, and through facilitating bankruptcy procedure, much debt readjustment was accomplished.

Values Have Advanced.

Prices meanwhile have been raised—how much depending upon the figures used. Values, at any event, have advanced materially, the asset column has gone up and liability column has gone down somewhat. The Administration does not feel that the asset column has gone up enough yet so that it is not possible to slow down a process that has been crawling—that is for the future.

These representations of Administration views did not end conjecture as to possible new moves. In some quarters it is thought the President will take much the same line as indicated in his forthcoming speech to the bankers' association here.

Taken in conjunction with Administration questioning of the workability of price fixing and production controls in NRA, and with reflections of changing policy generally, the indications are strong that Mr. Roosevelt is moving in the direction of those who would release—and presumably control—the pent-up forces reflected in the redundancy of credit.

Whether this also implies some new forms of credit controls, or some new disposition of controls now existing, but divided between the Treasury and the Reserve Board, is not yet clear. Treasury authorities, however, for months have been closely studying the entire question, while political pressures have been toward a so-called central bank. But this appears to be outside of present Administration calculations save as the political forces have to be reckoned with when Congress assembles.

These Youngsters Won Miniature in Regatta

Two Women Hike 2,140 Miles To Ask Aid From President

2,140 miles to seek out President Roosevelt and place before him their troubles. The President was busy yesterday. They unburdened themselves before Pat McKenna and Dick Jervis, of the White House staff, instead.

"I know everything is going to come out all right," Mrs. Sherwood said.

"They said they would do everything they could for us, and I know they will," said Mrs. Kline.

It was with a composite treasury of $14 that Mrs. Sherwood and Mrs. Kline set out for the Capital, $4 borrowed from a friend at Livingston, $10 borrowed from another friend at Billings. They arrived in Washington Monday night with $1.16 of this left.

And it was in Washington that they encountered for the second time during their long adventure humanity in what they would call its "mean" form. The landlady who took what remained of their treasury and held their baggage until they could raise 50 cents from the Emergency Relief Administration to pay for their night's lodging.

With but another exception they found humanity abounding in sympathy, kindness and material assistance. They still were in sight of Livingston when a rancher, failing to prevail upon them to return, assisted them into his auto and carried them 40 miles across the mountain toward the East.

Treated Like Millionaires.

There was a taxi driver in Billings on the first evening of their flight—they took a train there from Great Cliff because it was getting dark—who took them from the station to the home of a friend, charged them nothing and treated them "just as though we were millionaires."

Housewives fed them and provided them with clean beds to sleep in. Kind drivers carried them over the country in automobiles and trucks—milk trucks, oil trucks, furniture vans, and once they rode in a truck with 15 head of cattle.

They found that the best way to get a lift was not to raise their thumbs to ask for them. It was just to trudge along.

They rode with a man who was running for governor, a "jewel of a man," who talked all the time and who smiled while he talked. They rode into St. Paul with a truck driver who showed them the city's sights and gave them a dollar. And there was a policeman in the South Side of Chicago who commandeered a "swell big car" and told the gray-haired man who sat in the rear seat to take them 40 miles into Indiana.

At the Indiana State line they had to pay 5 cents apiece to cross a bridge into Ohio.

"Can you beat that?" said Mrs. Sherwood.

Most of that sting was forgotten, though, in thankful remembrance of the man and his family who shared with them a picnic lunch before riding 45 miles out of their way to take them to Pittsburgh.

In East Pittsburgh, Mrs. Sherwood was "scared" for the first time on the trip. They had to cross the high level bridge near the Westinghouse plant, and Mrs. Sherwood, who spent her life in the mountains, part of the time prospecting for gold with her dead husband, grew dizzy.

"Somehow I just couldn't seem to make my feet move," she said.

Refused Shelter Once.

Humanity grew "mean" for the moment near Greencastle, Pa., Sunday night. This time it was a man. He refused them use of a tourist cabin and—

"We sat down under a tree near the road. And the next thing we remember it was daylight and cold."

But this they quickly forgot in another "perfect jewel of a man," a football coach at Gettysburg who carried them 249 miles and showed them about the battlefield.

"If we had paid good money we couldn't have had a better guide," said Mrs. Sherwood.

"He could talk about anything because he was smart," said Mrs. Kline.

The man who brought them into Washington gave them a drink, which they accepted, and proferred cigarettes, which they declined.

Mrs. Sherwood came to Washington to get President Roosevelt to help her oust tenants on her fruit and truck farm near Livingston. Mrs. Kline would like a little assistance in getting back $140,000 in property. She ran a hotel in Livingston for more than 30 years, and 10 years ago "some scoundrels stole it."

They are living at the Y. W. C. A. home for transients at 614 E street northwest, where they have a bed and "two fine meals a day." But today or tomorrow they will set out along roads that lead West, back from the longest journey East in their lives, back home after an adventure that—

"I wouldn't give $1,000 for," said Mrs. Sherwood.

1,000 Students Here Will Get Free Lunches

Relief Funds Also Will Educate Mothers in Child Nutrition.

Free school lunches for about 1,000 junior high students and education of parents in child care and nutrition are two projects soon to be started with funds furnished by relief authorities.

The lunch program for the junior high pupils will start as soon as Miss Alice Hill, emergency relief director, certifies the list of needy pupils which she has received from the school heads.

The parent education movement will start after next week's meeting of the Board of Education at which Superintendent of Schools Frank W. Ballou will submit his recommendation on the problem. Federal relief funds will be used for the project.

Five hundred adults, 250 white and 250 colored mothers, will receive training in child care, nutrition and related subjects. The classes for the white mothers will be held at the Webster School, Tenth and H streets northwest, under supervision of Miss Maude Aiton, who already conducts adult Americanization classes there.

Demand for this instruction came from Mrs. Richard Hogue, of the District League of Women Voters, and Mrs. Jesse C. Adkins, of the American Association of University Women.

The junior high lunch program will be the same as that last year. Miss Hill declared that her division will pay 10 cents a day per child. The children will be fed at the regular school cafeterias.

Masons Plan For Field Day

Knights Templar Field Day Set for Saturday in Ball Park.

The annual field day of the Knights Templar of the District will be held at the Washington baseball park Saturday, with the Grand Commandery and six constituent commanderies participating.

Invitations have been extended to the grand commanders of Maryland and Virginia and their staffs and to Old Dominion Commandery, No. 11, of Alexandria; Jacques de Molay Commandery, of Frederick, Md.; St. Elmo Cammandery, No. 12, of Hyattsville, and Montgomery Commandery, No. 13, of Rockville, Md.

Exercises will be started at 2 p. m. and will be featured by competitive drills by teams representing the local commanderies, presentation of prizes, a dress parade and review.

In the evening out-of-town guests and prominent District Masons will be entertained at dinner at the Hamilton Hotel, at which Roland M. Brown, grand commander, will preside.

Judges for the drills will include Roland M. Hollock, past grand commander of Illinois; C. Ridgeway Moore, grand captain general of Virginia, and William T. Burnett, of Baltimore.

Carter Field Informs Lions of Job Program

Thirty-eight members of the Lions Club were awarded special chevrons in recognition of ten years' service by President Arthur Clarendon Smith at the club meeting at the Hotel Mayflower yesterday.

Carter Field, newspaper correspondent, spoke on Administration plans to end unemployment. Percy Miller spoke on fishing.

It took generations of constant care and consummate skill to produce a Scotch Whisky with the rare savour and gentle softness of Haig & Haig.

Refunding And Recovery.

The Treasury offering for September 15, part of which was to cover the refunding of a large segment of the Fourth Liberty Loan, is now finally closing. Not all of the 4¼ per cent bonds have been presented for conversion. But the proportion of holders taking advantage of the offers for exchange is large enough to justify pronouncing the operation a success as a whole.

The war loans, including the Fourth Liberty Loan, were sold to a vast number of individuals in small amounts. While many transfers have taken place in the course of the years since the issue was placed, there is still a widespread ownership by original purchasers, which to some extent makes the complete conversion more difficult.

A saving in interest payments results from this refunding operation. The Treasury has from now until the 15th of this month to decide whether or not to call for redemption at par of another substantial segment of the outstanding Fourth Liberty Loan on April 15, 1935; and if so, how much to call. A further redemption would seem to be justified, provided that the outlook for a speeding up of the recovery program can be relied upon.

If a more coordinated administrative policy could be brought about, making recovery its main objective, refunding could be counted upon in April on as good, or perhaps better, terms as those of this autumn. Failure to concentrate on recovery, or failure to accomplish important results in a recovery program, would make the calling of a further large segment of the Fourth Liberty Loan a mistake that might result in increasing difficulties rather than reducing them.

Choose A Local Expert.

Commissioner Hazen, Arno B. Cammerer and Col. Horatio B. Hackett, who constitute the new Alley Clearance Authority, have been assigned joint responsibility for a most important civic undertaking. Their task is not simply one of initiating low-cost local housing developments. It also involves complete elimination of filthy and disreputable alleys as places of residence in the District. Under the Capper-Norton Act it will be unlawful to live in an alley dwelling ten years hence. Preparation for this significant social advance is intrusted to the new board.

Obviously this group was chosen as a policy-forming body. Its members represent each of the Governmental agencies primarily interested in the elimination of Washington's squalid residential sections. From this viewpoint the appointments were particularly well made. But no one of the board members will be able to give more than a fraction of his time to the undertaking. A capable executive, who is also an expert in slum clearance and low-cost housing, is now needed to direct the actual work. By all means a local man, one who already understands the complexities and appreciates the opportunities in this significant project, should be chosen.

John Ihlder appears to be the choice of local groups which have been instrumental in bringing the District's low-cost housing program to its present status. For many years he has been a student of the alley problem in Washington as well as a National authority on housing. Selection of Mr. Ihlder would not only enlist the hearty cooperation of these local groups, but it would also enable the authority to inaugurate its program without waiting for a newcomer to familiarize himself with the situation.

The need for civic spirit may well be emphasized. Already a low-cost housing project planned in the vicinity of Howard University has been abandoned because property owners refuse to sell some portions of the site at what the authorities regard as reasonable prices. The larger program may be unduly delayed, if not frustrated, unless it becomes a community enterprise that will impel citizens to cooperate. From this viewpoint, especially, the utilization of local experts would be a strategic move.

A Five-Minute Job.

Giuseppe Blanc, composer of the Fascist anthem, "Giovinezza," has been telling how he came to write that piece of melody. He wrote it one spring afternoon, long before the war, when some fellow-students, celebrating their graduation from the University of Turin, urged him to "make us a song to sing at dinner tonight." And he says he did the job in 5 minutes. Anybody who is familiar with "Giovinezza"—and who is not?—will hesitate to accuse Signor Blanc of doctoring his stop-watch.

The song has lilt, and it has gained a hold upon thousands of Fascist youths which lends it an appeal entirely apart from musical pretentions. Indeed, Signor Blanc, who is now inspector general of military bands in Italy, would probably be quite ready to admit as much—and he would certainly be far too polite to offer, in return, any comments upon "The Star-Spangled Banner."

The fact is that, once started, such pleasantries might go unpleasantly far in demonstrating that national or party anthems are seldom works of art. Legend has it that the national hymn of czarist Russia was written in obedience to imperial command, and it was certainly both popular music and excellent music, deserving its introduction in Tschaikowsky's "Overture of 1812." But very few such compositions—especially if written to order, as, in a sense, most of them are—can stand the test of technical criticism.

Serbs, Croats And Slovenes.

The immediate political problems aroused by the crime at Marseille fall into two distinct divisions—the consequences in France and the consequences in Yugoslavia. From the domestic reactions in the two countries—the effects of which are not likely to stop short at the respective national frontiers—will be formulated those international consequences which are as yet completely veiled to human foresight.

Serious enough in the case of France, the domestic repercussions in Yugoslavia, to which we confine ourselves here, are likely to be of a far more disturbing character. This is not merely because France is a stable, homogeneous democracy, while Yugoslavia is essentially an unstable, heterogeneous dictatorship. It is also due to the fact that France, however much the assassination reflects on the minister of the interior, has only lost in Foreign Minister Barthou the services of one able statesman among many. Yugoslavia, however, has at one stroke been deprived of the man who held in his own hands all the threads of government, all the controls of a very delicate political mechanism. For Alexander was not merely king; he was also absolute dictator of his country.

This royal dictatorship was not of very recent origin. Next January it will be six years since Alexander dissolved the Yugoslav Parliament, rescinded the national constitution and began the era of personal government now abruptly terminated. The reasons for that step rooted in the internal political difficulties then disorganizing the kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, as Yugoslavia is officially designated. In its ten years of life this chaotic war-born nation had experienced 23 changes of administration. And only a few months before Alexander established his dictatorship four Croatian deputies, including Stefan Radich, had been shot down in Parliament. The belief that the murdered king had some indirect share of responsibility for this outrage was doubtless a factor in the assassination at Marseille.

Through personal government, Alexander for nearly six years sought to weld Yugoslavia into unity. But his methods were arbitrary and deliberately calculated to establish Serb supremacy at the expense of both Croats and Slovenes. Whether these racial feuds have been assuaged by the constructive features of the dictatorship, or whether they were merely suppressed and will now flare out with additional strength, is what the world is waiting to ascertain.

Should that flare-up come, either through the sudden removal of the royal authority or through arbitrary action on the part of the new regency, its effects would be all too likely to extend beyond Yugoslav frontiers. Slovenia borders Italy and Austria. It was this triangle, where Slav, German and Italian meet, that Bismarck had in mind when he called Trieste the tip of the German sword. Similarly Croatia runs up to the Hungarian border, offering all too great temptation for cooperation between zealous patriots of that country and rebellious Croats.

The possibilities of serious disorder in Yugoslavia are, therefore, large. The possibility that such disorders would become international in character is sufficiently real to be disquieting. And the intimation that dictatorships, however justifiable, do little to solve the underlying problems of a people is apparent in the justified apprehensions with which the world today eyes the Yugoslav scene.

On "Buying Votes."

Charges that the Administration is using taxpayers' money as a campaign fund are exaggerated. Too frequently one gets the impression that some Republican campaigners are harping upon this issue because they have no constructive program of their own to offer. Nevertheless, the tendency for blatant politicians to seek election as a reward for the distribution of funds from the Federal Treasury is a grave sequel to the New Deal spending program.

The fact that many candidates are taking unto themselves credit for Federal outlays is incontrovertible. The Republicans are attempting to twist these facts into a campaign scandal. In effect the Administration is accused of corrupting politics with public funds. The danger signal, however, seems to loom up in another direction. The New Deal may easily be jeopardized by the election of camp followers whose only claim to distinction is their ability to demand more doles.

It may be true that the AAA and the FERA are merely following their regular programs, without reference to the campaign. But it is also true that the Treasury has collected and made available to Democratic headquarters figures showing the exact amount of New Deal largesse distributed in every State. These are furnished to candidates who wish to appeal to certain classes of voters through their pocketbooks.

In some instances candidates journey to Washington for a personal check with the New Deal agencies and return with lavish promises to their constituents. A few days ago Arthur J. Lacy, Democratic candidate for Governor of Michigan, and Frank C. Pickard, Senatorial candidate in the same State, made a jaunt of this kind to the Capital City. What influence, if any, they exerted upon the spending agencies can not be determined. But they returned to Michigan with promises involving the use of Federal money from five different agencies.

Whether or not money is actually being used to influence votes, the New Deal spending organizations are certainly being misused as bait to attract the support of venal groups. The result is to drag into the political arena agencies that should be kept on a strictly business basis, and to put a premium upon irresponsible and unprincipled candidates.

Labor Conservatism.

By a decisive vote the A. F. of L. convention has voted to require the members of three craft unions of brewery workers to join their respective international organizations. Although the issue of industrial unionism versus craft unionism was not sharply drawn in this case, the vote clearly reflects the preference of the delegates for the form of organization which represents the characteristic bargaining unit of the A. F. of L. That is, the trade or craft, as distinguished from the industrial union embracing workers of many trades and occupations, skilled and unskilled.

The complete structural alteration of the A. F. of L. that would be necessary if jurisdictional lines between trades were wiped out, and the industry made the basis of union organization, unquestionably helps to explain opposition to changes. Nevertheless, the deficiencies of the present system are so patent that in the long run self-preservation will require adaptation to the changed conditions of the present day. Large-scale industries, producing for mass consumption, employ hundreds of thousands of workers who can not be brought effectively into a system that cuts across industrial lines and provides no single responsible agency capable of bargaining with the employer.

Strongly organized craft unions may succeed in obtaining for their membership advantages denied to the unorganized. But they offer little protection to the unskilled. Moreover, they give rise to highly irritating jurisdictional disputes, which frequently result in strikes or costly adjustments to avoid strikes.

The very bargaining advantages which once made the craft unions a preferred type of organization have grown into abuses that have radically weakened the hold of the A. F. of L. over labor and prevented it from extending its influence. Under the encouragement given by section 7(a) of the National Recovery Act, however, the A. F. of L. has been given another opportunity to demonstrate whether it is capable of adapting its methods to the requirements of a changed industrial order.

If newcomers are regarded as "rubbish" (to quote the remarks of the head of the Teamsters' Union), to be swept aside unless they can qualify for membership in an established craft, the A. F. of L. will find that it has forfeited its chances for leading the new labor movement. Opposition is not unlikely to crystallize sentiment in favor of company unions as an alternative to industrial unions under A. F. of L. leadership.

Fraternities Wane.

The perennial question of the fraternity is in the news again. From New Haven comes the Yale Literary Magazine, draped in mourning, declaring that these much-discussed undergraduate organizations are dead. Some slight indications to the contrary are in evidence on the campus, it is true, and probably many an alumnus will bitterly resent the intimation that such a change could ever happen. In spite of that, it seems, the fraternity influence upon college life is definitely on the wane.

What is the reason for the decline of the fraternities, with their "gaudy homes in what must now be called Rotten Row," as the Lit calls them? Does it indicate an awakening of interest in the intellectual life? Does it mean that college students have suddenly become aware of the fact that colleges were built primarily for study and not for furthering a somewhat snobbish, pseudo-social existence? Or is it that college students, having seen themselves as others see them, through the medium of the movies, have become conscious of their childish exuberance and are seeking man's estate?

We have no way of answering these questions. And it hardly seems possible that the American college student has, without warning, come of age. The answers may be indicated more accurately, perhaps, in a brief dispatch from Swarthmore, one of the colleges where the undergraduates would willingly end fraternities which the alumni want preserved. There only 79 "bids" were made to freshmen, it is reported, as compared with 163 a year ago. This statistical information is followed by an explanation: "Financial reasons played a large part in keeping the number of pledges low."

The depression, it seems, is not without its blessings. Why, one Yale professor is quoted as saying, as he read the advance notices of the demise of the fraternities, that now he expects some of the undergraduates to read a few books this fall!

A man who thinks he can earn a salary of a half million dollars a year is foolish, but not nearly so foolish as the company that pays him.

Eighty-five per cent of the weather man's predictions come true. Statistics show this, but the weather doesn't.

Science teaches, as it seems to a layman, that everything is made up of electrons and electrons are made of nothing.

The problem of spending leisure wouldn't be so difficult if we had plenty of money to spend along with it.

Since repeal it's a little easier to get a drink, but it's no easier to get over it.

A Riddle In Chips.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have asked myself the following questions and, having received no satisfactory answer, I beg leave to pass them on to you.

Suppose that in the flush years preceding the depression bankers and investors had placed their money only in safe securities; since there were not enough of such securities to satisfy the investment demand, would not the surplus funds then have lain idle in the banks? And if the money had thus lain idle, would we not just that much sooner have found ourselves experiencing the same economic conditions we are undergoing today—i. e., funds piled up in banks and little being ventured into new business enterprises?

In other words, is reckless speculation necessary for prosperity? If so, why blame the bankers and investment houses for the crash that took place in 1929? The interest on investments simply had to be reinvested somehow, and evidently there were billions of it, for there are billions of 6 per cent bonds almost worthless today.

If it is true that the game stops when one player has all the chips, what method do the economists propose for restoring the chips to the other players in order that the game may start all over? E. T. M.

Homing Pigeons.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your October 4 editorial on "The Mystery of the Air" tells how "70 per cent of homing pigeons have vanished this year, have literally disappeared in midair."

Considering the great increase of invasive, trespassing hunters, and the many repeating guns with which they have armed themselves in recent years, and raided the farmers' poultry flocks, the only wonder is that the other 30 per cent of homing pigeons ever reached their homes. For homers probably make as good stews, potpies, &c., as the tame ones, or the former wild ones that are now entirely exterminated.

Unless our Federal and State game preservation laws are quickly strengthened and rigidly enforced, all the remainder of our game will soon be similarly exterminated.

D. WEBSTER GROP.

Washington, Oct. 5.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In view of your editorial of October 4, "A Mystery of the Air," I am writing to say that some ten days ago a pigeon, with a metal band on one foot and what seemed a vellum-colored one on the other, with a large-sized red number 32, was observed on our roof for two days. He was extremely tame, and could easily have been caught and examined had I had any idea it might have been one of the missing birds referred to, which, from his actions, I very well believe he may have been.

Having gathered from your article the owners of these "homing birds" are anxious as to what may have become of them, I am sending this note for what interest it may have for them.

Experimentation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When the Roosevelt Brain Trust Combine united the executive and the legislative branches of our Government to function as the United States Government Experiment Station, they surely started something, and the end is not yet.

These professorial experimentalists have alphabetized the Governmental agencies by using nearly all the 26 lettters in their new sign language. Fortunately, they were not obliged to operate under the original Greek alphabet, which consisted of only 16 letters.

Cruising Taxis.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May an autoist and pedestrian make the following seemingly radical suggestion?

That taxicab-cruising be permitted on F, G, and other lettered streets and prohibited on numbered north and south streets, where the traffic is greatest. Thus jams will be avoided and cabs will be available on business streets where most needed, especially in bad weather, or after public performances. CY CRUM.

Slow Airships.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Gen. Mitchell claims that Japan is our enemy and suggests that we build airships for protection.

I doubt whether airships would be of much use to us in time of war. They are so slow, clumsy and expensive that I wonder why they are considered at all.

And why pick Japan out as an enemy? What about the European nations that owe us, and won't pay us?

Gen. Mitchell and many other whites fear the Japanese because the Japanese are so much like the whites—progressive and perhaps a bit greedy.

The Acid Test.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was interested in the poetical definition of one who is not drunk, appearing in The Post of October 5 apropos a recent Post-Impressionist Column. A second verse is required to make the definition complete; and with a variation of the first verse, here it is:

He is not drunk who from the floor
Can rise again and drink one more;
But he is drunk who prostrate lies
And can not either drink or rise.

From Smoking To Snuff, And Back

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The use of tobacco had its origin among the North American savages. Sir John Hawkins remarked: "The smoke satisfieth hunger and therewith the natives live four or five days without any meat or drink." De Bry, in his history, affirmed they inhaled smoke "so strongly that it flows out of the mouth and nostrils, and by that means effectually drives out humors."

The early explorers of America tell easy victims to the practice, we are told. Harriot says: "We ourselves during the time we were there used to suck it after their manner, as also since our return, and have found many rare and wonderful experiments of the virtues thereof; of which the relation would require a volume of itself; the use of it by so many of late; men and women of great calling, and some learned physicians also, is sufficient witness."

Among the savages the medicine men were among the first to acquire the habit. In civilized countries the physicians were among its first victims. The doctors, we are informed, "seemed to take as much delight in writing of the sanitary uses of the herb as they did in smoking the balmy leaves of the plant."

In time the inhalation of tobacco smoke became general in England, as in Spain. When it was for many years cultivated for medicinal purposes solely, a contemporary said: "Men used it everywhere; some for wantonness, some for health's sake, and with that insatiable greediness past understanding they sucked the reeking, stenchy smoke thereof through an earthen pipe, which they presently blew out again through their nostrils; so that Englishmen's bodies were so delighted with the plant, that they seemed, as it were, degenerated into barbarians."

Raleigh was an inveterate smoker. Not merely did the giddy minded Queen Elizabeth permit him to smoke in her presence, but she went so far as to "use a walnut shell and straw in taking an occasional puff herself." Before her death she showed a desire to discountenance tobacco smoking, but it was not until her successor, James, ascended the throne, that royal edicts were brought to bear upon it.

Carlyle declared the parliament of Frederick the Great to be "a parliament reduced to its simplest expression with smoke instead of speech."

In England smoking was eventually abandoned by the better classes, and so pronounced became the sentiment against the practice that he who continued the practice was regarded as inferior. In 1773, Dr. Johnson wrote: "Smoking has gone out."

As smoking went out, snuffing came in. The profligate court of France was the home of this practice. We are informed that "the brilliant gayety and licentious excesses of the eighteenth century society was ushered in with snuff." The seventeenth century was a century of smoke. The eighteenth century was a century of snuff. "Ladies snuffed as artistically and vigorously as men."

Following the Battle of Waterloo, the House of Commons bestowed as rewards upon diplomats and soldiers $112,500 for snuff boxes alone.

The time consumed by a ceremonious snuff taker, it is said, varied from "one-tenth to a quarter of his whole existence." Napoleon was an inveterate snuff taker. He complained of the time thus wasted. He placed his snuff in his vest pocket for convenience. Frederick the Great had his pocket lined with tin.

When prejudice arose against snuff, some of the women began to use it as a dentifrice. In one of the journals appeared the following: "Of all the detestable, obnoxious, offensive, unnecessary and abominable imitations which dear woman is guilty of inheriting from fallen, depraved, corrupt and wicked man, that of snuff dipping stands preeminent."

By the year 1827, snuff-taking was practically taboo in society. But at this point the delicate cigarette was introduced and the inhaling of smoke gradually became fashionable in society. Conditions are found similar to the reign of Queen Elizabeth. Will history repeat itself? It is altogether probable that the cigarette will again become unpopular. If the sentiment against smoking, especially by women, in public places and at social gatherings increases, the time may come when snuff will again be resorted to. D. H. KRESS, M. D.,

The Post Impressionist

Chin-Plasters.

Postoffice, Thursday.

THEY'VE found a remedy for the inferiority complex.

But they're commercializing the find.

And there are a lot of chronic discouragers setting out to spoil it.

These conflicting circumstances create a serious situation. It's all very well to say that psychology has discarded Freud and his complexes. The masses have not yet heard about the discard.

We were born and brought up in a respectable, healthy town of 11,000 rugged individualists. Until Dr. Freud began to sell some of his books there, there wasn't a single inferiority complex in the place. But when we went back for a visit a while ago, it teemed with timidity. More than a score of old friends turned away at our approach.

So is a Washington friend whom—out of consideration for his complex—we'll shelter under the name of S. Smathers Smith. If he had any fault, it was a slight tendency to self-assertion. But he got a job with the NRA and had time to read Freud and have one interview with Gen. Johnson, when the latter was cracking down on everything. Ever after, the poor fellow went around simply cringing. He couldn't keep his chin up: it wore out a necktie a week. His eyes became furtive. He dropped the "Smathers" and signed himself "S. Smith." His colleagues called him "Slinker Smith." We were in despair about him.

Then, only last week, he astonished us. Dick Jarvis was with us. Smith shouted a greeting, eyes snapping, chin as high as his nose used to be. And why? Because he felt again that he was somebody. Gen. Johnson had scarcely left office, but Smith had received the inferiority-complex cure.

It was a simple card, yet it came from London:

PROMINENT PEOPLE:
A WORK OF REFERENCE.
O. Sidney Smith, Esq.
INVITATION.

Dear Sir:

We are publishing a volume of biographies of leading men and women of the day and, with your kind permission, should like to include your name as representative of your particular sphere of life. We trust you will kindly send us a few notes on your career, &c., from which our editorial staff will draft a suitable text. This book will be available to all libraries throughout the world, although the price will be but one guinea. We should be pleased to provide you with six copies at a 10 per cent discount.

With best compliments,
Yours faithfully,
EDITORS.

Now, you'd think that anybody with a heart would have left Smith alone in his glory. But if Dick Jarvis has a heart, it's one of those hearts that feel they can always do good by telling unpleasant truths. He said: "Humph."

"What do you mean, 'humph?'" demanded Smith combatively.

"I mean humph; I mean I don't want to see you edged out of any real coin," said Dick. And then he cross-examined Smith: "What is your 'sphere in life?' Do you honestly believe there's anybody in London who considers you a Prominent Person? Do you suppose for a minute these publishers will include anybody who doesn't subscribe for six copies? Don't you understand that they got your name, along with hundreds of others, out of some list of U. S. Government employes? Don't you know it's all a racket? Why, wherever they got your name, they didn't even get it right! Since when were you 'O. Sidney Smith,' anyhow?"

A crowd gathered. Somebody said it was a heart attack. But the ambulance took Smith to St. Elizabeth's.

* * *

So you see there really is a cure for the inferiority complex. And you see it is being commercialized. But don't the commercializers deserve their money? And ought their patients to be undeceived?

OnCalling of Names

New York City is enjoying a Gilbert and Sullivan season, with a famed London company reviving memories of Savoyards of former years. Once again the tunes delight the ear and the knowing absurdities of the lyrics restore chuckles. There is an element of timelessness about the buffoonery that is familiar even to us of the Middle West, who must be content with the radio and phonograph to hear the operas.

The other day "Ruddigore" was played. This being a political season, with candidates saying rather rude things about each other, one is reminded of poltics of the older days and the epithets that once supplied the place of argument. No politician, however, could consider his vocabulary complete unless it contained the devastating names that the ancestors of Ruddigore applied to him.

"Coward, poltroon, shaker, squeamer,
Blockhead, sluggard, dullard, dreamer,
Shirker, shuffler, crawler, creeper,
Sniffler, snuffler, waller, weeper,
Earthworm, maggot, tadpole, weevil."

The lines are offered as helpful to those in street corner debates when, tightly cornered on logic, they need the broad, frontal attack of name-calling.

Pessimistic Mr. Wallace

IT seems strange that none of the reviewers of Secretary Wallace's latest book, "New Frontiers," hit upon the most striking characteristic of his writing, or speaking. They all refer, whether they agree with his philosophy or not, to his clarity of expression, his candor, his honesty. The high note, I think, is the utter futility with which Mr. Wallace seems to view life.

BARGERON

Although he does not say so, one gets the impression after listening to or reading Mr. Wallace that regardless of what we do we are sunk. Even if we take and keep 40,000,000 or so acres out of cultivation, we will still be up against it, and there are a lot of other things we should do, which he admits we aren't going to do, and then if we were to do them they would still not be enough.

To repeat, he does not say these things, but one is left, inescapably it seems to me, with this very gloomy impression.

One lays down the Secretary's book with a feeling of sadness, of despair. What can one do about a world in which there is so much wickedness, and even if he were to do anything, what would come of it? A sense of futility grips him, an oppressive tightening of the muscles about the heart. Oh, oh, what will come of it all, and what would it be worth if something were to come of it.

I was satisfied after reading "New Frontiers" that Mr. Wallace had just turned 40. There is the difficult period in man's life. Prof. Pitkin sought to get man over this critical turn with his book, "Life Begins at Forty," but it was too apparent that the professor was trying mostly to cheer himself up, that his book, rather than being convincing, reflected one man trying to keep a stiff upper lip.

• • • •

It is at this point of life that man gets his greatest doubts, when the great pangs of uncertainty and questioning of oneself pounce down with a grim thud. It's when he first begins to think of wearing overshoes to keep his feet dry. He thinks of the increasing number of his friends who, as the clergy say, have passed on. With staggering bluntness he realizes that he has turned the corner of life, that it is half gone, to look at the matter most optimistically.

Then he appraises the years that have gone before and asks himself what he has accomplished, which is immediately followed by the question of what it has amounted to if he has accomplished anything and what it will amount to if he accomplishes still more. What's the use. What does any of it amount to? What is the purpose of life anyway?

• • • •

This sort of thinking about the Secretary particularly frightens me because I am approaching the critical point and already the pain is setting in. But I had assumed it would not last long. I had been warned to watch for it so its coming was not unexpected at all. A few months before 40 and a few months on the other side I had expected to be the duration of the attack.

But, for crying out loud, the Secretary is 46. If pessimism stays with me that long I'll just die; that's what I will do.

I think I shall go back to my favorite author, Prof. Tugwell. There is no pessimism or despair about him. He is only 43, but he has got over his change of life unscathed. He is as gay, as happy as a new-born babe. For him life has really begun.

And if it will make the Secretary feel any better I'll confide that a lot of people are saying of him: "Secretary of Agriculture at 46, President at 50." And if this doesn't help, he should try going to a country club on Saturday night.

Gen. Johnson Treated For Cold at Hospital

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, retiring head of NRA, was treated for a cold and sinus infection yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital.

He is expected to return to his office today. His resignation will become effective Monday.

Johnson has been a patient at Walter Reed several times in the past year. His general health improved during a recent extended vacation.

Dionne Quintuplets Get First Sun Bath

Callander, Ontario, Oct. 10 (AP).—The famous Dionne quintuplet sisters today spent almost an hour out in the sunshine, acquiring a tan to match their curly brown hair and their eyes, which also are turning brown.

The change in the color of their eyes, Dr. A. R. Dafoe, their physician, said, adds a sparkle to them. He said he believed all five would have deep brown eyes when they are older. The children's hair also is growing darker, the doctor said.

Inquiry Asks Reform Of Investment Trusts

(Associated Press.)

The Senate Banking Committee, in a sixth report on its long Wall Street investigation, yesterday hit at investment trusts and holding companies as instruments for concentrating control of wealth in the hands of a few.

As a remedy, it proposed strict Federal regulation—extending the control of the Government still further over the money centers.

Citing some activities of J. P. Morgan & Co., Dillon, Read & Co., the Insulls, the Van Swearingens and others in substantiation of its criticism, the committee said the proper corrective might be an act requiring all such corporations to have a Federal charter.

"The cure for our corporate ailments, circumvention of the law, investment-trust and holding company abuses, and interlocking directorates, may lie in a National incorporation act," said the report, written under the direction of Ferdinand Pecora.

Such legislation, expected by some to be put forward by the Administration next session, would require corporations doing an interstate business to incorporate under Government control instead of getting their charters from the States, as at present.

Held Controlling Wealth.

The committee held that both investment trusts and holding companies were equally liable for accelerating the concentration of the control of wealth. The vast resources of Morgan & Co. were cited in this connection.

But, it reported, the trusts and holding concerns in operation had lent themselves to operations which, Baldly stated, included something close to mulcting the public.

Some specific charges were that:

Dillon, Read & Co. and its associates through the formation of the United States & Foreign Securities Corporation and other investment trusts invested only $5,100,000 to obtain control of $90,000,000. Of this latter sum, $75,000,000 had been furnished by the public.

Dillon, Read and other concerns made excessive profits through investment trust and holding company operations.

The Goldman-Sachs Trading Corporation in financing the Frosted Foods Co. in 1929 showed a striking instance of "incompetency or deficiency of integrity of purpose." The public, the report said, furnished approximately 9 per cent of $25,000,000 used in this financing and the trading corporation lost over 50 per cent of it in two years.

Unloading of Securities Cited.

The committee contended there were instances "where the directors and persons controlling investment trusts succeeded in unloading their own securities upon the investment companies." This was true, the committee said, in the United States and Foreign Securities Corporation's operations and in the case of Continental Shares, Inc., dominated by Cyrus S. Eaton, of Cleveland.

It asserted also that the Van Sweringens through holding companies and investment trusts acquired —with the public's money—control of a vast network of railroads by a "shoe string" investment. The original Van Sweringen investment was said to be only $1,000,000.

"The American Investment Trust," the report said, "merely superficially resembled the British trusts, for the very factors which accounted for the success of the British trusts (diversification of investment, disinterested management, conservative investments, and standardized management charges) were disregarded by the organizers of the American Investment Trusts."

'Ulterior Motives' Charged.

From the beginning, the committee concluded, American investment trusts "degenerated into a convenient medium of the dominant persons to consummate transactions permeated with ulterior motives."

"The organizers of investment trusts," it continued, "always succeeded in devising a financial setup which allocated to them a most substantial equity in the company with a minimum of cash investment."

The formation of the Insull Utility Investments, Inc., and Corporation Securities of Chicago, by the Insulls, and the United Corporation by Morgan & Co., were cited as examples of investment trusts which were in reality "holding companies."

"The first important use of the holding company," the report asserted, "was circumvention of the Sherman anti-trust law. • • •

"In the past decade, however, promoters have perverted the use of the holding company. The primary motivation for the organization of the holding company has now become the development and financial promotion of security selling schemes.

"The pragmatic result has been that holding companies have not created any economic wealth, but merely have facilitated the concentration of the control of wealth."

Jewish Round Table Sessions Open Oct. 17

The Jewish Community Center will inaugurate its round table sessions at 8:30 p. m. on Wednesday. The group will be addressed on Wednesday, October 24, by Sanford Bates, United States superintendent of prisons.

Speakers on future programs will be J. M. Keith, of the division of investigation; Leonard C. White, of the Civil Service Commission; Joel Wolfsohn, executive secretary of the National Power Authority, and Carlisle Bargeron, of The Washington Post.

Lebrun Shakes Hand Of Wounded General

Marseille, France, Oct. 10 (AP).—President Albert Lebrun called at Michel Levy Hospital at 2:30 p. m. today (9:30 a. m., Eastern standard time) to shake hands with Gen. Alfonse Joseph Georges, wounded when an assassin killed King Alexander of Yugoslavia and Foreign Minister Louis Barthou of France here yesterday.

The president wished Georges an early recovery before leaving the hospital to accompany Alexnader's body to the waterfront. Hospital attaches expressed the belief Georges would recover barring unforeseen complications.

Mr. Hoover Talks With Mr. Byrd.

("Former President Hoover and Admiral Byrd Talk Over Radio."—Headline.)

Admiral Byrd—Hello!

Mr. Hoover—Hello! Who is this?

Admiral Byrd—This is Admiral Byrd.

Mr. Hoover—Where are you?

Admiral Byrd—I'm in the ice pack.

Mr. Hoover—So am I!

• • • •

Admiral Byrd—How's the weather up there?

Mr. Hoover—Terrible. How is it with you?

Admiral Byrd—I've been in a blizzard here for four days.

Mr. Hoover—That's nothing; I was in one for four years!

• • • •

Admiral Byrd—We've been through a frightful ordeal down here, but I think our observations will be of great importance to the world.

Mr. Hoover—That's what I thought! Say, what is the average temperature in Little America?

Admiral Byrd—Oh, about 20 below zero! We have it 50 below quite often.

Mr. Hoover—Why, you lucky stiff!

• • • •

Admiral Byrd—Lucky? Don't you think 50 below is pretty darned cold?

Mr. Hoover—In the last election 50 below would have seemed like a heat wave to me.

• • • •

Mr. Hoover—Nobody knows.

Admiral Byrd—Can't you send out exploration parties to find out?

Mr. Hoover—Yes, but nobody except Democrats are allowed to man the dog sleds.

• • • •

Admiral Byrd—Have you had the long winter darkness yet?

Mr. Hoover—I'm right in the middle of it now. I hear you spent six months in complete solitude in an icebound camp.

Admiral Byrd—Yes. You ought to try it some time.

Mr. Hoover—I'm trying it now.

• • • •

Admiral Byrd—Well, I'm glad to hear from you. I'm going to try to get out of here as soon as the ice breaks up.

Mr. Hoover—So am I. Where are you going after that?

Admiral Byrd—I don't know.

Mr. Hoover—Well, we have a lot in common.

Admiral Byrd—So long. I'll see you when I get back where it's warm and comfortable.

Mr. Hoover—Whaddya mean, warm and comfortable?

As Quillen Looks at It

Sport Will End When Loser, Winner Get Same Reward.

By Robert Quillen.

When Walter Johnson slouched out to his old familiar place to save a ball game and win a championship, the frenzied crowd roared its approval and admiration.

When the star half back trots out on the playing field, every watching partisian feels a quickening surge of emotion that is closely akin to adoration.

Why does the crowd roar when the star appears? Because it dearly loves the man who knows his business. It delights in the skill of an expert.

Why was Babe Ruth able to command the largest salary in baseball when he no longer stood at the top? Other players were better hitters and faster in the field; others knocked more home runs. Why did Ruth deserve more pay?

Because his name was "catchy" and easy to remember; because the newspapers had given him worldwide fame; because he had been the best in his field; but, chiefly and finally, because thousands would pay to watch him play.

He deserved more money because his presence attracted money. The public's admiration made him an asset.

Sometimes the watching crowd throws bouquets or tosses coins to express its approval; sometimes it sends gifts. More frequently, under present conditions, it pays tribute to the expert by buying tickets or consenting to his larger fees.

What is the signficance of it?

It means that reasonable men feel a natural impulse to reward the superior man according to his merit.

That is good sportsmanship; that is fair play; that is human nature as it functions in present-day America.

Theorists may argue the justice of equal rewards for all endeavor, but the crowds will not have it so. If the man is a winner, let him have the prize.

There are some who call the winners "lucky stiffs" and "fortune's favorites," but those who have struggled to win success, in any trade or profession or business, know full well that the competition is cruel, hard and every upward step a proof of superior merit. The few reach the top at last because they have something that others lack. They are experts who know their business.

And so long as Americans keep their sanity, unenvious justice will give the larger reward to the man who does the better job.

Strasburg, Va., Oct. 10 (Spl.).—Mrs. W. W. Strickley has been elected president of Stover Camp, United Daughters of the Confederacy, here.

Other officers for the ensuing year include Mrs. C. W. Cooley and Mrs. James Wise, vice presidents; Mrs. Maynard Artz, secretary; Mrs. A. L. Hoover, treasurer; Mrs. F. E. Grove, registrar, and Mrs. F. H. Chandler, historian. Members of the chapter's nominating committee included Misses Frances Jenkins, Mona Stover and Mary Fletcher.

Two Pedestrians Hurt In Downtown Crashes

Two men, struck by automobiles on downtown streets, were recovering in Emergency Hospital last night.

Claude Furr, 56, of the 300 block of E street northwest, hit near Fourth street and John Marshall place northwest, suffered severe lacerations and bruises. John D. Vansant, 58, of the 500 block of Third street northwest, received injuries when struck by a taxicab at Third and E streets northwest. Neither driver was held.

No End of Books

Bertrand Russell Displays a Century of Politics in Europe and America With Wit and Pith.

POLITICAL history in Bertrand Russell's hands, is as "dry" as a juicy beefsteak and as "dull" as an evening at the "Chauve-Souris."

THEO. HALL.

Most other writers examining the very kernel of our modern problem—how much individual freedom must be abandoned in order to preserve, by organization, the safety and well-being of the world?—would have given us a book handsome enough for the parlor table, and not interesting enough to sit up nights over. It's far otherwise with this English iconoclast, school-master, and earl. "Freedom versus Organization" (Norton, $3.50) is a large-minded, thorough, and witty study of the political ideas of Europe and America operating from 1814 to 1914, fascinating and stimulating as few books can be at the same itme. If you would gain a perspective on modern history sharply etched and memorable enough to stay with you, Russell's 451 pages are worth a week of your evenings.

• • • •

He sensed, wisely enough, that we cannot understand the world's contemporary problem until we see how we inherited it. So he begins with the principle of legitimacy ("Divine Right" of rulers) which imbued Metternich and the Congress of Vienna, a principle which went to smash in the World War. The Liberal sentiment of the century raised up nations—and insisted upon freedom between them, thus annulling the embryonic international organization of the Vienna Congress, and leaving us in a state, as respects nations, of virtual anarchy. The Philosophical Radicals of the century dwelt upon utility, helped to make nations highly organized within themselves—and that tended to bring the outside anarchy into more painful relief.

And on every hand, faster and faster, the machine age rose like the tide around King Canute. Says Russell: "Liberals and Radicals alike failed to understand the part played by organization in a world ruled by scientific technique. Through this one failure, in spite of a great increase in wealth, intelligence, and happiness, the century which they attempted to guide ended in disaster."

His final, crucial word is this: "It is not by pacifist sentiment, but by world-wide economic organization, that civilized mankind is to be saved from collective suicide."

• • • •

These ideas are not new. What is unique is Russell's fresh and lively narrative of the men and notions of the time which supports his conclusions. Bismarck and Pierpont Morgan, Washington and John Stuart Mill, Rockefeller and Marx—to all these typical figures he brings an almost joyous play of intelligence and pithy phrases.

When he speaks of the English provincial quiet during the Napoleonic wars, he recalls Jane Austen's characters and their indifference to newspapers. When he would show the power of American big business, he quotes a satirical remark from the magazine life: "God made the world in 4004 B C., but it was reorganized in 1901 by James J. Hill, J. Pierpont Morgan, and John D. Rockefeller." So cutting are some of Russell's paragraphs that you might call the book "gossip plus brains."

But there is a steady, dispassionate purpose here to point out that if the world has become appallingly complex, man must yet summon up some intelligence to attempt a solution. He has always done that, and he always can. "Freedom versus Organization" is a book to place beside Lewis Mumford's "Technics and Civilization." Where they are weakest—the first in the facts of the machine and the second in practical politics—they supplement each other admirably.

• • • •

That dour and aloof Prometheus of thought, Thorstein Veblen (not really dour nor really aloof, but made so because the world could not catch up with him), has been called "the last man who knew everything." Economics, sociology, anthropology and philosophy were his main lines, and yet a graduate student in music and art could not but feel himself outdistanced. But it is, nevertheless, a pure and cosmic irony that Veblen, born in 1857, the son of an immigrant Norwegian carpenter and living his life in obscure teaching at Chicago, Stanford and Missouri, should have left behind eleven books which form one of the two or three chief ferments of American thought. So remote he seems, and yet so impressive is his legend, that to note he died in 1929 is like finding a dinosaur alive in our era.

• • • •

With a kind of gleeful savagery, Veblen flayed the skin off our most habitual beliefs. If you find Lewis Mumford or Stuart Chase attacking "conspicuous consumption" and "conspicuous waste," they got it from Veblen. When the Technocrats talked of the engineer in society, they were following Veblen. Long before A. A. Berle, jr., and Ferdinand Pecora looked into high finance, Veblen had plotted the broad outlines of what they would find.

Reading Veblen is like a taste for ripe olives—you may have to develop it. His style is personal and intricate. But begin with his "Theory of the Leisure Class," which comes in a Modern Library edition ($.95), with an introduction by Stuart Chase. If the inoculation takes, you will then enjoy his last work—"Essays in Our Changing Order,"—edited by Leon Ardzrooni (Viking, $3), a series of papers on everything from women's fashions to Soviet Russia, all with his characteristic original and sardonic flair.

Five years gone, Veblen is still half a century before his time. But many people think we will catch up with him yet.

Pickle Famine

Rain Deprives St. Marys of Its Tomato Crop.

Leonardtown, Md., Oct. 10 (Spl.).—Green tomato pickle will not be among the things the farmers will have to enjoy this winter in St. Marys County.

Because of continual rain the tomato plants have stopped blooming and have produced no green tomatoes for the pickle makers.

The rural women generally put up large quantities of green tomato pickle each year in St. Marys and southern Maryland.

"Jane Eyre."

In the very brief life of the four Brontes, Charlotte, Emily, Anne, and Branwell, despite the absence of those two blessings—money and health—enough writing was accomplished to insure immortality for all; and their lives were more romantic and appealing than their novels. After the lapse of nearly a century, the public interest in this family is far more intense and widespread than ever before; and a new, magnificent edition of their complete works is completed this year.

Charlotte was the only one to achieve success in their day and generation; and although it seems clear now that Emily, both in her poems and in her strange novel, "Wuthering Heights," was the towering genius of the family, still it is easy to see why the story "Jane Eyre" was so successful and why it still has more readers than the works of her sisters.

I have just read through again "Jane Eyre" (pronounced "air"). I had not read it through since 1907.

The style of the book is an ill-fitting garment; so old-fashioned and elaborate as often to appear overwhelmingly absurd. It is as if Virginia Woolf should write in the manner of Lydia Sigourney; or as if a Newport lady of fashion should dress in crinoline.

But the fact is that although the formalities of the English style both in description and in dialogue, are intolerable, I could not let the book alone. As a story it is superb. The excitement maintained by the plot, the reality of the characters, the intensity of passion, combine to hold one's attention, and fully account for the vitality of this novel. It will be read for years and years after nearly all of our highly-praised contemporary books are totally forgotten.

Jane Eyre herself is as attractive to the reader as she was to Mr. Rochester; she is deliberately made by her creator without beauty and without physical charm; yet one does not wonder at all that she is fiercely loved by two men so different as the world-scarred millionaire Rochester and that pious prig, St. John Rivers. She is one of the most bewitching heroines of English fiction.

Cumberland Golf Champ Enters Finals

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 10 (Spl.).—Mrs. Fred T. Small, defending champion, won her way into the semifinals of the championship flight of the women's fall golf tournament at the Cumberland Country Club yesterday by defeating Mrs. Lloyd J. Lanich, winner of the club's spring tournament, by the margin of 7 and 6 in an 18-hole match.

Destroyer Farragut Anchors Here Oct. 25

The U. S. S. Farragut, first of the postwar destroyers of the United States Navy to be placed in commission, will come to Washington October 25 to participate in observance of Navy Day, it was announced yesterday at the Navy Department.

Under command of Commander Elliott Buckmaster, U. S. N., the Farragut will remain at the Navy Yard until October 29. She will be inspected by Navy Secretary Swanson and other ranking officials.

West Virginia Club Formed by Democrats

The West Virginia Democratic Club was organized last night at a meeting in the Willard Hotel, for the purpose of rallying 6,500 Democratic absentee voters at the polls election day.

Officers elected are Robert C. Goff, Huntington, president; Crawford Sloan, Salem, first vice president; Miss Abelyne Rush, Clarksburg, second vice president; Miss Mary V. Hanna, Wheeling, recording secretary; Miss Mary Kenny, Romney, corresponding secretary, and Fred Isenaur, Martinsburg, treasurer.

Mrs. Eva J. Updergrove Succumbs to Injuries

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 10 (Spl.).—Mrs. Eva J. Updergrove, 21, wife of David J. Updergrove, 884 West Lombard street, Baltimore, died in Annapolis Emergency Hospital today from injuries received Saturday afternoon when the automobile in which she was riding overturned on the Crain highway, near Millersville, Ann Arundel County.

Mrs. Grace Mayette, also of Baltimore, sister of Mrs. Updergrove, also injured in the accident, is recovering at the hospital. Mr. Updergrove was driving the car and in endeavoring to pass a truck a wheel sank into a soft siding, causing the car to overturn.

Cigarette Price Minimum Stays By NRA Edict

'2-for-25' Order Follows Tobacco Dealers' Request.

Minimum prices of 13 cents a package or two for 25 cents on popular banrds of cigarettes were extended yesterday until January 11 by NRA.

Although this was the first action of the new recovery administrative board bearing on price-fixing, it was not regarded as definitely indicating its policy on that controversial subject.

Officials explained the extension was necessary to permit completion of a survey of conditions in the industry instituted by the research and planning division upon issuance of the original price order 90 days ago by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, retiring administrator.

Tobacco retailer sought the order to prevent department stores from using cigarettes as "loss leaders" to draw customers.

Earlier, the Blue Eagle governors assured the bituminous coal industry the price-fixing provisions of its code remained in effect and would not be altered without a hearing.

Coal operators were reassured when they protested in large numbers after Donald R. Richberg, recovery coordinator, hinted NRA would gradually lift many price-fixing and production limitation requirements.

Meanwhile, the administrative board forwarded to President Roosevelt a sealed report by a special committee which investigated proposals for reduction of the cotton-garment industry work week rom 40 to 36 hours without any cut in pay. A White House announcement within a few days will decide whether the hours are to be changed.

A. S. Fedde, practice and procedure committee chairman of the New York State Society of Public Accountants, was named to assist Leon Henderson, NRA research and planning chief, in auditing code authority budgets.

White and Colored Wage Differences Under NRA Probed

Differentials in wages between white and colored factory workers under the NRA were under inquiry following a hearing before the Board of Industrial Appeals in which Tuskegee Institute, represented by G. Lake Imes, secretary to Principal R. R. Moton, and the Southland Manufacturing Co. appeared favoring the differential, in opposition to Labor Department and NRA officials.

The petition for code exemption denied twice previously, aimed to allow the company to operate a factory in Montgomery, Ala., with 238 colored women workers at a wage less than that provided by the textile code until the efficiency of the factory has equalled that of similar ones employing white women.

Secretary of Labor Perkins said the petition should be denied as contrary to the ends sought by NRA. Lieut. Lawrence Oxley, colored Labor Department official, pointed out that the Reliance Corporation, of which the company is a subsidiary, employs 6,700 white women with no complaint of inefficiency, and less than 250 colored women with a general complaint of inefficiency.

Mrs. Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau, Department of Labor, protested allowance of exemption on the ground that no comparative study of efficiency of the women involved had been made. Another department official pointed out the unrest of competitors in the textile field because of establishment of the factory with colored women workers in Montgomery at a wage less than that received by white women.

The Tuskegee representative pleaded for the exemption as in accord with the spirit of the code, declaring the color question was not involved, but merely the question of relative efficiency.

Methodist Session Set October 17-21

19 Nations' Delegates to Attend Meeting Here.

Representing 19 nations, delegates from many parts of the world will attend the annual general executive meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Foundry Methodist Church October 17 to 21.

Miss Michi Kawai, known as one of Japan's outstanding women leaders and former National secretary of the Japanese Y. W. C. A. will be one of the principal speakers. More than 1,000 delegates are expected to attend.

Amplifiers are being installed in church assembly rooms where the sessions will be held. All the meetings, with the exception of the committees', will be open to the public. The Roosevelt Hotel will be headquarters for the delegates.

Rival Parties Hold Caucuses Together

Falls City, Nebr., Oct. 10 (AP).—Democrats and Republicans of Ohio Precinct, near here, apparently have no animosity toward each other.

Members of both parties called the precinct caucus the same night at the same hour and in the same location, the voting place in Ohio Precinct. Members of both parties visited together and took turn about holding meetings. Each party was assisted by comments of members of the other party during the caucuses.

Radio Waves and Ripples

By George M. Adams, jr.

A NUMBER of ideas currently being unfolded in radio as new or different seem to have been born several years ago in the brain of Ronald Dawson, soldier of fortune and director of WOL's Northern Dramatic Company.

"There's really nothing new in radio . . . it's only a matter of presentation," is the philosophy of stocky, mild-mannered Mr. Dawson. Born in Johannesburg, South Africa, Dawson has toured the world somewhat, with stopovers at Oxford, war service with the London Scottish and more recently, acting, writing and radio directing and producing.

"Something different," is the summary of his offering tonight at 6:45, when his WOL players enact a neighborhood movie house atmosphere with dramatized news flashes, comedy and main feature. Listeners will hear just what they might in dropping into an ordinary playhouse.

* * * *

THERE must be a spinnet pining away somewhere in the attics of Washington. And if there is, N. B. C. would like to borrow it for use in its broadcast of "Little Women," since the first musical effect called for in the script is the faint, tinkle-like sound of that quaint, pre-Civil War instrument, seen in the best homes, then, but now only in museums or but now only in museums or private collections.

Of course, producers of "Little Women" might descend to deception by stuffing newspaper under the wires of a piano . . . the sound produced thereby is similar to the soft notes of a spinnet. But assured that the musical appreciation of the present generation would be served and that historical accuracy is desirable, N. B. C. would like the loan of one good spinnet with the promise to take the best care of it during broadcasts of "Little Women." Shannon Allen, who is supervising the broadcast for WRC, will receive spinnet offers.

THOSE relentless rumblings you heard Wednesday night through your loudspeaker from the Byrd Expedition were directly responsible last week in rescuing two men from a cruel, cold death.

It seems Walter Nielsen and John Sorensen, of Penn Yan, N. Y., managed to get locked in a refrigerator of a meat market in that town. While they passed the time jumping up and down to keep warm and shouting to get out, Mrs. Sorensen got to wondering why her husband didn't come home to listen to the Byrd broadcast as he usually did. She got pretty worried, and, after 45 minutes of waiting, sauntered to the meat market. Arriving, she heard the muffled shouts of her husband and Mr. Nielsen.

WHEN the casting was completed for "Little Women," due on WRC at 630 p. m. Monday, Mr. Allen and this department were no end surprised and quite chirpy over the fact that it seems to be practically an "Airbreaks" show. Four out of five actresses assigned for parts came to N. B. C.'s notice through appearances with that Saturday night gathering under Phil Coney's baton.

Jo, the impulsive tomboy, has been assigned to Betty Dale, a young, naturally charming lassie whose only acting has been with local high school dramatic plays. Alice Ruffner, who plays Marmee, impressed Mr. Allen through her sympathetic reading of poetry. She is middle-aged and journeyed one night from an outlying section of Washington to appear on "Airbreaks." Robin Reynolds, who plays Amy, had studied voice at finishing school and done high school dramatic bits. Virginia Cathcart, from Florida, is vivacious and does impersonations. She'll play Beth.

The only really experienced actress is Laura Staggers, who has made more than 1,000 radio appearances with a dozen stations over a period of four years.

IRENE BEASLEY, the "long, tall girl from Dixie," who less than a month ago drew 23,432 votes from listeners as Radio Queen for 1934, headlines the Earle's stage show starting tomorrow.

Runner-up in the contest was Dorothy Page. Others who placed on the final list, in the order named, were Mona Van, Jessica Dragonette, Gertrude Neisen, Leah Ray, Rosemary Lane, Olga Albani, Harriet Hilliard, Annette Hanshaw and Ruth Etting. Kate Smith was twenty-sixth.

"THE CONNECTICUT YANKEE" gave William Gaxton, stage star, practice at tilting with knights, wizards and wily enchanters. Tonight he'll reenact the same role as Mark Twain's droll piece is musically presented, in tabloid form, on Paul Whiteman's Music Hall at 10 o'clock.

Catholics Urge Relief Program

Ask Curb on Government Charity Spending; Ryan Is Reelected.

Cincinnati, Oct. 10 (AP).—The National Conference of Catholic Charities threw its influence today behind a permanent program of unified work-relief throughout the United States.

Declaring "it is not the American system of life to depend completely on Government for physical sustenance," it expressed belief that the Federal Government can not continue the financial burden of direct relief.

The conclusions were expressed in a formal statement of the diocesan directors of Catholic charities in the United States. Their statement constitutes the social program of the conference for the year ahead.

Ending business gatherings of the three-day conference, delegates reelected the Most Rev. James H. Ryan, rector of Catholic University, Washington, as their honorary president, and reelected as president the very Rev. Mgr. R. Marcellus Wagner, of Cincinnati. Peoria, Ill., was selected as the meeting place for 1935, and Seattle for 1936.

Officers reelected included the Rev. John O'Grady, of Washington, secretary; Miss Alice Elizabeth Padgett, of Washington, assistant secretary; the Rev. Francis Mellen, of Washington, field secretary, and Thomas F. Farrell, of New York, treasurer.

Recital Arranged By Chilean Pianist

Rosita Renard Will Play Tonight in Virginia.

Rosita Renard, Chilean pianist, will give a recital this evening at 8 o'clock in Arlington Hall, Virginia. Director of piano in the National Conservatory of Chile, she is on leave of absence, and will leave shortly for Vienna to continue her studies on a governmental subsidy.

Senorita Renard's career has been fostered by the Chilean government since she was 13, when she was sent to Berlin to study with Martin Krause. While there she won the Liszt prize and a diploma of honor. She has given many concerts in South America, and has appeared in this country as soloist with the Philharmonic and Boston orchestras.

Her program tonight will be as follows: Prelude and fugue in D major (Bach-Busoni), Prelude (Mendelssohn), nocturne (Ching), "Feux Follets" (Liszt), "Jardins sous la Pluie" and "Clair de Lune" (Debussy), "Blue Danube" waltzes (Strauss-Schulz-Evler). Senorita Renard will be joined by her sister, Blanca, in a performance of Anton Arenski's suite for two pianos, Op. 15.

"It's good judgment..to judge your whiskey by the Stars"

"G & W Star Whiskies are served at finest clubs, hotels and bars."

Read the label before you buy any whiskey

The United States Government has wisely ruled that every bottle of whiskey must bear a label which tells you exactly what that bottle contains. Therefore be sure you read it before you buy. Compare the back labels of G & W Star Whiskies with others costing twenty-five to fifty cents more per bottle.

"Compare G & W labels with any other brand. Then you'll know why Star whiskies are finer."

YOU may or may not know that the choicest whiskies in the world, domestic or imported, are blends. In the finest clubs, bars, restaurants and homes, blends are universally preferred and served.

Blends were created centuries ago because it was found that the secret of a fine, smooth, palatable whiskey was to blend it with a liberal and generous base of richly aged and bonded stocks. Obviously, the older the base, the better the blend.

For hundreds of years the world's most famous distillers have built their reputations on blends . . . G & W Seven Star . . . Five Star . . . and Two Star themselves are proof of public preference for whiskies with the quality and the flavor and the guarantee of age.

So, for your own benefit and enjoyment, don't confuse "straight run" whiskies with those blended with the aged and bonded aristocrats of Time!

Remember, whiskies made "overnight" and bottled almost as soon as they are made can never be as smooth and full flavored as blends whose base has mellowed and matured for years in oak casks under Government supervision.

"Blended with aged and bonded stocks nearly six years old! That means smoothness, mellowness and flavor."

G & W Base Whiskies are nearly Six Years Old

And don't forget! . . . to the flavor of nearly six years in the cask, you must add the skill of 102 years in the business, for the stocks used in G & W Star Whiskies are matured not only by Time, but by Century-Old Experience.

"JUDGE YOUR WHISKEY BY THE STARS"

G & W SEVEN STAR FIVE STAR TWO STAR

MARVIN & SNEAD, Inc., 1612 K St. NW.

G & W STAR WHISKIES ARE NOT EXPENSIVE

In G & W Seven Star . . . Five Star . . . and Two Star you get three variations in blend to suit variations in taste and in pocketbook.

When you ask for G & W Star Whiskies at your dealer's you will find them moderately priced.

John D., Sr., Arrives At His Florida Estate

Ormond Beach, Fla., 10 (AP).—John D. Rockefeller, sr., appearing to be in good health, arrived today at his winter home, The Casements, after a train trip from Lakewood, N. J.

"I am indeed glad to be back," he said. He was lifted off the train in a chair. He entered an automobile and was driven to his estate.

Bee Shippers Win Right to Use Mails, But Farley Isn't Stung

Buzz of Excitement Is Caused by Postal Reform.

By Harry Ferguson.

A reform wave swept over Washington yesterday and before you could say "New Deal" the postal regulations were amended to make it legal to ship honey bees through the mails.

That brings the Postoffice Department safely through the most severe crisis it has had since about six months ago, when a man out in the Middle-West lost an embalmed whale in transit. For weeks he harbored a personal grudge against Postmaster General Jim Farley and threatened to stuff the ballot box with votes against the Democrats in 1936 unless somebody found his whale.

It finally was explained to this gent that the postoffice people aren't responsible for whales and he was placated to the extent that he promised to cast only one vote against the Democrats.

All was serene in the Postoffice Department until yesterday when—wham! Out came the honey bee amendment. You might say it caused a buzz of excitement.

While this unquestionably is a victory for the millions of Americans who have been yearning to ship honey bees through the mails, don't get the idea that the Postoffice Department let down all the bars.

You can't put honey bees in an envelope, stick a 3-cent stamp on it and hope to get any place. You've got to build a cage, a very special kind of cage, and you've got to provide the type of food that the Postoffice Department has decided is good for honey bees about to take a train trip.

Well, there's plenty of trouble ahead. It is reliably reported that bees manufacture honey. Suppose a cage weighs 3 pounds when it leaves Kalamazoo, and before the train gets to Oshkosh the bees have manufactured a pound of honey. Whoever shipped the cage will be guilty of placing insufficient postage on the cage and of attempting to defraud the United States of America.

Then one of two things will happen. Either the man who receives the cage will have to pay the extra postage or the bees will be returned to the shipper. Anyway you look at it, Jim Farley doesn't intend to get stung.

Scottsboro Records On Way to Washington

Montgomery, Ala., Oct. 10 (AP).—Gen. Robert F. Ligon, clerk of the Alabama Supreme Court, today forwarded to Washington the voluminous records of the Scottsboro case, which will be considered again by the United States Supreme Court.

The records, showing the progress of the cases of Haywood Patterson and Clarence Norris, sentenced to die December 7, cover several thousand pages.

Two Die as Schooner Smashes Tug; 7 Saved

Oakland, Calif., Oct. 10 (AP).—Two persons were drowned early today in Oakland Estuary after the lumber schooner Lumberman sliced in two the tug Valiant in the dark. The Valiant assertedly attempted to cut across the bow of the big craft.

The victims were Marian E. Kent, 43, an Alameda nurse, and Lewis Durkee, 45, Alameda. Seven other persons, including two women, were saved.

Bishops Are Elected By Evangelical Church

Akron, Ohio, Oct. 10 (AP).—Dr. Elmer Wesley Praetorious, of Cleveland, and Charles H. Stauffacher, of Napierville, Ill., today were elected bishops of the Evangelical Church at the general conference of the church in session here.

Bishops reelected were John S. Stamm, of Kansas City, Mo., and George Edward Epp, of Cleveland. Roy H. Stetler, of Harrisburg, Pa., was reelected publisher of church publications.

Galbreth Free on Bond In 'Rubber' Check Case

Cumberland, Md. Oct. 10 (Spl.).—Howard Galbreth, disbarred local attorney, was released under $200 bond yesterday, on an indictment of obtaining money under false pretenses returned by the grand jury. He will be tried in this term of court.

His indictment and arrest followed the complaint of a Johnstown, Pa., merchant over an alleged worthless check for $56 tendered by Galbreth. Galbreth formerly served as a member of the House of Delegates from this county.

Dr. Bowerman To Be Speaker

Will Address Librarians in Session at Winchester Saturday.

Winchester, Oct. 10 (Spl.).—An address by Dr. George F. Bowerman, librarian of the Public Library of the District of Columbia, on "The Adult Education of Librarians," will be one of the features of the annual convention of the Middle Eastern Librarians Association, which will be held Saturday in the Handley Library auditorium.

A large attendance of librarians from Washington and Baltimore is anticipated, with others from northern Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Maryland.

From 11 until 12 o'clock delegates will register at the Handley Library. At 12:30 a luncheon will be served at the First Baptist Church. The initial session will be held at 2:30, when R. Gray Williams, president of the Handley Board of Trustees, and Dr. C. R. Anderson, Mayor of Winchester, will welcome the delegates. Discussion of problems of librarians and a business meeting will follow.

After the session a tour of the principal places of historic interest in and near the city will be made. The meeting will be concluded with a dinner program at the George Washington Hotel, when Dr. Bowerman will speak.

The association is headed by Dr. Alfred F. W. Schmidt, director of the division of library science and librarian at the George Washington University library, Washington. Mrs. Miriam U. Chisholm, supervisor of central circulation, the Washington Public Library, is secretary.

Sonny Hicks, colored, of Bladensburg, was committed to jail for 25 days when he was unable to pay a $25 fine yesterday in the Hyattsville Police Court. He was charged with failing to stop after a collision in Bladensburg.

William Thomas, colored, of Brentwood, Md., was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction for attempting to drive an auto from the scene of the accident while under the influence of liquor.

The Hicks car was in collision with another which, police said, was operated by Bert Middleton. The arrests were made by Bladensburg Town Bailiff George Wiseman.

21 OUT OF 23 ST. LOUIS CARDINALS SMOKE CAMELS!

by FRANK FRISCH

They sure made it hot for us this year, but the Cardinals came through in great style clear to the end when we needed every ounce of energy to win. We needed it—and we had it! There's the story in a nutshell. It seems as though the team line up just as well on their smoking habits as they do on the ball field. Here's our line-up on smoking: 21 out of 23 of the Cardinals prefer Camels.

PLAYER-MANAGER— Frankie Frisch of the World Champion St. Louis Cardinals.

The World Series is over. The Cardinals are on the top—supreme in the baseball world! Their astounding achievement will go down in history—a sensational charge from 7 games behind to win the pennant . . . and then the series! Timely hitting . . . great spirit . . . abounding energy . . . tell the story.

They are champions—and popular champions. Frankie Frisch, Carleton, Rothrock, Orsatti, Leo Durocher, Bill Walker, Medwick—all America knows this Cardinal team by heart and applauds its stirring victory.

"What do the World Champions smoke?"

A natural question. And above you get Frank Frisch's answer. The preference is overwhelmingly for Camels.

Camels have a delightful way of renewing energy. They have the mildness, the flavor. They don't interfere with healthy nerves.

The Cardinals' virtually unanimous preference for Camels is worthy of every smoker's attention. Be guided by their experience. Enjoy Camel's "energizing effect" which science has studied and confirmed. Camels are milder—made from a matchless blend of finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS. They never get on your nerves!

"DUCKY" MEDWICK: (At left) "A Camel takes away the tired feeling as soon as I leave the field, turns on my 'pep' again."

"PEPPER" MARTIN (Right) says: "You'll almost always find me with a Camel when I'm not playing. When I light a Camel I can feel all tiredness slip away."

"RIP" COLLINS. (Right) He says: "A Camel has a way of 'turning on' my energy. And when I'm tired I notice that Camels help me to snap back quickly."

THE DEANS!

PAUL DEAN. He says: "A Camel gives me the feeling of having more energy. I think any Camel smoker will agree with this. Camels never leave a 'cigaretty' aftertaste!"

"DIZZY" DEAN: "Like many other big-league pitchers I smoke Camels. A Camel brings back your energy after a hard game, or any time you are tired, and Camels never frazzle the nerves."

A TIP TO THE FANS . . .

WHEN YOU'RE TIRED GET A LIFT WITH A CAMEL!

LEAF-TOBACCO EXPERTS AGREE:

"Camels are made from finer, More Expensive Tobaccos—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand."

CAMEL'S COSTLIER TOBACCOS NEVER GET ON YOUR NERVES!

City to Be Host To Dietitians

1,500 Delegates Expected for Convention of National Group.

More than 1,500 members of the American Dietetic Association will attend the seventeenth annual convention of the organization at the Mayflower Hotel, October 15 to 20. This will be the third visit of this group to Washington, and the meeting will be the greatest in the history of the association, it was predicted yesterday.

Delegates will represent every State and every field open to nutrition specialists. Hospital dietitians, teachers of dietetics in schools and colleges, Government extension workers, research workers in nutrition, consultants for food companies and many women in social service work will be present.

Speakers will include Mrs. Quindara Oliver Dodge, president of the association; Sybil Holmes, assistant attorney general of Massachusetts; Dr. Louise Stanley, Chief of the Bureau of Home Economics; Dr. Mary Swartz Rose, professor of Nutrition, Teachers College, Columbia University; Dr. M. E. Rehfuss and Dr. R. Adams Dutcher, of Pennsylvania State College.

Miss Marie Mount, dean of Gine Economics at the University of Maryland, will be program chairman. Preliminary to the official opening of the convention, Miss Mary Lindsley will give a tea to delegates October 14 in the Dodge Hotel.

Esperanto Classes Start For City's Boy Scouts

Esperanto classes for Washington Boy Scouts will open next week. The classes will be held on October 17, at Langley Junior High School; on October 18, at Powell Junior High School, and October 19, at Hine Junior High School.

The classes will start at 7:30 p. m. and close at 9 p. m. The first classes will be lectures on the general purpose of Esperanto, a universal language.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

BAKER

ALL employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing should be placed on a 40-hour-week category, thus eliminating one of the most confusing and discriminatory administrative problems in Government service, Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, declared last night.

The NFFE expects to convince Congress of the merits of this project at the coming session.

The so-called Thomas amendment to the Independent Offices Appropriation act, setting up a 40-hour week for certain categories of Federal employes in the mechanical groups, Mr. Steward pointed out, has resulted in a peculiar discrimination involving more than 3,000 employes at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing.

The Comptroller General has ruled that only 700 of the 3,000 employes at the bureau, whose pay is adjusted by the Treasury Department, are within the purview of the 40-hour amendment. The remainder of the employes, of whom the vast majority are women, have their pay fixed by Congress and are required to work 44 hours a week, nothwithstanding the fact that other employes doing the same type of work are covered by the 40-hour provision.

"Having two sets of employes engaged in the same operation," the employe leader said, "and having different working hours, presents an embarrassing administrative problem. The NFFE expects to convince Congress of the necessity of remedying the inadequacy in the existing legislation and placing all of the employes of the bureau in the 40-hour category."

Miss Belle A. Trouland, president of the 25-year-old local union, No. 105, NFFE, declares that "we are not to suppose that Congress intentionally discriminated against women. Nevertheless, the principal discrimination contained in the Thomas amendment is leveled at women employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing who, although working in the same units production as the men employes who benefit from the 40-hour provision, nevertheless are required to work an additional four hours each week."

"Poison Squad" bacteriologist, B. A. Linden (*) is shown taking a sample of canned fruit suspected of bacterial contamination in one of the Food Drug Administration laboratories. The Federal pure food law prohibits the sale of "filthy, putrid and decomposed food."

Friends of Arthur Bakelar, formerly an examiner at the Patent Office, have received word from San Francisco that he is the proud father of a baby girl. Both Mrs. Bakelar and infant are reported doing nicely. Mr. Bakelar is now with the Shell Oil Co. on the Pacific Coast.

Babcock Is Honored.

E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, will leave San Francisco Saturday for Washington, pausing en route to speak at Yosemite National Park and before employes on the TVA project at Knoxville.

Mr. Babcock, who has been a delegate to the A. F. of L. convention, spoke Monday before the Customs Guards, Tuesday before the Federal Business Men's Association and last night before employes of the Veterans' Administration in California. Tonight he will be guest of honor at a banquet given by AFGE Lodge, No. 51, in San Francisco. The labor leader is expected back in the Capital October 24 or 25.

Diary Guest Tickets.

IF your name is followed by (*), call in person on the Federal Diary editor. You will receive tickets to Loew's Fox (stage, Michel Fokine ballet; screen, Constance Bennett in "Outcast Lady"); or to Loew's Palace (Claudette Colbert and cast of 8,000 in "Cleopatra"); or to Loew's Columbia (Gertrude Michael and Alison Skipworth in "The Notorious Sophie Lang" and comedy).

Diary office hours are daily, except Sunday, 12 noon to 1 p. m., and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturday, 12 noon to 2:30 p. m.

THE Central Disbursing Office Bowling League, Treasury, is ready for a spirited season, having just completed its organization with Miss Ada Cuddy elected president. The other officers are Brownie Kerr (*), vice president; Gladys Ramey, secretary-treasurer, and Flavia Hayes, official scorer.

Teams have been named after birds. The teams and their captains are:

Martins, Lily Henry; Orioles, Beulah Buell; Cardinals, Muriel Sutphin; Robins, Frank Ludwig; Starlings, Frances Becholtz, and Woodpeckers, Edna Cunningham. Most of the girls in this league have never bowled before.

Miss Isabelle Thomas Farnum (*), Coronado, Calif., has been appointed junior librarian in the Bureau of Plant Industry. Miss Farnum, formerly of Philadelphia, has been branch librarian of Imperial Valley County and is a graduate of the University of California Library School. She also holds an A. B. degree from San Diego State College.

Postettes.

Miss Anna Wolfe, Identification Unit, Justice, was married Sunday to Joseph Swann at St. Xavier's Church.

Harold Swanson (*), Patent Office, is being congratulated on his recent marriage to Miss Alvida Johnson, of Boston.

Mrs. Alice F. Nash, Administrative Division, Internal Revenue, has returned from a visit to her home in Vermont.

Mrs. Ursula Miller (*), Accounts and Collections Unit, Internal Revenue, enjoyed her vacation in Atlantic City and Philadelphia.

R. C. Dunbar, Interstate Commerce Commission, and Mrs. Dunbar recently enjoyed some excellent trout fishing in the Adirondacks.

Miss Jean Richardson, secretary to Commander H. E. Fischer, Bureau of Ordnance, Navy, spent her vacation recently in Vermont.

George M. McCann (*), War, has invented and obtained a patent on a big gun which has an easily removable innertube.

Your neighbors who are preparing to enjoy this winter with carefree AUTOMATIC GAS HEATING will attest that the installation of an Automatic Gas Heating Unit is one of the greatest single improvements you can make in your home. And gas heating is not expensive!

Consider first cost—the price of equipment. Only $169.50 (special sale price) installs the unit in your present furnace. Less by far than the cost of automatic heating equipment using any other fuel! And even this can be purchased on unusually easy terms—only $5.00 down and 24 months to pay the balance.

Thousands of Washingtonians are finding year after year by actual experience that AUTOMATIC GAS HEATING is economical! Before you begin another winter with old-fashioned heating it will pay you to investigate this offer and know definitely what AUTOMATIC GAS HEATING will cost in YOUR HOME.

Our representatives, through individual home surveys, are willing and able to give you, without obligation, an accurate estimate of the year-round cost of operation of one of these Automatic Gas Heating Units for your residence.

Call DIstrict 8500 for a FREE and accurate estimate of what Automatic Gas Heating will cost in your home

QUICK FACTS about Automatic GAS HEATING

EFFORTLESS-CAREFREE. No firing or fixing the furnace . . . no residue to be removed . . . no cartage or storage of fuel. Light the furnace in the Fall, set the thermostat to the exact degree of heat you like, and that's all there is to it.

NO MACHINERY. No complicated mechanism to wear out or become noisy or break down. There are completely gas-designed furnaces, or units which will convert your present furnace. Low maintenance—practically no depreciation.

CLEAN-HEALTHFUL. Gas is all consumed to produce heat—nothing is left over. Everything is cleaner—the air you breathe, your clothing, furniture, walls and floors. Constant uniform temperatures mean less colds and doctor bills.

LOW OPERATING COST. Automatic Gas Heating Plants are designed to burn gas alone, efficiently without waste. When you heat with gas your heating costs are computed in one all-inclusive bill for heating—not spread out on repairs, depreciation of equipment, cleaning bills, etc. And Washington enjoys one of the lowest gas rates for home heating on the Atlantic Seaboard!

Friends Give Farewell Party to F. P. Hibbard

State Department Official, Soon to Leave for New Post as Charge d'Affaires in Liberia, Honor Guest at Costume Fete.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

When a popular bachelor leaves Washington there is always a round of entertaining, and when the bachelor is as popular as Mr. Frederick P. Hibbard, of the State Department, is, the farewell party on the eve of his departure for another land is sure to be a delightful one.

Last night a group of his friends entertained at a supper dance at Mrs. Curtis' Club on F street to bid farewell to Mr. Hibbard, who will sail next Wednesday from New York aboard the President Roosevelt for England, where he will spend some time in London before sailing from Liverpool for his new post in Liberia.

Mr. Hibbard will serve as Charge d'Affaires, and as no appointment has been made for a Minister to that country, he will be the United States' chief of mission in Monrovia, the capital of Liberia, which derives its name from the author of the Monroe Doctrine.

Party Planned as Surprise.

Last night's party was planned as a surprise to Mr. Hibbard, and was one of those affairs which are probably unique to Washington—a subscription dance by invitation. Those attending were close friends of the guest of honor and were asked to wear costume, preferably amusing, and amusing indeed some of them were. Mr. Hibbard was the dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. George Eustis preceding the party, and of course none of the guests were in costume, so when Mr. Hibbard was taken along with the others to the dance, he was a little bewildered to find himself greeted more than enthusiastically by a large gathering of queerly assorted merrymakers.

The Curtis Club always presents a most attractive setting for a party, large or small, with its handsomely decorated drawing rooms, ample space for dancing and cheerful open fires. The buffet supper consisted of many of the delicious Curtis Club specials, such as scrambled eggs and sausages, piping hot, which is rare at so large a party, and the famous open sandwiches of duck and turkey.

Mrs. Hare Lippincott, an aunt of Mrs. James F. Curtis, entertained at a large dinner at the club for her daughter, Mrs. Gerald Selous, who is visiting here from her home in Europe, and several other dinners preceded the dance, among that given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Grimes.

Costumes Are Varied.

Mrs. Harold B. Hinton and Mrs. Emmons Smith, who helped organize the party, were outstanding in their amusing costumes. Mrs. Hinton, who still has a glorious sun tan from a summer spent at Rehoboth Beach, went as a Hula girl in a white costume, with leis of white and red flowers around her neck and in her hair. Mrs. Smith wore a charming Alice in Wonderland costume of brightly colored calico.

Mr. Hinton was one of the successes of the evening, appearing from the front to be a well-dressed man in the tropics with a pith hat, and on his back, wearing a sign which read "Dr. Livingston, I presume." Another group which attracted attention consisted of Mr. and Mrs. George Pulver, costumed as Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, followed by tall and handsome Bessie McKeldin Tucker, as their Uganda captive slave. Mr. Walcott Clark Waggamann wore the costume with which he won fame at the Italian Embassy ball last spring—that of a Senegalese officer, complete with pointed beard and turban.

Mrs. Jasper DuBose wore the most comic costume, made entirely of white mosquito netting and trimmed with Christmas-tree tinsel, and fly-swatters, and to make the thing more realistic, was highly perfumed with citronella. She sincerely hopes Mr. Hibbard will take the netting, swatters and citronella with him to Africa, where she fears he will need them all.

Death Casts Shadow.

All of the diplomatic bachelors who had planned to attend the party sorrowfully regretted the assassination of King Alexandria of Yugoslavia, which put a ban of mourning on the embassies and legations. However, the party was in no way an official one, so some of the colleagues of Mr. Hibbard in the State Department attended. Among them was the Chief of Protocol and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mr. Harry Villard, from the Near Eastern Division; Mr. Hugh S. Cummings, jr., and Mr. Ralph Hill, with his nephew, Mr. John Conkey.

Mrs. Henri de Sibour wore a little girl's costume of middie blouse and dark blue "gym" bloomers, and Mrs. William D. Thomas wore slinky black crepe pajamas. There was, of course, the inevitable pair of Gold Dust twins, and Miss Hope Jackson, daughter of Mr. Robert Jackson, chose to wear a convict's suit.

Others present were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Suydam, Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Noyes, Mrs. Campbell Prichett, wearing her South Sea Island costume; Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell, in a handsome Filipino costume of red pineapple cloth; Mrs. Pearsons Rust, Mr. and Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan, Mrs. Beck Tuck, Mr. and Mrs. William Cushman, Mr. and Mrs. Heywood Newbold and Mr. and Mrs. Blaise de Sibour.

Also present were Mr. and Mrs. Jock Whitney, from Middleburg; Mrs. George Sloan, of Warrenton; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey, Mr. Richard Porter Davidson, Capt. and Mrs. John Edie, Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Heitel, Mr. Myron Hofer, Mr. Myron Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Finkenstaedt and Mr. and Mrs. David Key, with the latter's brother, Mr. Gerald Wright.

Miss Ficklen to Bow.

Mrs. Samuel Pannill Ficklen will present her daughter, Miss Imogen Stuart Ficklen, to society at a tea dance November 24 in the garden of the Mayflower.

Miss Williams, T. H. Urmston, Are Married

Va. Fete Honors Misses Clagett And McMullen

Miss Randolph Richardson Gives Function at Fairfax Home.

White House, the lovely old home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick D. Richardson in Fairfax, Va., was the scene of a delightful informal party last evening, when Miss Randolph Richardson, who will be presented to society this year, entertained in honor of two other debutantes, Miss Silvine Clagett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bowie Contee Clagett, of Upper Marlboro, Md., and Miss Margaret McMullen, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John McMullen, of Washington.

The home, in which many parties have been given through the years, sits back from the road about a half mile from the small town, which is filled with countless historical markers. In the front, to one side of the long drive, there are tempting tennis courts, and behind the house there is a large sunken garden.

Upon the arrival of the guests, who motored from Washington, a buffet supper was served. Later the debutantes and their escorts settled down to several rubbers of bridge, then as a finishing touch to the gay evening there was dancing.

Miss Randolph was assisted by her mother and Mrs. Neitah King, of Washington. The guests included Miss Anne Barrett, of Warrenton, who will make her debut in Baltimore; Miss Mary Katheryne Spinks, Miss Louise Waller, Miss Betty Marsh, Miss Katherine Pearson, Miss Margaret Speir, Mr. Gerard Guilfoyle, Mr. John Cremen, Mr. Robert McCandlish, Mr. Douglas Smith, Mr. Robert Schneider, Mr. Louis Tarbet, Mr. Charles McDaniels and Mr. Robert Savage.

Deb's Diary

Who, What and Where —as She Sees It.

DEAR DIARY:

We have a new recruit to our ranks — Betty Marsh—who has decided to temporarily lay aside her speedball pen and parchment paper and devote this winter to play. She'll have no difficulty in filling her hours with recreation, for she is extremely fond of riding, tennis and just everything.

Well, well, well—people have been known to have all sorts of pets, including cats and their larger cousins more recently from the jungles, and even reptiles—and having them, I suppose, necessitates taking them for occasional outings. Yesterday I was simply amazed to see a fat, "maney" Shetland pony enjoying the luxury of the entire back seat of a Ford sedan (do they now carry spare "horsepower?").

Ah, Diary, a real honest to goodness party with a capital "P" tomorrow evening—cake, candles and everything. Margaret Speir is being birthdayed, and won't we have fun?

British Scribe Weds Helen Trenholme

Capital Girl Married to Denys Herbert-Smith.

A wedding of interest to Washington will take place today in Montreal when Miss Helen Trenholme, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Trenholme, 526 Mount Pleasant avenue, will become the bride of Mr. Denys H. Herbert-Smith.

Mr. Herbert-Smith has been making his home in the Capital for the last few years and the young Englishman is a popular member of the younger set.

The wedding will take place at the home of the bride's parents at noon, and will be attended by a small group of friends and relatives. After a short wedding trip, Mr. Herbert-Smith and his bride will make their home in Washington, where the former is correspondent for a London newspaper.

Mrs. Elonzo Tyner Back at Shoreham

Returns From Season Spent in West and Abroad.

Mrs. Elonzo Tyner has returned to the Shoreham, and is reopening her apartment there for the winter. She has been away from Washington the greater part of the time since last March, when she went to Arizona and later visited on the West Coast. She was back in Washington only a few days before sailing June 13 for England. She visited relatives and friends in England, Germany and Holland, and joined her daughter, Miss Peggy Tyner, in Europe.

Miss Tyner sailed for the Continent at the time her mother left for Arizona. Mrs. Tyner, who returned on the Berengaria, spent last week-end in New York. Miss Tyner, who is still in that city, will arrive in Washington in a few days.

All-Weather Cream Keeps Skin Smooth

Preparation Good for Both Oily and Dry Skins in Changeable Climate.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

NOT ONE WOMAN but all women can save their skin from the ravages of the seasons with a certain preparation called an all-weather cream. Its creator, a well-known cosmetician, felt the demand for a beauty aid of this kind which would suit oily skin as well as dry and protect them from the onslaught of winds, keeping them smooth and clear despite sudden weather changes.

If she had lived in Washington herself she could not have found a more appropriate cream for the climate. From September on, the temperature is such a temperamental thing that while one day our complexion might be smooth as a rose petal, the next day it's rough and unpleasantly chapped.

This cream prevents that. When a tiny bit of it is rubbed over the face, it gives a dull smooth finish to the skin like a fine powder. In fact, many women who use the cream say they find no necessity for powder.

Others find it a marvelous make-up foundation as it not only keeps the rouge and powder on evenly—and for hours—but at the same time it protects the skin.

With winter and more extreme weather impending, a woman owes it to herself to guard the freshness of her skin and ward off the scaliness and roughness which chill winds wantonly bestow. With a jar of this cream she has sufficient protection to see her smoothly through the next season.

The junior misses who prefer tailored coats for school and sports events can find a fashion paradise in a certain local store. The stylist here can show them tweeds—and such tweeds—in mingled colors, cut in mannish styles. Severe lapels, patch pockets, double and single-breasted effects, fitted or belted, the coats are the epitome of chic and a perfect adaptation of men's styles to junior misses.

The material in these coats is practically wear-proof. It can suffer rain, snow, sleet or shine and still hold its own.

Modern women are taking the advice of beauty authorities and spraying their perfume to achieve the best effect from fine fragrances. As a result atomizers have developed from small, plain things to ornate models of unbelievable magnificence. A large atomizer concern has a regular staff of artists who are employed to draw the designs. As a result those we see now on the counters of local shops are distinguished by rich, appealing colors and smart, graceful lines in both period and modern design.

They not only are important beauty accessories for discriminating women, but they give an individual charm to boudoir decorations. Furthermore, there are those which combine the ultimate in beauty with the utmost practicality. For instance, the smart men's styles, plain, "tailored" and easily grasped. One of the biggest "hits" has been the traveler's atomizer, which comes in a little case and is spill proof.

Thanks to the kindly offices of a large sale there are many items of exceptionally fine quality selling for unbelievably low prices.

For instance, brassieres, two for 17 cents. Now, who would think that brassieres at this price would be worth wearing? And yet hundreds of women, to judge by the swarm of customers around the display table, are finding these much to their liking.

There are two types. One, rayon satin with adjustable straps, and an elastic back to insure neat fit. The other type is lace with plain ribbon straps. All of them are a lovely, soft tearose.

Glove purchasers know that lambskin gloves generally make a sizable hole in their budget. They also know that such gloves give a sleek, well-groomed appearance to a costume.

That is why the gloves selling for a very specially low price in a downtown store are luring shoppers from far and wide.

They are available in black trimmed with white stitches and edgings of white lambskin, or brown touched up in tan. All of them are the slip-on style, but the cuffs differ in flare and design.

Wrought-iron stands reminding one of leafless trees in winter have three out-reaching limbs which support tiny flower pots in mingled blue, green, rose, red, yellow, orange and green. The stand, scarcely more than a foot high, makes a lovely decoration for table or window sill and enables you to have growing things inside throughout the winter.

There also are separate pots complete with a small dish. These two come in solid and combinations of colors and make a lovely accompaniment to the stand. They cost only 25 cents apiece.

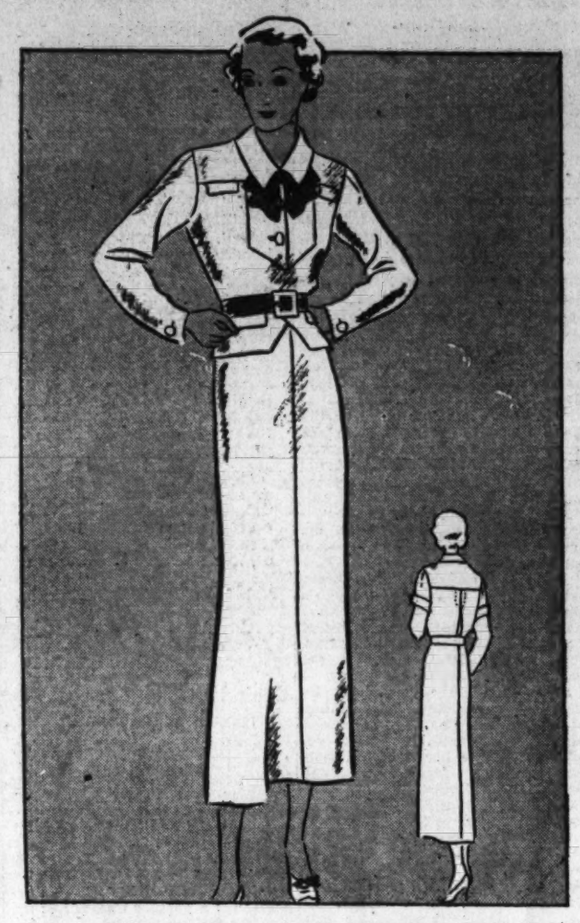
Peplum Offers Gay Touch To This All-Season Frock



Pattern No. 812.

A GAY LITTLE TOUCH on a tailored frock is this tiny peplum—but if a simpler line is more becoming that touch may be omitted. The dress itself is one that will be useful all season long. Its shaped collar looks well on everyone. The little bow may be made of several different fabrics to add variety to the frock. And the simple blouse section has the action back that is so comfortable.

A tie-silk foulard would be a good choice of fabric for this. If more warmth is desired it may be of dress-weight woolen. The pattern is accurately sized in 12 to 20, 30 to 38. Fabric requirements are on the envelope.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Take a Peep Into Blackie's House

By D. Sam Cox.

Some of you have forgotten just what sort of a house Blackie lives in, and none of you ever did know how well it was fixed inside when he came to it. Maybe you do remember that it is a mighty big tree, and I can tell you that some of you children sleep in rooms that are a lot smaller.

The tree is on a nice little hill that is right on the edge of a great wide swamp, and close to Bear Creek. Besides hundreds and hundreds of big and little trees growing all around over the swamp, there are bamboo vines, gallberry bushes, hokeyberry bushes, possum haw bushes and lots of other sorts of bushes and trees, and it is so thick and hard to get through that no man ever tries to get in it.

The man who came there a long time ago and fixed up Blackie's house to live in brought a little saw mill, and thought he was going to make a lot of money by sawing up those trees into lumber, and hauling them to town and selling them to people to build houses; but he had such a hard time getting his trees cut and hauled through all those briars and bamboos and things that he didn't stay very long, and he left a lot of lumber and boards and short pieces of wood lying around.

These are the things with which Blackie built his smokehouse. And this man had done some mighty funny fixing on the inside of his home, and had built things in there that were too big to get out through the door without tearing them up, and so he went off and left them there. He was afraid to build a fireplace right up against the side of his house, for if he did he would burn it down, so he built it right in the midle of the room.

He built it of rocks and clay, and it was round like a tub, only it was two or three times as big as any tub you ever saw. It was about as thick as the foot of a big boy is long, and was nice and fat on top. He would build his fire inside of that round place.

Didn't it smoke him out? Indeed it didn't, for here is what else he did. He got a great big piece of stove pipe and fixed it to the top of the big funnel, and then stuck the pipe out of a knothole in the tree. So when he built his fire, the smoke could go right on out of his house, and people could sit all around the fire instead of just on one side of it.

And look what a table that man had fixed. He must have had a lot of men helping him at the mill, and I reckon he did. Anyway, there was a lot of room around the table, and it was as funny as the fireplace and was made to just fit it. In fact, there were two of the tables, but when they were put together around the fire they made only one.

Take a big "O," cut it right in the middle, cut out all of the white, and you have something like Blackie's table when it was in two pieces. Now put them back together, and you will have one that is just like the one that went all around his fireplace.

So you know what sort of a place the Creek Folks have for their dinner and suppers. And you know the kind of a table that those nice pigs' feet and pork chops and other things that Mr. Man sent over are going to be on when Blackie is asking his friends whether they want gravy on their meat.

Woman Tries Gold Mining In Australia

GOLD MINING is a profitable career for an enterprising woman, but lonely, reports Mrs. George Campbell, of Sydney, Australia, a visitor to this country.

Twelve months ago Mrs. Campbell was a stenographer in a city office, then her husband decided to go to New Guinea, and she went along.

A few months later she found herself on the banks of a creek in the New Guinea jungle, 200 miles from Port Moresby, one other white woman, the wife of a miner, was her only companion.

"I didn't even know the color of gold before I sailed for Port Moresby in last January," Mrs. Campbell said. "But now I am employing six black boys, and in five years I will be wealthy for a life time.

"The country I am mining in is wide and wonderful. Although I only know two white women in an area of hundreds of miles, I am happier than I have been in a long time.

"I am taking a gramophone when I return. Sometimes the evenings are lonely."

Capital Kitchen

By Susan Mills.

A TOMATO, a few select ingredients from the pantry shelf, and a little ingenuity—and you have a new and tempting dish. Varieties of stuffing can give you many interesting dishes, with the useful tomato as an inspiration.

Hot Stuffed Tomato.

Number one idea is a hot stuffed tomato filled with creamed dried beef seasoned with pimiento. Cut off the top of the tomato and remove some of the pulp. Place the tomato in a biking pan and after filling with the following sauce, heat for a few minutes in a moderate oven:

Separate slices of three-fourths pound of dried beef and shred. Good quality dried beef does not need to be soaked or "freshened." Make a cream sauce as follows: Melt two tablespoons of butter in a double boiler. Remove from heat, add two tablespoons of flour, one-fourth teaspoon of salt and a speck of pepper and stir until well blended. Add one cup of milk, place over boiling water and cook, stirring constantly until thick. Cover and cook 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add dried beef and three chopped pimientos. Serve piping hot on a plate with cole slaw and cheese biscuits.

Ham Salad Filling.

A cold stuffed tomato dish easy and simple to prepare is ham salad filling. To make it, marinate one cup of diced cooked ham in French dressing for an hour. Drain and combine with 1 cup of chopped cabbage, 1 cup of shredded pineapple and ½ cup of chopped peanuts. Blend with mayonnaise and fill the tomatoes. Serve on a slice of head lettuce. This is excellent with toasted sandwiches as a luncheon dish.

Eggs Baked in Tomato.

The crowning recipe for beauty of appearance as well as tastiness is this eggs-baked-in-tomato dish: Broil four halves of tomatoes slightly. Put each into a buttered individual baking dish, break an egg into the tomato, season with salt and pepper, and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 10 to 12 minutes.

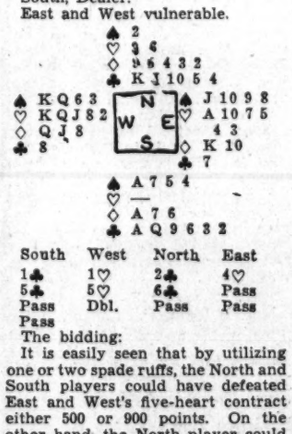
Fatal Procrastination.

Plays meant to fool the opponents and cause them to do what they shouldn't or not to do what they should, are likely to be particularly effective when made at the beginning hand. For this there are several excellent reasons. First, the opponents at this stage of the play know less about the hand than they do in the later rounds, and are therefore reckoning with possibilities rather than actualities. Second, they have not yet had much time to think. Third, some players have the unfortunate habit of postponing their decisions, even when it would be mentally possible to make them earlier, until it is too late. Against these chronic procrastinators, of course, early surprise plays are even more effective than against the generality of players. Procrastination is the thief not only of time, but of tricks.

In today's hand the South player avoided sure defeat by forcing East to make the vital decision of the hand—whether or not to discard a King—on the second trick.

South, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.



South	West	North	East
1♣	1♡	2♣	4♡
5♣	5♡	6♣	Pass
Pass	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

The bidding:

It is easily seen that by utilizing one or two spade ruffs, the North and South players could have defeated East and West's five-heart contract either 500 or 900 points. On the other hand, the North player could not be certain that the opposing contract was unmakable, and rather than risk losing the rubber, he decided to gamble on six clubs.

It is further evident that six clubs is a hopeless contract, as two diamond tricks must be lost. The Declarer, however, did not resign himself to defeat. After ruffing the opening heart lead he saw one ray of hope. If he could strip both opponents' hands of spades and clubs and then play the Ace and another diamond, and if the opponent who won the second diamond did not have a third one to lead, an automatic ruff and discard would ensue on whatever other suit was led. However, South realized that if he immediately went about stripping the hand, the defense would soon realize what was occuring, and by the time the diamond Ace was led, would take the proper unblocking measures to defeat his purpose.

Therefore, at trick 2 South laid down the Ace of diamonds. Had the East player been sufficiently far-sighted he would have realized that there was something peculiar in this play and that it almost surely would not cost him a thing to drop his diamond King on the Ace. However, East was not sufficiently clever to do this.

The South player continued by ruffing all his spades in Dummy and the last heart in his own hand, and drawing the adverse trumps. He now led a low diamond, and poor East had no choice to win the trick with his now blank King. He was forced to lead a heart, and this card was, of course, trumped in Dummy, the last diamond being discarded from the South hand.

There is no doubt but that East should be charged for his failure to unblock, but South should at least get some mark of commendation for his brilliant early surprise attack.

Miss Chambers Offers Way To Serve Lamb

Broiled Chops and Rice Basis of Oriental Feasts for Ages.

Appetizing and inexpensive meat recipes will be featured at The Post cooking school in Washington Auditorium October 16, 17, 18 and 19. The accompanying suggestion for an attractive way to serve lamb chops is contributed by Miss Ruth Chambers, director of the school, and is typical of the ideas she will demonstrate there.

By Ruth Chambers.

LAMB AND RICE are a food combination which comes down from antiquity in Oriental countries where it forms the basis of their feasts even to the present day.

When the sheiks of Arabia give a banquet—according to reports of travelers who have been their guests—in the center of the festive board is a huge platter of hot rice and about this is placed lamb which has been cooked over an open fire. The guests are seated on the ground about the food and after hands have been carefully washed in bowls which the servants bring them, the correct method of dining is for each to plunge a hand deep into the steaming, highly flavored rice and extract a fistful which is eaten with the meat held in the other hand. Arabian fingers were indeed made before forks, but there are still rules of etiquette to be observed and pieces of a special kind of bread are neatly used to keep the fingers from becoming too sticky.

Table customs are, after all, a matter of geography, but good food is good food, however and wherever served. The platter of lamb and rice, pictured here, is a dainty replica of those far-off desert feasts. About a mound of rice are placed broiled lamb chops. Stuffed olives have been used to garnish the ends of the ribs in place of the paper frills—which originally were designed so that the meat might more conveniently be held in the hand. The curly endive which dresses up this dish has doubtless its equivalent in some green salad plant which the oases provide.

Farmers Build School.

Ainsworth, Nebr., Oct. 10 (Spl.).—Unable to send their children to a town high school, and equally unable to build a modern building, farmers in Brown County built a schoolhouse out of prairie sod and furnished it with discarded equipment. They raised enough money by taxation to pay the salary of a teacher, formerly an instructor in the local high school.

Child Chats

Baby Safer and Happier Cooped in Pen Than Crawling About.

By Alice Fox Pitts.

THE BABY who is in the creeping stage is not only safer but happier cooped in a pen. It might seem that he'd gain greater enjoyment in crawling about the kitchen floor or investigating the legs of the dining room table, and for a little while he does like adventuring. Soon, however, he grows fretful, crying for objects he can not reach or should not have.

Therein lies the advantage of a pen. Everything about him has an air of familiarity that gives him a feeling of security. Trained to play in his pen, he will be far more contented there.

Ready-made pens are most satisfactory, since they have bars for the baby to take hold of when he tries to climb to his feet, and can be folded away when not in use. An amateur carpenter can make a coop that will serve the same purpose. If this type of pen is not available, the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor suggests fencing off one part of the baby's room with a smooth board, 6 or 8 feet long and just high enough to keep him from climbing over. In any case, the floor should have a cover of washing goods, such as denim or ticking, tied to the corners by strong tapes.

Even the 2-year-old will be better off if all his toys are kept in one room or on the porch and he plays there regularly instead of roaming at large about the house.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Poisoned Nerves.

MORE and more are diseases of the nervous system yielding to the searchlight of careful scientific investigation.

We are familiar with the type of paralysis that too often follows the disease known as poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis). We know the general type of infection that often gives rise to Parkinson's disease. Many cases of herpes (shingles) have been traced to infected teeth or tonsils. Sometimes a carbuncle on the neck may, through the rapid dissemination of toxins, so affect the nerves of the upper portion of the spine as to cause nerve degeneration. The effects on the nervous system of lead poisoning or of the excessive use of alcohol are well known.

Delirium is a similar but somewhat different manifestation of a high degree of toxin absorption. A patient with a high fever caused by an infection may become so mentally confused, so filled with fears, so delirious as to attempt self-destruction or to do damage to others about him. In other words, in such an instance a disease of the body caused by bacteria has, through the poisons produced, affected the mind. As a rule mental disturbance of this character disappears with the cessation of the fever; that is, as soon as the body overcomes the infection and neutralizes the poison. Sometimes, if the delirium or confused mental state exists for a considerable period, damage to the higher nerve centers may occur, resulting in permanent mental weakness.

A common example of the effect of a toxin upon the higher nerve centers is the phenomenon of intoxication by alcohol. In such a case the individual has taken alcohol more rapidly than it can be oxidized by the body. The toxic effects then become obvious in the loss of control of the nervous and the muscular systems. There may be no coordination of body movements, the individual may see double, and certain delusions may possess him even to the point of visualizing pink elephants, blue rats, and green serpents. This is not insanity, nor is it a disease of the mind. It is the result of nerve poisoning.

Most of us are inclined to disregard the load placed upon the nervous system. We must remember that every infection, no matter where harbored, and in some cases no matter how slight, may give rise to distressing nervous symptoms.

What Today Means

"Libra."

IF OCTOBER 11 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m. and from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m. and from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m.

Tact should be your motto on this date, as you may be required to use a great deal of it. A trying situation may arise, which only can be handled successfully if you will use a good deal of diplomacy. Amiability will accomplish much more than irritability. Monetary losses can easily occur, through an impelling power, which must be combated, to be careless or improvident.

Business conditions in general should prove encouraging, so energetic hustling ought to produce satisfactory results. This October 11 should prove auspicious for buying, selling or leasing property.

Horse play in social activities may create laughter, but it might also cause loss of respect, so circumspection is advisable if tempted to indulge in it. Married and engaged couples, as well as those making love, should avoid using any tone of voice that might be construed as dictatorial, for it is apt to act as a spark that might cause an explosion whose vibratory shock will be stunning.

If a woman and October 11 is your natal day, you may receive something on this date that will brighten your eyes and fill your heart with joy. You should be able to use your hands very skillfully. Sewing, drawing, designing, painting or playing musical instruments offer vocational opportunities which you should not ignore. You are probably the type of person men greatly admire and you should experience no difficulty making a husband recognize your many fine qualities.

The child born on October 11 may, when it reaches school age, require careful cautioning against developing an overdose of self-consciousness.

If a man and October 11 is your birthday, you should possess a mathematical mind or a very vivid imagination. Mechanical engineering, sculptoring or writing should have a strong appeal for you. An early marriage is advisable for men of your disposition.

THE MAN WITHOUT NERVES

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

A COMPLETELY festive spirit could scarcely be recaptured, but the Sarson dinner party did not at once break up after its tragic interruption. Milhaven, who seemed in no hurry to depart, was anxious for information. In the absence of his young hostess, who had left the room abruptly, he moved his chair nearer to Anthony.

"Is this a bolt from the blue for all of you?" he asked, "or has the young man been under suspicion at all?"

"So far as I know," Anthony declared, "not a soul has ever connected Tyssen with the affair. Before he came out as such a marvelous golfer, we all thought he was dotty about writing some sort of book of adventures."

"The matter becomes more inexplicable every moment," Milhaven observed, as he drained his glass and drew the cigars toward him. "If it was not utterly impossible, if it had been in the days of Charles Lever, for instance, I should have wondered whether the whole affair was not a practical joke."

Startling Announcement.

"We must remember," Mr. Cresset put in, "that, after all, there is a certain degree of mystery about the young man. He has been living down here under a false name. Didn't he play golf of the most extraordinary type today, and doesn't he refuse to tell any of us where he has played before?"

"That's quite true," Anthony agreed.

"Whatever any one may have to say against Christopher Tyssen or Christopher Sandford," Pauline affirmed quietly, "I am going to marry him in a month or two, so don't say too disagreeable things."

"You are going to what!" her father exclaimed.

"Marry him," Pauline repeated with emphasis. "Haven't had time to tell you about it yet, Dad, but he will be 'round to see you before long."

"God bless my soul!" Mr. Timothy Sarson muttered, brushing away from his waistcoat the cigar ash which he had dropped in his agitation. "Queer lot, our young people, nowadays. Lord Milhaven, I should think you're glad sometimes that you haven't a family."

Sergeant Arrives.

"If I could have been guaranteed a daughter like yours," Milhaven said, with a little bow, "I should have welcomed the affliction."

Mr. Sarson rose suddenly to his feet.

"There's the sergeant out in the lane," he pointed out. "Let's have him in and see if he knows anything about it."

Mr. Sarson poured out a glass of port with his own hand. The sergeant took it and saluted.

"I will be drinking this, sir," he said, "with your permission and with the permission of all those present——" he suddenly recognized Milhaven and saluted again —"to the health of young Mr. Tyssen, the young gentleman who put it across the 'Society' for us today."

"Have you heard what's happened to our young friend?" Sarson asked. "Half an hour ago he was arrested and taken away in a police car."

"Arrested? What for?"

"The murder of Sir Julian Bott," Sarson told him gravely.

The sergeant put down his second glass of port untouched.

"Well, I'm speaking with every desire to be respectful," the sergeant declared, a grimly obstinate look in his face, "but I am taking the libery of telling you that I don't believe it. Was Inspector Penny down?"

Still Unbelieving.

"No," Anthony told him, "but it was an inspector in Scotland Yard uniform and a constable. There was another constable outside and two more in the car. They had a warrant which they showed to Lord Milhaven, and they took him away with them to Lewes Gaol."

"I'll be getting along, Mr. Sarson, if you will excuse me, sir," the sergeant begged. "This news has kind of given me a turn. I don't understand it, nohow. In a manner of speaking, it isn't understandable. I will say good evening to you all, ladies and gentlemen."

The sergeant took his leave and they heard his receding footsteps gathering speed as he went.

"An utterly British type," Milhaven remarked. "Fourteen of us here who saw what happened to poor young Tyssen, and he dosn't believe it!"

"I'll tell you all something," Sybil Cresset suddenly cried. "I have been wondering about it ever since that inspector first appeared. I have been worrying as to where I have seen that shaped cap before. Don't you remember, Anthony—the man in police uniform on the byway, the night Sir Julian Bott was killed?"

Sergeant Reports.

"By God, you're right!" the young man exclaimed. "Puzzled me for a moment. I thought I must have seen it in the illustrations of those new flying squads from Scotland Yard. It was the same cap as that man was wearing, without a doubt."

"Then, if this was one of the new Scotland Yard squads," Mr. Cresset observed, "what was it doing up on the byway the night of the murder? Day after day I read in the paper that all efforts to trace the automobile in which Sir Julian started on his ride to London have failed.

"That car cleared out, secretly and Scotland Yard have been utterly unable to discover where it came from. It has never been heard of since."

The party was on the point of breaking up when the sergeant made his reappearance. There was a note of triumph in his tone.

"Mr. Sarson and gentlemen, begging your pardon," he began, as he crossed the threshold. "I have been speaking on the telephone to Lewes Gaol. I have spoken to Capt. Percy himself. He says he knows nothing about any prisoner being brought in tonight—in fact, he's quite sure there is not going to be one. He has never heard of Mr. Tyssen, and a Scotland Yard arrest would mean taking a man up to London, not to Lewes."

There was an awed and breathless silence. Every one appeared to be racking his brain for some possible solution.

Amazing News.

"I suppose we ought to have realized that for ourselves," Milhaven said, as he took his leave. "I'm afraid it doesn't make much difference, though, whether they have taken him to Lewes or to London. There is no getting over the fact of the arrest."

Pauline for the next half hour, wrested with the telephone in her father's den. She endured several snubs, a good deal of incredulity and some impatience. In the end she had her way. She went back to the dining room, where her father and a few of the guests were still gathered, a smile of triumph upon her lips, although there was a great fear in her heart.

"I have just been talking to Scotland Yard," she told them "They knew nothing of any squad of police at all operating in this neighborhood, and they are quite sure that no warrant has been issued for Mr. Tyssen's arrest."

Finishing her announcement, Pauline wandered out into the garden in search of Anthony. From the shadows of the drive she heard her name called, and paused.

"Who is that?" she asked.

A woman carrying a parcel came into sight, revealed in the little halo of light from the open hall door. It was Mrs. Foulds from the postoffice.

Parcel Delivered.

"I took the liberty of calling to you, Miss Sarson," she said. "It was only yesterday that Mr. Tyssen gave me this package and told me to keep it and give it to you if ever anything happened to him. I've just heard in the village about him being taken away and I thought you had better have it."

"I'll take it," Pauline promised. "It shan't leave me, I promise you that, Mrs. Foulds. And you have done well—much better than you can understand. She scarecely waited to say good night. She was back in the safety of the house, clasping the precious parcel in her arms. She made her way once more into her father's den, took one of his brace of revolvers from his gun cupboard, loaded it with skillful fingers and set the catch at safety. Then, with the parcel still clasped under one arm and the revolver in her hand, she reentered the dining room.

"What, in God's name?" her father exclaimed as she entered.

"This parcel is for Inspector Penny or some one whom we know to be entirely reliable," she explained, "from Christopher. Send for the inspector at once."

Parcel Guarded.

Not until Inspector Penny arrived did she drop the revolver and surrender the parcel with a breathless explanation of how it came into her hands.

Inspector Penny wrenched it open. He stood underneath the electric light and glanced through the opening sheets of the "novel" Tyssen had been writing during his stay in Sandyways. He read like a man hunted to death, hard pressed to keep his breath.

"Tyssen's real name is Sandford," he said at last. "Christian name's all right — Christopher Sandford. This manuscript tells his whole story. Tyssen was his mother's name. His father was a millionaire banker pretty well ruined by an embezzling cashier. His son, who had made one appearance in golf with great success, was thinking of becoming a professional when gold was found on some almost forgotten land of his father's. He became suddenly wealthy and disappeared from Australia. No one knew what had become of him. These notes tell us.

"He came to England to find the man who had ruined and murdered his father. He went to London. He came here."

Criminal in Midst.

"My God!" Timothy Sarson suddenly exclaimed. "Whom was he after here?"

"One of the greatest of the world's criminals," Penny answered. "A man who has never had his fingerprints taken, or stood for one moment in the dock, or been under one minute's suspicion. Can you imagine—you who live here—who that man may be?"

He left the question tormenting them while he hurried through the pages of the manuscript.

"Is your little bank manager, Mr. Huitt, a man of punctual habits?" Timothy Sarson chuckled.

"He's an automaton," he declared. "He's asleep by 11 o'clock every night. He's awakened at 6. He fusses about in his little garden for one hour, and he's in the 8:20 train in the same seat every morning of his life."

"Well, he won't be there tomorrow," Inspector Penny declared bitterly. "Where he is, Christopher Sandford is too—and God help him."

Women Give Church $1,000,000 Offering

Contribution to Missions Work to Be Presented Formally on Golden Alms Basin at Atlantic City Parley Today.

By Elisabeth E. Poe.

A UNITED THANK offering of more than $1,000,000, presented on a magnificent golden alms basis, is to be received this morning during the corporate communion service marking the fifty-first triennium of the Episcopal Church in America, now in session at Convention Hall, Atlantic City.

Washington women will join with women from all parts of this country and from many foreign lands in making the donation to the mission work being performed by women of the church.

The basin—which, since its presentation by Oxford University to the Episcopal Church in America, has held more than $4,000,000 in gifts from women to missionary work—has been of striking interest at the church's Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago.

First Used in 1852.

It was at the third jubilee of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel at Oxford in 1852 that Bishops William H. de Lancey, of western New York, and Samuel Allen McCoskry, of Michigan, were presented with the basin. It is about 22 inches in diameter and the border is of silver gilt, beautifully chased, with the central panel of solid gold, showing the offering of the Magi to the Infant Christ. It weighs 18 ounces 12 pennyweights.

When the first united offering of the Woman's Auxiliary was presented in 1889, amounting to only $2,188.64, it was placed in this historic basin.

Since that day, on every successive general convention of the church, a similar offering has been presented—woman's special contribution from the uttermost parts of the earth.

In far-off China, in the snow fields of Alaska, in equatorial lands, the Phillippines and West Indies, as well as in continental United States, the women lay by, day by day, their pen, rupees, pesos, shillings, milreas and pennies to swell the fund.

The native women of Alaska make fur bags and moccasins, the Indian women lace and bead work; Chinese women and the women of Hawaii, as well as Brazil, Mexico and the West Indies contribute their handiwork to swell the total of the blue mite boxes in which the United Thank Offering is collected coin by coin during the three years' interim between the general convention.

The offering is devoted largely to constructing mission homes, hospitals and schools in both foreign and domestic fields and maintaining women workers in medical, educational and industrial as well as religious activities.

Over 1,000 women workers have been sent into the field by the Auxiliary, and from Alaska to Patagonia and New York to Tokyo, the field is dotted with institutions built and maintained through the offering.

Washington Group There.

A Washington delegation has gone to Atlantic City to present the offering of the women of Maryland. When the long march to the altar begins and hundreds of women are bringing gifts of the dioceses, the Washington part of the offering will be borne by its president, Mrs. William Partidge, and Mrs. Walter G. Dunlop, associate treasurer of the offering.

MRS. GRACE LINDLEY, National chairman of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Episcopal Church in America.

Should the proposed amendment to the canon law pass, permitting women to sit in the National Council, it is probable that four, representing the Woman's Auxiliary, will be elected to that office. Mrs. Grace Lindley, National chairman of the Woman's Auxiliary, would be one of them.

The Right Rev. James De Wolfe Perry, presiding bishop, will celebrate the corporate communion, and it is expected more than 4,000 women will partake of it. The result of the united thank offering will be announced at the mass meeting in Convention Hall tonight.

While the convention is meeting, the Woman's Auxiliary will hold its triennial sessions in a nearby hotel, electing officers for three years. There are more than 500,000 church women in the auxiliary, including the Woman's Missionary Band of China and the Woman's Auxiliary of Japan.

By coincidence the convention will mark the inaugural on the part of the men of the church of a similar gift to church work. Under the leadership of Charles P. Taft 2d, of Cincinnati, son of the President, a fund called "Every Man's Offering," approximately, it is said, $500,000, will be given to reduce the deficit of the church budget this year and to keep its missionary work in full operation.

President Roosevelt is serving on the committee and already has made his contribution.

Official delegates of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Diocese of Washington to the conference are Mrs. Partridge, Mrs. Spencer S. Wood, past president; Mrs. Henry E. Cooke, president of Epiphany branch; Mrs. Irving P. Hall, chairman of junior branches; Mrs. John Mutchler, president of All Souls' junior branch; Mrs. R. Winston Holt, Miss Florence Hyde, Mrs. Dunlop, Mrs. Ida D. Schantz and Mrs. Henry W. Watson, president of St. John's branch.

Woman Diver Plans Salvage Of Lost Ship

Mrs. Margaret C. Goodman Seeks Cargo of Vessel Sunk in Lake Erie.

WHEN the only woman deep-sea diver, Mrs. Margaret Campbell Goodman, of Brooklyn, N. Y., was in Washington several months ago, she mentioned she was planning to undertake a new salvaging project, but declined to divulge details.

Now, however, a report comes from Ontario to the effect that Mrs. Goodman began preparations this week to scout by air for the sunken hulk of the schooner New Brunswick, which went down about 75 years ago with a cargo of 110,000 cubic feet of white oak and black walnut.

She is not ready even yet, however, to make all her plans known, and secrecy will surround her work until the search for the hulk of the schooner actually gets under way.

Mrs. Goodman's work first attracted attention when she organized and directed the crew that salvaged the steamer Pewabic in Lake Huron 17 years ago. The Pewabic sank in 1865 in 30 fathoms with a loss of 155 lives. The cargo consisted of about $200,000 worth of copper.

After that daring venture Mrs. Goodman turned her attention to an entirely different line of work. In 1921 she established the Owlet, an exclusively feminine newspaper, and was its first editor.

But deep-sea diving still constituted her major interest, and about 2 years ago she contemplated beginning work on the New Brunswick. Owing to lack of financial support, however, the project had to be abandoned.

The New Brunswick, owned by Byron Newton Eberts, of Chatham, Ontario, was sailing across Lake Erie from Wallaceburg to Montreal when it foundered in a gale. According to reports, its spars remained in sight for two months until swept away by the ice.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am a widow of 55. I lost my husband two years ago. We had 35 years of the most companionable married life with never a cross word exchanged between us. We reared three fine children, two girls and a boy, all of whom are now married with children of their own.

My husband died a poor man, although he enjoyed the distinction of being a highly-respected professional man during the active years of his life. He was an invalid for five years before he died and left only a small income, too small to permit me to keep my own home. I have been living around in the homes of my children, on an arrangement they worked out for me and insisted I accept.

* * * *

One of my daughters lives very comfortably. Her husband is in good circumstances and she has three children and a servant. I always feel I am in the way there, because I can be of no help to her. Also, I share a room with the eldest child, a girl of 12, and I am constantly conscious of intruding on her little plans and activities.

The other daughter has two children, but she lives in a very small apartment, and when I am with her, I sleep in the living room, which means I must be the last one up at night and the first one up in the morning.

* * * *

In the case of my son, I can be of some help, and have been, having spent nearly $1,000 on his family the past two years. He has five children, one of them an invalid, and his health has been so bad he has been forced to take several furloughs from his job. But his wife is moody and unhappy, and frequently she ignores my presence in the home for days at a time.

* * * *

Last week, I packed up my things and came to visit an old friend in this city. I have noticed your column, and wondered if you have any advice to give in a case like mine. I am disguising the circumstances a little, so that no one can guess who is writing, but my situation is just as I have stated it. What do you suggest?

MARTHA.

Strike Out for Self.

DEAR MARTHA: Put an end to this business of being elbowed and shoved about in the background and on the outskirts of your children's lives. Strike out independently on your own.

At 55 a woman is very little, if any, past her physical prime, and in the full bloom of her mental vigor. With your income, however small, to stand between you and actual want, you are in an excellent position to make your own plans and exercise your own judgment, without suffering yourself to become passive and plastic clay for your children's misguided modeling.

* * * *

Find a job. Advertise. Make application to agencies. Appeal to your friends. But don't consult your children. As housekeeper, companion, or children's nurse in some household where your services are urgently needed, you can rise to the dignity of a valued and respected—and paid—individual. Or you might inquire into the possibilities of becoming a house mother for a sorority; or resident manager of an apartment building.

* * * *

If you could find, temporarily, work in some household of a type which would permit regular daytime or evening hours off, you might enroll in classes in bookkeeping, typewriting or stenography. There are innumerable instances of women past your age who have returned to college and carried off distinguished honors, so have no fear of mental atrophy rendering such efforts negative.

* * * *

Your life can yet be as full of human service with a commercial premium attached as you choose to make it. But don't delay action, and do set your face firmly against becoming a fifth wheel in your children's lives.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write to her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

An Episcopal mission gift of more than $1,000,000 today was placed in this magnificent Episcopal alms basin, the central panel of which is solid gold, showing the offering of the Magi to the Infant Christ.

Separate Skirt Now Vogue in Sports Wear

Sweater and Jacket Make Up Colorful Combinations for Fall Season.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10 (AP).—Separate skirt, sweater and jacket combinations are the latest ideas in smart fall sports wear.

The separate skirts, which are having a big revival, were seen by the rackful in tweeds, novelty weaves, checks, plaids, plain wool, corduroy and velveteen.

They were styled in different ways—smooth fitting, unpleated or with kick plaits in back or front or both, wrap around and, of course, the new split skirt.

In devising combinations, the plain colored skirt is worn with a jacket in a check, plaid or novelty weave, and vice versa, the plain colored jacket tops a patterned skirt.

Sometimes one color dominates the ensemble, but there may be a contrasting effect such as a bottle green velveteen skirt combined with a black and white checked jacket. The materials generally contrast.

The jackets, box style, were noted in either single or double breasted models, belted or unbelted. Just as the skirts, they may be had in tweed, novelty woolens, plain wools, checks, plaids, velveteen and corduroy.

Suede leather jackets in new fall colors are having another big season, and new are the smooth leather jackets with pigskin markings.

Nearly all new sweaters tend toward the higher neckline. A modified turtle neck is probably the most popular. A ruffled collar was noted on one new number.

Twin sweaters are still important. It was observed that predominately both sweaters are of the same color or else the under sweater is white. One variation of the twin sweater theme is a pull-on long-sleeved sweater topped with a vest in a contrasting color.

The sweater is generally a shade of the same color as the jacket or white.

Fritz Kreisler Collects Books, Wife Reveals

NEW YORK, Oct. 10 (Spl.).—Because she has heard that when he is alone, "papa loiters in hotel lounges between concerts and eyes the ladies," Mrs. Fritz Kreisler is traveling with her violinist husband this fall.

"It is wrong for a great artist to be lonely, and I have an eye for his own and my good," said Mrs. Kreisler, "but I am no longer the boss."

The violinist says he has never practiced a score since his marriage, and although he sometimes plays six hours at a stretch, it is his New York wife who has taught him to fiddle and have a grand time—instead of practicing his concert compositions. It was his wife's sense of humor and her New York breeding, Mr. Kreisler said, that has saved their 33 years of marriage from a "broken string."

Mrs. Kreisler disclosed that her husband "still buys books behind my back, and I don't suppose any one knows that his collection of books published before 1500 A. D. includes more than 600 volumes. He paid from $1 to $110,000 for each volume."

For the last 20 years, it has recently been learned, Mr. Kreisler has been establishing scholarships in perpetuity for promising violin students of promise in Austria. Several of their names now are famous.

Referring again to her husband's passion for collecting old books, Mrs. Kreisler said, "If he knew as much about women as he does about old books all the women would be chasing Fritz."

Better Educated Nurses Demanded

AN EIGHT-YEAR study of the educational, professional, vocational and economic problems "which today beset the nursing profession" reveals the profession is marked by "undereducation" and "overproduction," according to the report of the investigating committee.

The committee, which was headed by Dr. William Darrach, dean emeritus of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University, has just published its report, "Nursing Schools, Today and Tomorrow." The report was written by Dr. May Ayres Burgess, director of the study.

"In most cities and in most States," the report says, "there are numerically more than enough nurses. There is no need for more graduate nurses with mediocre training and background. There is a great need for nurses with broader experience, better basic professional background and additional specialized training."

Airplane Will Carry Elephant to St. Louis

NEW YORK, Oct. 10 (Spl.).—Still less than six months old, Toto Tembo, the elephant guest at the Central Park Zoo, continues his travels.

Born in Africa and brought from there by Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, the elephant will be taken by plane today to a permanent home in the St. Louis Zoo. With Toto will go his constant companion, Terengosi, a Meru native, who will remain in St. Louis until a new keeper is broken in for Toto.

Writing an Ideal Career for Sex, Says Young D. C. Woman Author

Phyllis Gallagher Calls Social Life Essential Factor to Success.

WHAT ABOUT creative writing as a career for women?

"Simply ideal," in the opinion of Mrs. Phyllis Moore Gallagher, young Washington author still in her twenties.

"I think there is no career for woman that interferes less with her home life, her leisure and her social life, than that of creative writing," Mrs. Gallagher, newly elected president of the Creative Authors Club, confided after the club's first meeting in the Wardman Park Hotel, recently.

Even to qualify as a member of this new club one must have sold at least 25 short stories to first-class publications, or two successful novels, or one play or motion picture script.

Captures Much of Glamour.

"There is probably no career, with the exception of the stage, that is as exciting, as interesting and as satisfying as creative writing," Mrs. Gallagher continued. "But, while the theater absorbs the actress' time and is generally not conducive to a normal home life, the author captures much of the glamour of the actress without any of the drawbacks.

"Certainly writing does not interfere with an author's social life. On the contrary it is quite important for her to meet as many people as she can, to see as many places as she can and to study all the details of life around her. I don't say that travel is absolutely necessary * * * of course, it is always broadening and stimulating to the imagination * * * but contacts with people in all the strata of life are important.

"If the author is married, the dinners and dances and teas she and her husband attend aren't checked off to mere pastime and pleasure. On such occasions she is studying the people around her, the settings, the little incidents of everyday life that will later make her writing forceful, sincere and convincing.

"Even motherhood is not affected by this career. Many writers are excellent and devoted mothers . . . even scientific . . . and still find time to write while their babies are napping or playing in the park or shadowing her at home. A very prolific writer of popular fiction told me that she writes her very best when her children are around her, playing their games . . . laughing and talking. It does not rattle her. It is an atmosphere that she likes and in which she produces her most acceptable work.

Mind Always at Work.

"Fortunately nothing seems to interfere with the author's thinking process. Many excellent plots have been thought out over cups of tea, a bit of sewing, while combing the hair and during that moment, in bed, when one is on the very magic edge of slumber . . . not quite asleep and not quite awake. An author's mind is always at work . . . planning, plotting, wording phrases. She may not put them on paper until days later, but, nevertheless, they are in the arcana of her mind and at her command when she wants them.

"Of course, there are many authors, slightly eccentric, I am afraid, who claim that they can not write unless they have on a certain pair of shoes or sit in a certain comfy chair or have a gray or green or even a rainbow ribbon in their typewriters. One very popular author of Western novels, in order to court the muses, goes so far as to don chaps and spurs and to straddle a chair, as if he were about to gallop off on a mad adventure.

But these authors are far in the minority. For instance, Pendleton Hogan, the author of "The Bishop of Havana," a Book-of-the-Month Club selection last year, wrote this splendid first novel despite the badinage and gay young confusion of the Sigma Chi house here in Washington.

Sacrifices Necessary at First.

"Many employed women who are anxious to write feel that they can not be in an office all day and write at night. Also, they are afraid to exchange the sure income of their positions for the precarious existence of a beginning writer. But in all careers there are the first few years of real toil, real sacrifices. I know personally the author of many best-selling novels who has had phenomenal success. She was employed all day as a secretary in the Government. She wrote her first book at night. Upon the success of her first novel she could and did resign her secretarial position and devoted all her time to writing.

"Matilda Eicher, a Washington school teacher, wrote her popular 'Mrs. Mason's Daughters' while employed as a teacher in one of the local high schools.

"Mary Roberts Rinehart, Washington's own, is an excellent example of a tremendously successful author who found plenty of time in the crowded hours of her days for her writing, her husband, her children and her countless friends.

"The urge to write is rather a disease. It gets you! You write in spite of the normal human tendency to procrastinate . . . to put off that first effort.

"For the truly ambitious woman the career of creative writing is a glorious one. There is excitement and thrill and expectation in every minute of it. There is always the hope of literary recognition, honors, stories bought for motion picture production, fame and wealth. And in what other career can a woman accomplish so much and sacrifice so little?

"As for myself," Mrs. Gallagher smiled, "I'll admit I'm as busy as the proverbial one-armed paperhanger with the hives. Yet I do find time for my husband, my home, my friends and social functions.

"The time I would devote to my children if I had any I now spend on club work, in which I am extremely active."

Her voice dropped to a whisper as she added:

"Incidentally, my husband gained 10 pounds this summer. That proves I'm not neglecting him either, doesn't it?"

Mrs. Gallagher's current output includes four serials annually, about five short stories every week, and a daily short-short story for a newspaper syndicate.

Hessler-Henderson, Inc.

Bandit Search Thrill Lost in Long Delay

Sawed-off shot guns in the hands of grim plainclothesmen, flanked by keen-eyed policemen stopping all traffic, have injected an unexpected thrill into the calm of drivers crossing the Highway bridge between Virginia and Washington the last few days.

Each car is searched with rapid thoroughness, but if perchance a moving van or covered truck is in the lineup, the initial thrill wears pretty thin after about the first 30 minutes of waiting.

Style Center Now Shifting Londonward

Princess Marina Inspires Numerous Coiffures for Coming Season.

By Frances Mangum.

LONDON stands a better chance than ever of being a style center. The Prince of Wales has long held the men's fashion throne there, and now his future sister-in-law, the Princess Marina, already has inspired numerous coiffures for the coming season.

Emile Beauvais, Washington hairdresser, is a member of the fashion committee of the Congress of International Master Hairdressers meeting in London. He cables from there that "coiffures executed by the world-leading hairdressers, also inspired by Princess Marina style, will have the following characteristics:

First of all, according to M. Beauvais, hair is on the up and up. It's to be dressed even higher than last year. This, however, in no way means that short hair must be allowed to grow to reach these greater heights. It simply must be curled and brushed to give this effect.

And then those fringes—light feathery hair effects flattering to hard features. These, says M. Beauvais, will be adapted to various types. They can be used to great advantage or they can mar the effect of a carefully groomed coiffure. So, don't have a fringe until you've sought expert advice.

Most of the parts this year, he says, are on either right or left, and slanting this way or that. In other words, the good old straight part has gone crooked and all for the sake of style.

Ears, too, he indicates, are going to have a cold time of it this winter, inasmuch as stylists decree their being left uncovered. Women with large flapping ears, however, should be deaf to the mode and wear some little hair over at least the upper part. Others, however, whose ears are pink and perfect can be ever so smart by leaving them bare.

Hairlines are to be finished off with short brush-up curls to give a soft feminine effect.

Fairfax Chamber Will Hold Off Action on D. C. Project.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The Chamber of Commerce of Fairfax County, Va., at its monthly meeting refused to join with the county board of supervisors in opposing the proposed rehabilitation subsistence homesteads in the county for needy families from the District of Columbia.

Several speakers opposing action on the question at this time stated that the trade body was not sufficiently informed to consider the question. M. M. Barnard, superintendent of the District of Columbia penal institution, at Lorton, declared that he was not familiar with the rehabilitation project plans of the District, but he believed that the District authorities will never take any action detrimental to the best interests of Fairfax County.

Superintendent of Schools W. T. Woodson asked the aid of the chamber in educating taxpayers to the necessity for continued expansion of the county school system. He explained the steady growth of the schools during the past five years and pointed out the present crowded condition of classrooms and buses.

New Courses Seen Needed.

Due to the economic conditions, he declared that to train properly high-school pupils to earn a livelihood it is becoming necessary to offer business, agriculture, home economics and other vocational courses in high schools. He asked the trade body to conduct a campaign which will leave no doubt in the minds of the taxpayers that expenditures for proper school facilities are necessary.

Mrs. Elsie A. Davis, supervisor of elementary schools, explained the new State curriculum. She stated it is based on a study of the individual child and aims to develop character, citizenship and culture.

Gordon E. Smith, principal of the Lee Jackson High School emphasized the objective of the vocational work in the county high schools. The work established in Fairfax County last year is the basis of similar instruction throughout the State. He explained how every high school teacher is now linking instruction with occupational studies.

Mrs. J. E. Staub was named as chairman of the carnival to be given in Willard Hall at Fairfax next month for the benefit of the chamber. She was instructed to appoint her own assistants and committees for the occasions.

Annandale Fete Set.

The annual Annandale day celebration sponsored by the School and Community League of Annandale, Va., will be held Saturday beginning at 1 p. m. on the Annandale School grounds near the junction of the Columbia pike and Lee Jackson highway. The program will open with games and athletics under the direction of Raymond Lynch.

The principal attraction will be a horse and pony show of eight classes beginning at 3 p. m., under the direction of W. T. Carrico. The classes listed are for green hunters, hunter hacks, touch and out, open saddle and pair hunters. The pony classes are for small pony jumpers, touch and out and pair hunters. An old-fashioned country dinner will be served in the schoolhouse beginning at 5 p. m. The celebration will be closed with a square dance under the direction of Martin T. Webb.

Mrs. John Warnock Echols, of Vienna, chairman of the annual roll call of the Fairfax County Chapter, American Red Cross, has announced the appointment of Mrs. Albert M. Lester as subchairman in charge of the roll call in the town of Falls Church. The Fairfax Chapter is conducting its roll call this month so that persons who work in Washington can enroll with the county chapter before the drive starts in the Capital.

Sunrise in the Suburbs

By Clyde H. DuBose.

The "lonesome days of October," as Edgar Allan Poe might have described them, are begininng to turn the suburban landscape into that multi-colored mosaic which annually attracts hundreds of Washington motorists.

Late afternoons and holidays are already auspicious occasions for the long motorcade of persons who seek to view or study the finer arts of nature in the tinted verdure of the suburban solitudes.

Which points to the proximity of that spooky holiday known as Halloween and the neat profits being looked for by the nearby fruit growers and cider makers.

In a short while the season's festivities will be under way in the corn-fodder and pumpkin decorated halls of Washington merrymakers and—well, what's that kind of a party without apples and cider?

Which also points to another spooky question—not exactly a Halloween festivity, but spooky nevertheless. It is known as the Campus Lynching Society of the University of Maryland.

It is intended to carry no small terror to the hearts of unruly freshmen lurking in the shadows of their own cussedness. Several, it was authentically learned, went out the other evening at midnight and returned from a nearby woods in the early morning hours resembling their prehistoric ancestors.

The Jefferson Civic League of Arlington County is worried for fear residents at the Trailer Camp, on the Washington-Richmond highway, at Frazier avenue, are using District of Columbia auto tags.

Although Falls Church has been in seclusion more or less since it retired from the spotlight last year after its sensational arrest cases, the town has not been overlooked by the Government.

Uncle Sam is diving down in his pocket to see if he can find $177,000 for construction of the new municipal sewerage system, which he promised to give them under the PWA.

Doctors Hear Plea for State Medicine Plan

Proposal Would Give Same Treatment to Rich and Poor.

(Associated Press.)

A proposal for State hiring of every doctor in the land in a campaign to take the full benefits of medicine to poor and rich alike was made yesterday at the Medical Society of Virginia, meeting at Alexandria, by Edgar Sydenstricker, of the Milbank Memorial Fund, New York City.

Sydenstricker is the fund's director of public health activities. His proposal of State medicine was similar to that in force in England, which he said has been highly beneficial from the public viewpoint and well received by the medical profession there.

Symposium Is Held.

The discussion of State medicine was part of a symposium on medical economics, in which Dean J. S. Flippin of the University of Virginia Medical School said something further must be done to reduce the number of new entrants into medical practice. Dr. Walter B. Martin, of Norfolk, built a paper around the disadvantages of compulsory sickness insurance, a practice which Sydenstricker said he had also opposed.

Dr. I. C. Riggin, new State health director told of efforts of public health officials to cooperate with the private medical man.

The economic discussion followed election of Dr. Philip St. L. Moncure, of Norfolk as society president for the term beginning in the fall of 1935.

Will Meet in Norfolk.

Norfolk was chosen as next year's meeting place, the time to be designated later by the society's council.

Dr. Moncure officially becomes president-elect of the society today when Dr. Francis H. Smith, of Abingdon succeeds Dr. Robley D. Bates, of Newton as president.

Smith was elected last year.

Other officers chosen were: First Vice President Carrington Williams, of Richmond; Second Vice President S. B. Moore, of Alexandria; Third Vice President Alexander Robertson, of Staunton, and Miss Agnes V. Edwards, of Richmond, executive secretary treasurer.

Virginia Relief Session Unlikely

Gov. Peery and Hopkins Discuss Needs.

Richmond, Va., October 10 (AP).—Gov. Peery today said he hoped a special relief session of the General Assembly of Virginia would not be necessary.

The Governor intimated, however, that Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins had been in communication with him regarding Federal relief plans for Virginia in the future.

Talk of an extra session was revived in the capital when the Governor and several of his cabinet members made unannounced trips to Washington recently.

Denials Issued In Montgomery Relief Dispute

Democrats Disown Threats of Loss if Fusionists Win Election.

Denials flew thick and fast in Montgomery County's heated political battle yesterday. Both State's Attorney Stedman Prescott, chairman of the Democratic organization for the county, and Capt. Joseph C. Cissel, counsel to the county commissioners, denied statements charged to the latter by Fusion party leaders.

Luther C. Steward, national president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, denied he had made any statement regarding Montgomery County as alleged by Fusion leaders. Steward said he had been asked merely if there was any law which would force a Federal employe to contribute to campaign funds and he had quoted the general law and had not made it for any particular locality.

Capt. Cissel's denial was as follows:

"It has been recently published in the press in various forms that speakers of the Democratic party in Montgomery County had stated that should the Fusionists win next November Federal relief will be cut off in Montgomery County. Edward Peter, one of the Fusionists, has also stated publicly that he was informed I was the author of the above mentioned statement.

"I deny that I have at any time or place made any conjecture whatever as to the possible or probable policy of the Federal Government toward the future handling of any Federal funds in Montgomery County, nor have I heard any other Democratic speaker make any statement which might be considered the basis of the published report."

Both Capt. Cissel and Mr. Prescott again denied that any threat was made against the county getting relief in Cissel's recent speech.

Meantime Mrs. Raymond Clapper, secretary of the Montgomery County Welfare Board, issued a statement which declared that Federal investigation of Montgomery County relief work had been made and the county welfare board given a clean bill of health.

Chairman Peter of the executive committee of the Progressive Democratic faction of the Fusion party, had suggested in a public statement that fusion leaders would "welcome an investigation of the way in which relief funds have been handled in this county to date by politicians connected with the organization. We feel such an investigation would benefit those for whom Federal relief was intended."

In answer to Capt. Cissel's denial, Peter said:

"This is just another example already familiar to us of the manner in which organization Democrats fail to back up statements made in public. Almost always, it seems, Democratic speakers find it suddenly desirable to either retract or deny statements they have made."

Hearing Today In Still Affray

7 Prisoners to Face Court in Wounding of U. S. Revenue Agent.

A hearing in the shooting of Internal Revenue Investigator Cyrus Thomas during a whisky still raid at Forestville, Md., September 25, will be held today in Baltimore.

Federal agents at Upper Marlboro said the four colored and three white men now held in connection with the case would be brought before United States Commissioner J. Frank Supplee.

Those who will appear before Commissioner Supplee are John, Kelley and Edward Barnes, and Paul Proctor, all colored, and George Armstrong, Wallace Armstrong and Forest Smith. All live at Forestville.

Thomas, who was wounded seriously by a shotgun discharged from ambush during the raid, is recovering at Providence Hospital and will be unable to attend the hearing.

With Thomas at the time of the raid, in a thick swamp one mile northeast of Forestville, was L. J. Nay, another Internal Revenue investigator.

Nay said they waited on the edge of the swamp until two colored men appeared to load a car with whisky. Thomas caught one and handcuffed him to a tree. Nay was pursuing the other through the swamp when he heard the report of a shotgun, followed by three pistol shots, he said.

He returned to find Thomas wounded. He had been shot from ambush and had fired back at his assailant, Nay said.

Town Rejects U. S. 'White Collar' Help

Greencastle Saves $150 and Loses $6,000.

Greencastle, Pa., Oct. 9.—The borough council, at a special meeting, voted against acceptance of a Federal "white-collar" project involving a survey of the streets and properties of the town.

Burgess David W. Shinham had already signed the application for the project and work was scheduled to begin Thursday, employing 12 workers for five months. The town's share of the expense was to have been $150 and the Federal allotment $6,000.

Burgess Shinham said he had made application for the project only after being informed that the councilmen as individuals were willing that he do so.

"When you come up you'll find Old Golds" says MAE WEST

"IT SEEMS to me that the occasional smoker is a better judge of a cigarette than the constant smoker. At least, he's more critical.

"Off the screen, I never smoke. On the screen, I smoke when the part demands it. And I want a cigarette that is non-irritating, mild and easy on the throat.

"After trying many brands, I settled upon Old Gold as my 'picture smoke.' It's delightfully smooth—and free of bite—and doesn't give the least discomfort to the throat."

(Signed) MAE WEST

The net of it is this, Miss West:
No better tobacco grows than is used in Old Gold. And it's pure. That's why Old Golds are easy on the THROAT and NERVES.

Jury to Sift Jail Break Is Selected

7 Business Men Named to Official Inquiry on Mais, Legenza.

Jailmate of Desperadoes Accuses Two Women as Accessories.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—Seven men prominently connected with the business life of Richmond were chosen today as a special grand jury to investigate the jail break of Robert Mais and Walter Legenza.

Judge Don P. Halsey, of Lynchburg, who made the selections and will preside over the grand jury's activities, said this afternoon it would be sworn in and the first witness called tomorrow morning.

The men selected to fix responsibility for the escape in which the two convicted gangster-murderers shot their way to freedom, wounding three officers, one fatally, are John M. Miller, jr., banker; Granville G. Valentine, manufacturer; O. H. Funsten, real estate man; Robert Lecky, jr., and A. L. Straus, insurance men; Philip J. Bagley, laundry executive; Louiss F. Powell, manufacturer; J. Garland Hood, coal dealer; W. T. Reed, tobacconist, and J. Scott Parrish, official in several Richmond business concerns.

Accused Accessory Held.

Today's chief development in the case other than the selection of the grand jury was disclosure of results of police questioning of Lawrence E. Davis, Richmond telegraph operator and jailmate of the escaped men, who was arraigned in police court today on a charge of being an accessory to their escape. His case was continued to October 20.

Police said that under their questioning Davis had told of playing cards with Mais and Legenza at the jail and that he had seen whisky brought into the jail to them. After leaving the jail, under bond, Davis was quoted as saying he had taken a note from Mais to his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Mais, who now is held under charges of aiding and abetting in the escape.

Davis also was quoted as saying he saw Marie McKeever, woman associate of Mais, when she visited at the jail and that after his release he saw her on the street and acquiesced to a request that he drive her to Lynchburg.

Accuses Two Women.

The day after this occurred, the statement said, Davis visited Mrs. Mais and took a package from her which he delivered to Miss McKeever. When she opened it, the statement said, he saw two pistols in it and at her request he placed these in the car they had hired for the trip to Lynchburg.

Police said they were told Davis and Miss Mckeever went to Lynchburg after a stop at Buena Vista and that at a hotel there (he was not certain of its name) she met a man who was not known to him. After she had gone away with this man and failed to return at the expected time, Davis said he returned to Richmond without her. He said he sold one of the pistols for a dollar and a pint of whisky and threw the other away.

After this he said he was visited by a man named Fay Green, who also had been a prisoner at the Richmond jail, and another man. The police account said Davis told them these two visitors asked for the pistols he had had, asserting "they belonged to a follow at the jail." He had given excuses and promised to get in touch with them later and was told they would get in touch with him and "he had better" produce the weapons.

Mais, Legenza Linked To Abduction-Robbery

Williamson, W. Va., Oct. 10 (Spl.). Beaten on the head and apparently poisoned by two men who he said kidnaped and robbed him, W. M. Evans was brought home today from Prestonsburg, Ky., where he appeared after being missing 24 hours.

Chief of Police P. B. Maynard said he is working on a theory Evans was kidnaped by Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, gangster-murderers who shot their way out of a Richmond, Va., prison.

Evans, an insurance collector, disappeared Monday night after leaving home to finish his collections within the city.

F. W. Vanhorn, Masonic Head, Dies Suddenly

Suffers Heart Attack at Meeting of Order in Martinsburg.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Oct. 10 (Spl.).—Frank W. Vanhorn, 68, veteran business man here and high in State Masonic circles, died in Parkersburg, W. Va., last night of a heart attack suffered while attending the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons meeting earlier in the day.

Mr. Vanhorn was a thirty-second degree Mason Scottish Rite, past grand commander of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar of West Virginia, past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Masons of West Virginia, past grand high priest of the Grand Chapter of Masons of West Virginia, member of Osiris Temple, Mystic Shrine, of Wheeling, W. Va., past master of Equality Lodge, A. F. and M., here; past commander of Palestine Commandery, Knights Templar here, and the first venerable master of the Lodge of Perfection, formed here some years ago. He was a member of a bank directorate here, Rotary Club and Baptist church. He came here with a hosiery manufacturing industry in 1890, and this has grown to be the section's largest single manufacturing plant.

Friends here understood the Grand Lodge of Masons of the State desired rites set for Friday in order that members now attending the sessions might attend. Burial will be in Philadelphia.

Mr. Vanhorn had no immediate survivors.

Mrs. George D. Smith.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 10 (Spl.). Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning for Mrs. Willie G. Smith, 69, widow of George D. Smith, former hotel man of Charlotteville, who died yesterday after an illness of nine weeks.

Mrs. Smith is survived by a daughter, Mrs. J. L. Morrow, of Birmingham, Ala., and a sister, Mrs. R. E. Carter, of Charlottesville.

Robert W. Ashby.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 10 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held in Richmond today for Robert W. Ashby, 60, insurance man, who died here yesterday in the Mary Washington ospital. He was buried in Riverview Cemetery.

He is survived by a brother, Henry C. Ashby, and three sisters, Mrs. Lucy Sterling, Ida W. Ashby, and Ruby N. Ashby, all of Richmond.

Mrs. Lillian Ketcham.

Charlottsville, Va., Oct. 10 (Spl.). Funeral rites for Mrs. Lillian Ketcham, 70, who died yesterday after a lingering illness, were held this afternoon from her late residence, the service being conducted by Dr. Henry Alford Porter, pastor of the First Baptist Church. Interment was in Maplewood Cemetery.

She was educated at Piedmont Female Institute, this city, where she specialized in music. For years she was soloist at the First Baptist Church. Following her marriage to Benjamin Price Ketcham, of the Southern Railway, the couple made their home in Greensboro, N. C.

Mrs. Ketcham is survived by one sister, Mrs. O. W. Loving, of Charlotte, N. C.

Memorial Is Planned To Dr. Henry Harbaugh

Waynesboro, Pa., Oct. 10 (Spl.). The erection of a memorial to the late Dr. Henry Harbaugh, author of the Mercersburg Academy hymn, is being considered by Washington Township school teachers. Dr. Harbaugh was born and attended rural schools in this township.

The proposed memorial would be erected on the site of the "School House on the Creek," which he immortalized in his poem in Pennsylvania German. Dr. Harbaugh was a noted scholar, author and theologian.

Benefit Show Postponed.

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 10 (Spl.).—Postponement of the Abaca Grotto benefit show, "The World's All Right," was announced yesterday by L. J. Pyne, arrangements chairman. The show will be held October 18 and 19, instead of tomorrow and Friday.

Horse Races Top Fair Day At Frederick

6,000 Crowd Grounds; Agricultural Tests Set for Today.

32 Schools Expected to Enter Their Teams in Judging.

Frederick, Md., Oct. 10 (Spl.).—The second day of the Frederick Fair was held today with more than 6,000 people milling about the midway, exhibition halls, grandstand and race track, where a card of flat races furnished the major entertainment of the day.

Tomorrow the State vocational agricultural contests under the supervision of Charles H. Remsburg, agricultural instructor at Frederick High School, will be held.

Thirty-two schools throughout Maryland are expected to enter teams in the dairy cattle, corn and potato judging contests and demonstrations.

The schools are Walkersville, Liberty, Thurmont, Emmitsburg, Frederick, Middletown, Princess Anne, Oldtown, Baden, Jarrettsville, Church Hill, Sudlersville, Oakland, Prince Frederick, Snow Hill, Berlin, Stockton, Sparks, Hancock, Lisbon, Smithsburg, Noonsboro, Franklin, Clarksville, Centerville, Gaithersburg, Damascus, Poolesville, Hyattstown and Flintstone.

Teams Arrive Today.

The teams will arrive tomorrow and will attend the Future Farmers of America annual banquet in the evening. The judges of the demonstration classes are H. F. Cotterman, chairman; Ray Carpenter and Dr. C. H. Lane. The committee in charge is Harold A. Rensberg, H. W. Beggs, Arthur M. Ahalt, Kenneth Remsberg and Robert H. Remsberg. A meeting of the executive committee of the F. F. A. with State Adviser J. D. Blackwell will be held to vote upon candidates for the Maryland farmer degree to be conferred at the banquet.

Teachers' College Receives Sun Dial

Shepherdstown, W Va., Oct. 10. The sun dial presented by the senior class of 1934 is being erected on the front campus at Shepherd State Teachers' College here between Knutti Hall and Rumsey Hall.

The dial will be near enough to the sidewalk to enable pedestrians to see the angle of the sun at any time. On the bronze dial are the words, "I count only sunny hours." On the pedestal is engraved, "Class of 1934."

Strikers Wave National Emblem as They Defy Mill Operations

Employes of the Interwoven Mills, Inc., of Martinsburg, W. Va., who walked out in accordance with the National textile strike order several weeks ago, waved an American flag Tuesday as they protested against the movement of merchandise from the plant. West Virginia State police, called upon to preserve order, used tear-gas bombs and nightsticks to clear the way for the car. Two employes of the mill suffered injuries during the melee. The mill has not reopened following cancellation of the National textile strike. About 1,700 employes are involved.

Missing Youth Is Discovered

Edward Crist Turns Up, in Daze, at Baltimore.

Baltimore, Oct. 10 (AP).—Edward G. Crist, 17, son of a Gettysburg (Pa.) physician and object of a Nation-wide search since his disappearance from Lawrenceville Academy Saturday, was found late last night in a dazed condition in police headquarters.

It is believed he was a victim of amnesia.

Louis Gebhard, elevator operator, saw a man standing in the vestibule. As Gebhard opened the door the youth fell to the floor.

He was taken to a hospital but was unable to tell his name or anything about himself. In his pockets were an automobile operator's card bearing the name of Edward G. Crist, 110 Chambersburg street, Gettysburg, Pa., and a Pullman car stub from Atlanta, Ga., to Washington, D. C., dated October 8.

Police Lieut. Robert Davis said Crist, when questioned some time after he was taken to the hospital, recalled having been at school last Saturday and that he had $90 at that time. He had only 6 cents when found.

Dr. Chester G. Crist, his father, arrived today by automobile and took him home.

School Sale

Frederick Board Offers 11 Abandoned Buildings.

Winchester, Oct. 10 (Spl.).—The Frederick County school board finds itself in the real estate business as a result of the current program of consolidation.

Leslie D. Kline, superintendent, today announced plans to sell at auction October 20 no less than 11 one-room school houses. There are others vacant but they will not be sold immediately.

Wedding Joins Students

Ceremony at Harrisonburg Teachers' College Symbolizes Annual Union of Old and New; "Bridal" Party Tours Campus.

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 10 (Spl.). Impressive as any real ceremony, the annual "old girl-new girl wedding" was staged today in a beautiful setting at the Harrisonburg State Teachers College. The event, symbolizing the union of the old and new portions of the student body, was carried out with all the details of a big social event.

The rites were performed on the flower-bedecked stage of Woodrow Wilson Hall, while the 750 young women students looked on.

Miss Marian Smith, of Norwood, Pa., as president of the senior class, was the bridegroom. Miss Helen Willis, of Clarksville, represented the new girls as the bride. Miss Henrietta Manson, of Lottsburg, president of the Student Government Association, performed the ceremony.

Among Attendants.

Miss Doris Parker, Norfolk, was maid of honor and Miss Billye Milnes, Rippon, W. Va., was best man. Miss Betty Faulkner, Charleston, W. Va., was flower girl, and Miss Elizabeth Strange, Richmond, ring bearer.

Bridesmaids were Misses Genevieve Stone, Long Beach, Long Island; Millicent Leggett, Christiansburg; Helen Irby, Blackstone; Alice West, Salem; Margaret Dixon, Winston-Salem, N. C., and Elizabeth Gilley, Axton.

The bride's family included Misses Frances Jolly, Holland; Nancy Turner, Norfolk; Julia Courter, Amelia; Eleanor Cook, Charleston, W. Va., and Ruth Shular, East Stone Gap. In the bridegroom's family were Misses Joyce Rieley, Troutville; Alma Fultz, Butterworth; Dorothea Nevils, Hopewell, and Katherine Beale, Holland.

Glee Club Sings.

Groomsmen were Misses Elizabeth Bule, Lake City, Fla.; Alyce Geiger, Los Angeles; Eleanor Studebaker, Luray; Virginia Cox, Woodlawn; Clyde Schuler, Broadway, and Evelyn Pugh, Edom.

Music was furnished by the college glee club directed by Miss Edna T. Schaeffer, and by Misses Josephine R. Miller, Woodstock, violinist, and Julia Kilgore, Coeburn, pianist.

After the ceremony the bridal party toured the campus in an automobile driven by Miss Janie Miner, Meridian, Miss. A banquet in Bluestone Dining Hall followed. A reception for members of the wedding party and guests in Walter Reed Gymnasium closed the program.

Along the Tri-State Trail

with

C. B. Carr

Post State Editor

In our first journey along the Tri-State trail one notices a retinue of pageants, fairs, harvest displays, church celebrations and campus days as a menu for the person who likes historical pageantry reminiscent of the past and display of present ideas and wares.

In Baltimore the eyes of Methodism are turned on the four-day celebration of the 150th anniversary of American Methodism, which opened there yesterday. More than 1,500 delegates from every nook and corner of the United States, representing every branch of the sect, are on hand for the celebration. Although they are members of one of the three branches of the church, all join as one in honoring the growth of the denomination.

In Winchester, Va., an unusual display of garden products is planned. During the past summer about 125 families, previously on relief rolls, found much of their livelihood in subsistence gardens. So successful were the gardens that this Saturday they plan an exhibition of products raised in the first "subsistence garden fair" on record in the United States.

Horse lovers have their eyes turned on Llangollen, the beautiful country estate of Mr. and Mrs. John Hay Whitney, near Upperville, Va., where, on Friday, the best of horseflesh and the hardiest of manhood will compete on one of the most grueling courses in the world for the honors of the equine circle.

Students of Hood College, Frederick, Md., are in a sort of glee this week, planning for their annual campus day Saturday. Campus day affords an annual opportunity for competition in many branches of sport for the girls and —so college officials say—there will be plenty of rivalry this year.

The postmaster at Chestertown, Md., had an unusual experience this week. There was received at the postoffice, through parcel post channels, a live alligator. The 'gator was in good shape and readily delivered to the addressee. However, the postmaster has learned that the alligator is but one of thousands which may be shipped from Florida this season by reason of a fad there of sending one of these creatures to the "folks back home" as a souvenir of the "land of sunshine."

The Maryland Tercentenary Pageant, "The Soul of Maryland," was concluded last night in Baltimore before a large and enthusiastic audience. It was a great show, highly complimentary to those who produced it.

Car Standards Reported Improving in Virginia

Richmond, Oct. 10 (AP).—Semi-annual inspections have shown a progressively higher standard of mechanical condition for automobiles operated in Virginia, Capt. H. B. Nicholas, superintendent of the State traffic patrol of the motor vehicle division, said today.

The fall inspections now are in progress and motorists have until October 31 to have their cars looked over and secure new windshield stickers from one of the more than 1,000 official inspection stations.

4 Foiled in Break At Charles Town

Jailer Traps Men Hidden in Ventilator Room.

Charles Town, W. Va., Oct. 10 (Spl.).—Quick action on the part of Jailer Richard J. Madison prevented the escape of four prisoners from the Jefferson County Jail here early this morning.

Mr. Madison, hearing a peculiar noise, was aroused, and upon entering the barred section of the jail, found boards and bricks scattered on the floor. He later discovered the four men, Charles Rodgers, George Rouss, Festus Jenkins and Rayfield Helms, the latter colored, trapped in the ventilator room.

The men, all of whom are held on felony charges, had used a window frame and window weights to spring the several doors necessary to go from their cell block to the ventilator room. Locksmiths, carpenters and stone masons repaired the damage done by the prisoners.

D. A. R. Convenes At Charles Town

Charles Town, W. Va., Oct. 10 (Spl.).—The twenty-ninth annual conference, National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution of West Virginia, opened a three-day session here last night, with Mrs. Gory Hogg, of Lewisburg, State regent, presiding, and Pack Horse Ford Chapter, Shepherdstown, and Bee Line Chapter, Charles Town, acting as hostess chapters.

A reception last night in honor of the president, National officers, State officers and guests was held in the Thomas Jefferson Hotel, headquarters for the convention.

The delegates went on a tour of points of historic interest today and were served a buffet luncheon at Bellevue, home of Mrs. R. C. Ringgold, Shepherdstown.

Women Meet At Front Royal

Annual Session of King's Daughters Hear Talk by Judge Olmstead.

Front Royal, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—King's Daughters of Virginia, in annual convention here, devoted the morning to a full business session and this afternoon turned to social diversions.

Mrs. Henry E. Eley, of Suffolk, president, reported a year of activity during which scores of circles and young peoples groups were visited and addresses made at many meetings of related organizations. Regional reports were made by Mrs. D. W. Hess, of Roanoke; Mrs. John B. Neale, of Beeyville; Mrs. H. S. Saunders, of Shirley; Mrs. J. F. Cassel, of Staunton, Mrs. H. M. White of Fairfax; Mrs. Martha Haywood, of Gloucester; Mrs. J. W. Rawlings, of Suffolk, and Mrs. A. R. McCauley, of Richmond, all reported activity and enthusiasm.

Mrs. M. A. Smythe, of Roanoke, secretary, and Mrs. R. W. Price, of Petersburg, treasurer, were others who reported this morning along with Mrs. Saunders as chairman of the organization's publication; Mrs. John Butcher, of Norfolk, on junior work, and Mrs. Charles Day, of Norfolk, publicity chairman and historian.

Messages of greeting were read from branches of the organization in several other States and from international officers.

Trial Justice Walter G. Olmstead, president of the local associated charities, spoke on "How the King's Daughters Can Help Our Work," suggesting a movement for free school books for needy children and efforts to keep husbands, brothers and sons from patronizing bootleggers.

Class Officers Elected.

Leonardtown, Md., Oct. 10 (Spl.). The senior class of the Margaret Brent High School has elected class officers who include: President, James Gough, of Chaptico; vice president, Biscoe Knott, of Palmers; secretary-treasurer, Miss Eleanor Bosse, of Mechanicsville. Mrs. Carl Wellinger was selected as their faculty adviser.

Methodists Urge Unity Of Church

Laymen Have Wearied of Dissension, Is Warning of Dr. Straughn.

Leaders Meet to Fete 150th Anniversary of Faith.

Baltimore, Oct. 10 (AP).—American Methodism's three branches, united here today to celebrate the founding of the parent branch 150 years ago, heard church leaders speak for unification and prepared for tomorrow's "unification day" program.

More than 1,200 delegates and hundreds of visitors heard the Rev. Dr. James H. Straughn, Baltimore minister and Maryland church leader, warn the churchmen that "laymen are becoming utterly weary of dissensions in the Methodist family."

Though the celebration was planned primarily in commemoration of the sesquicentennial of Methodism, the note of unity has been sounded by leaders of all three branches of the church. The four-day meeting is expected to result in great progress toward a united church.

"Laymen are getting the idea that preachers are engaged in a fight with each other over issues that no longer live," Dr. Straughn said. "In some way we must recover the voice of the body of the church, and it is most noteworthy that laymen have been admitted into the councils of Episcopal Methodism."

It was over the question of lay representation that the first break in Methodism occurred in 1828, when the Methodist Protestant branch was formed. The other break was in 1845, when the Methodist Episcopal Church South was formed following upon a split over the slavery issue.

Bishop Ernest G. Richardson, Philadelphia, president of the Anti-saloon League of America, sounded a different note to the delegates. "It is the duty of Christianity to point out and denounce evil," he said. "Fear of criticism has no place in the Christian church.

"We are living in a day when a man, who lifts his voice against evil is called a kill-joy, but there must be no compromise. Compromise may be all right to achieve the ends of politics, but it is not for righteousness to use against evil."

Bishop Richadson's subject was "Barbara Heck, the Puritan Conscience in Methodism."

This afternoon was occupied in a reception to delegates at which State and city officials spoke. The bells of the State and the city were rung 150 times commemorating the sesquicentennial.

An oratorio, "The Evangel of the New World," was presented tonight. The sesquicentennial program continues through Saturday.

For the Sun Room.

A summery air may be given to a sun room, or even a bedroom, by adding a dado made of a painted wood trellis nailed to the wall. The trellis begins at the top of the baseboard and extends approximately 30 inches above the floor. It is constructed in sections, painted, and then placed in position.

Congressional Player Turns Back Host Ace By One Up in Thriller

Wife of Pro Shoots 86 in Reaching Semifinals; Miss Harper, Mrs. Clark Win Easily; Mrs. Meckley Defeats Mrs. Scott.

By Dave Herman.

MRS. ROLAND MACKENZIE, wife of the Congressional professional, provided the Middle Atlantic golf championship with its first real upset yesterday.

She eliminated the host club star, Mrs. Hugh T. Nicolson, 1-up, in a thrilling match that featured activities in the quarter-final round at Washington Golf and Country Club.

Joining Mrs. Mackenzie, former California debutante, in the semi-finals were Mrs. David Clark, of Army and Navy, medalist; Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, of Indian Spring, and young Lily Harper, of Portsmouth, Virginia's champion.

Mrs. Mackenzie had to travel to the eighteenth green in a breath-taking hole-for-hole battle before winning her match, but the other three victors did not have such an exciting time.

Mrs. Clark won as she pleased from Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, of Congressional, by 6 and 5. By the same count, Miss Harper put out Miss Susan Hacker, of Chevy Chase. Paired together in the qualifying round, Mrs. Meckley and Mrs. Jack Scott, of Congressional, met again yesterday, and Mrs. Meckley triumphed, 3 and 2.

Thus the stage is set this morning for a match between Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Mackenzie at 10 o'clock and Miss Harper and Mrs. Meckley at 10:05.

Both Are Former Finalists.

Both Miss Harper and Mrs. Meckley are former Middle Atlantic finalists. The Virginia miss lost to Mrs. Jean Jones, of Richmond, last year, and Mrs. Meckley bowed to Mrs. J. Marvin Haynes two years ago in Baltimore.

The jinx that trailed Mrs. Nicolson, five-time District champion, in two previouss Middle Atlantic events caught up with her yesterday, but it was some spotty playing on the stretch that had much to do with her downfall.

In winning Mrs. Mackenzie did herself proud with an 86. Mrs. Nicolson scored an 88.

Mrs. Mackenzie got the jump by taking the first two holes in par figures. An out-of-bounds drive cost her opponent a five on the first. Mrs. Nicolson won the third with a five, and they halved the next three holes. On the seventh, Mrs. Mackenzie sank a 15-footer to win with a par 4, but Mrs. Nicolson won the eighth, and they went to the tenth with the Congressional golfer leading 1 up.

Two Up on Twelfth Hole.

Mrs. Mackenzie became two up by annexing the twelfth with a five, when Mrs. Nicolson dubbed her third shot, Mrs. Mackenzie three-putted to lose the thirteenth, won the fourteenth with a par 3, when Mrs. Nicolson's drive caught the ditch. Mrs. Nicolson won back a hole at the fifteenth.

The pivotal point of the match occured on the sixteenth, a 343-yarder. Here the host club star, then one down, missed a four-footer that would have meant a birdie three. She halved the hole in fours. They halved the seventeenth.

On the eighteenth Mrs. Nicolson blew another opportunity to prolong the match. She was down the fairway in two lusty wallops 10 feet from the green. Mrs. Mackenzie played her second and third poorly, and took four to reach the carpet, knocking the ball 5 feet from the pin. But Mrs. Nicolson dubbed her third, and was 12 feet wide of the pin on her fourth.

Great Putt Under Pressure.

Mrs. Nicolson tapped in her putt—a great putt under pressure. Mrs. Mackenzie also sank her putt, and the battle was over.

Mrs. Clark took a commanding lead in her match with Mrs. Dowdall, yielding but few holes, while Miss Harper, out in 43, lost only two holes to Miss Hacker. The results follow:

Championship Flight.

Mrs. David Clark (Army-Navy) defeated Mrs. J. F. Dowdall (Congressional), 6 and 5; Mrs. Roland Mackenzie (Congressional) defeated Mrs. Hugh T. Nicolson (Washington), 1 up; Miss Lily Harper (Portsmouth, Va.) defeated Miss Susan Hacker (Chevy Chase), 6 and 5; Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley (Indian Spring) defeated Mrs. Jack Scott (Congressional), 3 and 2.

Consolation—Mrs. R. C. Welton (Richmond, Va.) defeated Mrs. Bishop Hill (Chevy Chase), 1 up, nineteenth hole; Mrs. Hume Wrong (Chevy Chase) defeated Miss Louise Clayton (Chevy Chase), 1 up, nineteenth hole; Mrs. Hume Peabody (Army-Navy) defeated Mrs. J. T. Powell (Manor), 3 and 2; Mrs. George H. Parker (Kenwood) won by default.

Second Flight.

Mrs. C. N. Wessells (Roanoke, Va.) defeated Miss Ellen Kincaid (Beaver Dam), 2 up; Mrs. M. E. Irwin (Beaver Dam) defeated Mrs. C. H. Merillat (Washington), 2 and 1; Mrs. L. H. Hedrick (Army-Navy) defeated Mrs. Douglas Tachiffely (Washington), 1 up, twentieth hole; Mrs. William Morrison Smith (Columbia) defeated Mrs. F. G. Awalt (Congressional), 5 and 3.

Consolation—Mrs. Howard Simens (Manor) defeated Mrs. C. K. Osborne (Army-Navy), 5 and 3; Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr. (Chevy Chase) defeated Mrs. O. C. Roney (Washington), 4 and 3; Mrs. E. Amick (Columbia) defeated Mrs. Frank Royer Keefer (Chevy Chase), 3 and 2; Mrs. R. A. Lacey (Columbia) defeated Mrs. O. Thacker (Washington), 6 and 5.

Third Flight.

Mrs. Paul Ransom (Army-Navy) defeated Mrs. C. B. Stewart (Washington), 2 up; Mrs. R. N. Sutton (Washington) defeated Mrs. J. E. McCabe (Washington), 3 and 2.

Today's Pairings.

10:00, Mrs. Clark vs. Mrs. Mackenzie; 10:05, Miss Harper vs. Mrs. Meckley; 9:50, Mrs. Welton vs. Mrs. Wrong; 9:55, Mrs. Peabody vs. Mrs. Parker; 9:30, Mrs. Wessells vs. Mrs. Irwin; 9:35, Mrs. Hedrick vs. Mrs. Smith; 9:40, Mrs. Simons vs. Mrs. Blair; 9:45, Mrs. Amick vs. Mrs. Lacey; 10:50, Mrs. Ransom vs. Mrs. Sutton; 10:15, Mrs. McCabe vs. Mrs. Stewart.

Brothers to Battle On Grid Saturday

Bristol, Va., Oct. 10 (Spl.).—The King College - Hampden - Sidney game here Saturday may turn into a family scrap, it developed today, when Jack Formwalt, Tornado tackle, revealed that Bill Formwalt, star Tiger half back, is his brother.

The Formwalt boys started their football careers when they filled the end positions together for two years at Lexington (Va.) High School. Bill, the elder, is now playing his third year at Hampden-Sidney. This is Jack's first season at King College.

Ada Wan Wins Frederick Sprint

5,000 Watch Races at Fair; Calumet Dixon Trotting Winner.

FREDERICK, Oct. 10 (Spl.).—A crowd of 5,000 witnessed the races at the Frederick Fair this afternoon. The events, three harness and two running, were gotten off in good order by Starter C. A. Hopkins, Petersburg, Va., and the time was fast. H. W. Blunt, Baltimore, representing the Maryland Racing Commission, occupied the judges stand and commented favorably on the events.

The first race, 2:15 pace, purse $300, was won by Gladys Potempkin, a brown mare owned by J. Rodman, Kewanee, Ill., which took the first and second heats. Calumet Alone, a chestnut gelding, owned by Ed Myers, Harrington, Del., was second, and Hattie Axe, a brown mare, entered by the Caton Stables, Wilmington, Del., was third. Hattie Axe and Calumet Alone came up the home stretch in the third heat neck and neck, until within striking distance of the wire, when the chestnut gelding forged ahead and Gladys Potempkin slipped in just behind Calumet Alone.

The second race, 2:22 trot, purse $250, went to Calumet Dixon, owned by Dr. G. E. Finney, Onancock, Va., in straight heats. Mollie Hanover, a brown mare owned by H. C. Corbin, Reading, Pa., was second, and Calumet Dragon, a brown gelding owned by Raymond Wilson, Keymar, Md., was third. The race was in straight heats for all of the horses.

The third race, a Frederick County special, purse $150, was won by Little Dorie, a brown mare owned by Harry Eyler, Thurmont, Md., in Little, Golf Champ, Goes Back to Books

Stanford University, Calif., Oct. 10 (AP).—Lawson Little, British and American amateur golf champion, resumed his studies today at Stanford University, where he is majoring in economics. Little, a junior, plans to keep his golf game on edge through regular practice on the Stanford course.

Klem and Delancey Must Pay For Cursing During Series

DETROIT, Oct. 10 (AP).—Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball's high commissioner, today imposed fines of $50 each on William J. Klem, senior umpire of the National League, and William Delancey, St. Louis Cardinal catcher, for the use of "over-ripe words" during the World Series.

A decision in the case of Joe Medwick, Cardinal outfielder, who was the central figure in the near-riot of Tuesday's final game, will be reserved for a few days, Judge Landis said.

Judge Landis described Klem's argument with Leon (Goose) Goslin, Tiger outfielder, which took place Monday in a crowded hotel lobby, as "unbecoming a major league umpire."

"Both Klem and Delancey used over-ripe words, for which they should be fined," Landis said of the two incidents.

"Imagine how it looked when one of the women in that crowd in the lobby turned and asked someone who the man using profane language was and heard that someone say, 'Why, that's Umpire Bill Klem, of the National League.' I'm not going to stand for that sort of thing."

He said it was the first time in his 14 years as baseball commissioner that he had found it necessary to fine an umpire.

Umpire Clarence Owens fined Delancey $200 for abusive language in St. Louis. Landis said the fine was illegal.

Later, Commissioner Landis slipped away on a fishing trip to northern Michigan after disposing of three of the four misconduct charges that were hang-overs from the World Series. Awaiting decision after he returns to Chicago is the case of Joe Medwick, who was banished from yesterday's final game during a near-riot that followed his clash with Marvin Owen, Detroit Tiger third baseman.

He closed, without penalty, the case of Gerald Walker, Tiger pinch batter, who was charged with casting aspersions at the eyesight of Umpire Jack Reardon.

They Enter Middle Atlantic Golf Semifinals

18-Year-Old Virginia Girl Seeks Mid-Atlantic Crown

Brother's Golf Title Feat Inspired Lily Harper to Take Up Game.

LILY HARPER, 18-year-old Portsmouth, Va., lassie, who meets Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley in the Middle Atlantic semifinals today, attributes whatever success she has attained in golf to two things:

Expert coaching of her famous brother, Chandler, three times Virginia amateur champion now turned professional.

Constant and faithful practicing, with emphasis placed on the short game.

Miss Harper says her brother's feat of winning the State title at Hot Springs at the age of 16 inspired her to take up the game. Her golfing career only four years old, the 104-pound miss has blazed a conquering trail.

Has Won Three Championships.

She has won Virginia championship, the Norfolk City and Tidewater championships. Last year in Richmond she was runner-up in the Middle Atlantic tournament—really her first big tournament.

She has scored as low as 76, which is nothing to sneeze at for a frail, freckle-faced girl, who admits she loses from 5 to 10 pounds in every golf tournament.

"The trouble with me is that I take this game too doggone seriously," Miss Harper remarked yesterday, shortly after dusting off Miss Susan Hacker, 6 and 5.

"Every time I finish playing one shot I'm thinking of the next one—my lie, my stance, my swing—my putt to the hole—my drive off the next tee. It really gives you the jitters. It's a wonder I break a 100 on some rounds, though my playing in this tournament hasn't been anything to br-g about. And it doesn't make you feel so good when you lose a few pounds every time you play an 18-hole match."

Here Is Echo On Diz-Daffy Series

Gallico Tells of Cochrane's Luck Charms; Classes Cards a Rough Lot.

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10 (Spl.).—Echoes and memories from one of the greatest World Series of all time . . . The zing-zest and pep of the Cardinal batting and fielding practice the day before the series opened in Detroit, and the rather jittery and high-strung session of the Tigers, and the fielding errors in practice by both Rogell and Gehringer that indicated the nervous tension and also forecast the collapse of the infield when the series began.

Central Beats Ballston Grid Team, 7-6

Dunlap Stars for Local Team in Defeating Washington-Lee.

By John R. Vosburgh.

CAPT. DON DUNLAP, Central High's triple-threat quarter back, led his white-jerseyed forces to a 7-to-6 victory over a strong Washington-Lee High eleven yesterday, once more proving himself one of those polished high school backs who come few and far between.

While a student crowd of 2,000 looked on at Central Stadium, Dunlap took over into his own safe keeping the scoring burden for the Mount Pleasanters.

Dunlap Had a Busy Day.

The Central pilot shot a beautiful 25-yard pass to his left end, Paul Whedon, early in the first period to account for Central's lone touchdown; drop-kicked perfectly for the extra point; repulsed numerous Washington-Lee advances with consistent 50-yard punts and kept the Virginians well worried with his slashing off-tackle slants.

Though holding only a 7-to-0 lead, Coach Bert Coggins sent in his second team in the second half, keeping it in till the final whistle. With the exception of the absence of the Dunlap threat, the reserves appeared only a little less strong than the regulars whom Washington-Lee had forced to take the defensive the entire second quarter and part of the first after Central had scored.

Birch Shares Spotlight.

Sharing the spotlight with the Central captain was Washington-Lee's brilliant triple-threat back, Orlando Birch, whose running, kicking and passing kept the Washington boys back in their own territory for the last three-quarters of the game.

Birch's superb 35-yard pass to his substitute right end, Billy Bragg, brought the Washington-Lee touchdown midway in the third period. Ward Boswell's place-kick attempt for the extra point was blocked by Charlie Jones, substitute Central center.

Washington-Lee, after receiving the opening kick-off, was held and punted, Central taking the ball on its own 38. Dunlap ripped off a first down on two plays and big Norman Sabatini plowed through to the W-L 45-yard line. Washington-Lee braced and Dunlap backed up to his own 45 to shoot a bull's-eye pass to Whedon, who gathered it in in the clear on the 30-yard line and ran unmolested for the touchdown!

Virginians Outplay Rivals.

The Virginians outplayed Central for the remainder of the game, knocking off a flock of first downs. In the final seconds of the first half they missed a touchdown when Birch's 28-yard pass to Burnett sailed a few inches beyond the latter's outstretched fingers in the end zone. Washington-Lee gained extensively on Birch's kicks in the third period and went to the Central 10-yard line on a passing attack only to lose the ball on downs. Central kicked to the 25. Central

Local Squads Face Heavy Grid Guns

Maryland Plays Navy; C. U. Battles Holy Cross; G. U. at Manhattan.

Geo. Washington Meets Cadets of Citadel Tomorrow Night.

PRELIMINARY skirmishes by the boards, with a minimum of casualties, the local football brigade will march into the heavy fire of the 1934 gridiron war this week.

George Washington is scheduled to bang the opening big gun on the local sector against The Citadel tomorrow night on Griffith's battlefield.

Maryland will wheel out its heavy artillery against the Navy at Annapolis and American University will unleash a machine-gun attack against Bridgewater here Saturday.

Georgetown, Gallaudet and Catholic University will campaign deep in the enemy territory, engaging Manhattan, Washington College and Holy Cross in their respective battles Saturday.

Colonials Play Citadel.

In repulsing the night attack of The Citadel, the Colonials will be faced with the task of overcoming an eleven that functions with military smoothness and warlike fighting spirit. Not for nothing have the North Carolinians been dubbed the Bulldogs.

While generally rated the underdogs against George Washington, they may return with large portions of the nether garments of the Colonials clasped firmly in their molars.

So seriously are the Colonials regarding the growls of the Bulldogs and so disastrous would prove an upset at their hands this early in the season, that Coach Jim Pixlee is drilling his charges as though preparing for a crucial engagement. Dale Prather has been working out at the full back position, which has been a contsant source of worry, and may be switched from his usual tackle post to the back field for The Citadel.

Farrell Out of Line.

All but one of Maryland's big guns will be ready for action against the Navy. Al Farrell, who's firing might have proved effective in sinking the U. S. S. Midshipmen, was silenced in last week's Washington and Lee stand. Farrell suffered a badly smashed nose when a husky General accidentally trotted across his face after Al had fallen while running interference. Farrell was operated upon at the University of Maryland Hospital in Baltimore the following day.

Outweighed and outplayed by Hampden-Sydney last week, the Eagles are sharpening their beaks and preparing to fly high against Bridgewater.

Hoyas Still Drilling.

The Hoya eleven will continue to make preparations for the battle of Manhattan until almost the zero hour. They will drill against the freshmen today and continue training for the Jaspers tomorrow in punting sessions, dummy scrimmages and passing drills.

Catholic University is prepared to dig in against its perennial conqueror, Holy Cross, which has won every one of their six previous en-

Edna Admits

She Will Be Mrs. Schoolboy Rowe This Morning.

DETROIT, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—Schoolboy Rowe and Edna May Skinner, Arkansas sweetheart of the Detroit Tiger pitcher, will be wed tomorrow morning, his fiancee said tonight.

"Lynn," as Miss Skinner calls her future husband, failed to appear at the courthouse today when the couple ntended to get a special marriage license.

The Schoolboy had to go to Flint, Edna explained, but she was certain he would be back by 10 a. m. tomorrow when they will ask Probate Judge Edward Command to waive the statutory five-day delay before the ceremony. The judge said he would grant a special petition.

Royal Welcome Given World Champions

St. Louis Greets Returning Cards; 'Glad to Be Home' Says Dizzy.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 10 (AP).—St. Louis today acclaimed the world champion Cardinals as the city's heroes.

A parade over streets strewn with paper and debris of the celebration which began yesterday afternoon and extended through most of the night was the city's tribute to the conquerers of Detroit's Tigers.

Near the front of the line of parading automobiles, just behind the car reserved for Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann and club officials, rode triumphantly the brothers Dean—Dizzy, exuberant, bizarre; Paul, having just as good a time in his more quiet manner.

Knots in Tiger's Tail.

Dizzy wore a white African sun helmet and carried a toy rubber tiger. On the long tail, as Dizzy pointed out to admirers, were four knots, each representing a Dean victory over the American League champions.

"Glad to be home, with the world series in the bag," Dizzy said.

"This hat," as he called the helmet," is to wear when I go fishing down in Deanville, Fla.," which used to be Bradenton.

"Wanta banana?" a loud-voiced youth shouted to Joe Medwick, who yesterday was the target for fruit, vegetables and glassware from the left-field bleachers at Navin Field, Detroit.

Mrs. Dean Enjoys Greeting.

Like her famous husband, Mrs. Jerome Herman (Dizzy) Dean, enjoyed the excitement immensely.

"Everybody was so nice," he said. "At first, Paul seemed to think it rather silly, but before the parade was over he was the worst cut-up of the lot."

The rubber-armed Deans hurried to their hotel, gathered up their belongings and boarded an airplane for Oklahoma City to pitch tonight in an exhibition game. They arrived safely.

Mayor Diskmann, President Sam Breadon of the Cardinals and a group of players and their wives were guests of the Coronado Hotel at a dinner tonight. Later the group, numbering 28, were to be the mayor's guests at a horse show.

Tonight many of the Cardinals had left for their homes. Manager Frankie Frisch will remain here several days to talk over plans for 1935 with club officials.

Labrot Entry Ruled Out On Foul

Hunter Suspended Rest of Meeting; Crowd Booes Riding.

Eighth Pole Scene of Wedge in Race of Rough Tactics.

By Walter Haight.

THE longshot player's dream finally came true. The stewards ordered down the numbers of the proud Labrot Stable entry, an odds-on favorite, and in their places hung a new set with that box-car figure smack, so sweet to the eyes of those who go in for fat odds with their horses. It all happened after the running of the annual $5,000 added Maryland Futurity at Laurel.

The new numbers represented Truly Yours, Memorable, Adams Eve and Last Time. A few minutes before, amid some of the loudest booing ever to echo off the multi-colored trees along the back stretch the figures on the results board had shown Toolbox, Truly Yours, Little Dinah and Kings Pleasure, with the exception of the second named, all Labrot representatives.

The race was as foul as some of the language aimed at the Labrot riders, although opinion was divided as to whether or not the interference was deliberate. The stewards definitely cast their vote when they suspended Jockey Jimmy Hunter, who had the mount on Toolbox, for the remainder of the meeting.

Wedge at Eighth Pole.

Although the race had been marked by some rough riding in the early stages, the all important setting was approaching the eighth pole. Toolbox, leading man of the Labrot entry, and Truly Yours had been rated off the pace set by Kings Pleasure and Little Dinah. The entire field was running close to the rail with Kings Pleasure on the inside virtually abreast Little Dinah. Hunter, on Toolbox, made his move to the outside followed by Johnny Gilbert, on Truly Yours. The three Labrot horses were now on even terms.

Gilbert saw an opening between Little Dinah and Toolbox and started through. As he did, Toolbox swerved in and Little Dinah swerved out, forming a wedge. Before Gilbert could pull up on Truly Yours, his mount was bumped by Toolbox and knocked back against the now leg-weary Kings Pleasure.

Toolbox and Little Dinah were soon straightened out and with Truly Yours having to swing to the rail, it was a mere formality for Toolbox to bounce to the wire. Gilbert did not give up, however. He booted the J. W. Y. Martin hope with all his might and nipped Little Dinah. The others in the field were nowhere in particular until the disqualification.

Cheers Greeted Suspension.

Gilbert lost no time in making a claim of foul. In fact, he might have been blown up into the judges' stand by the terrific booes. Just whose money made the Labrot entry 65 cents on a dollar could not be learned. A din of cheers greeted the hanging of the official sign.

The race was not a true test. The field was bunched getting away

Twenty Entries Set for 'American Grand National' at Llangollen Tomorrow

Old Bachelor Will Carry 158

Upperville Course Is Mecca for Lovers of 'Chase.

LLANGOLLEN FARM, Va., Oct. 10 (Spl.).—Groomed as meticulously as a movie star on Easter parade, the John Hay Whitney course—America's Aintree—is in complete readiness for the Llangollen National Steeplechase—America's Grand National—to be run tomorrow.

More hoofs will thud over the hazardous course at this meet than ever have thudded in a similar affair. Even more necks will be risked than were risked in the Grand National at Belmont.

Old Bachelor, an English importation who will carry the colors of Mrs. John Hay Whitney in the Llangollen, has drawn the top impost of an even 20 nominees for the grueling 3-mile course, being assigned 158 pounds.

The alien failed in his debut on these shores when he fell at the initial fence during the running of the Corcoran Memorial at Huntingdon Valley, Pa., last Saturday. He probably was burdened with the high poundage of the field because of a creditable record abroad. He was established one of the choices in the earlier books for the English Grand National in 1932, Poppyman and Hopeful Jim, two of his stablemates, also are nominated for the feature.

Daniel Soot Reported Out.

Mrs. Thomas W. Durante's Watsonia will carry only 148 pounds. The Durante entry may be established a favorite by virtue of a victory in the Rolling Rock Hunt Club, featured in a meet at Ligonier, Pa., Tuesday. The Watsonia victory was won the day after the weights for the Llangollen were posted, and therefore did not affect the tonnage allotted.

Mrs. Frank M. Gould's Daniel Soot, winner of the race last year, while entered and assigned 149 pounds, has been reliably reported out of the race. No reason has been ascribed for the withdrawal of the 1933 winner.

The barriers of the Whitney course are comparable to no other obstacles in America. They are 60 feet in length, 4 feet in width, 4 feet 9 inches high and stand as solidly as Mussolini in a reviewing stand. The grass has been cut close to the ground for about 20 feet between the jumps, making it easier for both horses and riders to keep within the flags.

Other races in the meet, which is held in conjunction with the Piedmont Fox Hounds, America's oldest recognized hunt, include the Piedmont Gold Cup (3 miles over timber), with 16 entries; the Ayshire Cup (3¼ miles over timber), with 10 entries, and the Blue Riband Chase (2½ miles over brush), with 7 entries.

Entries and Weights.

The first race is called at 2 p. m. Gate receipts will be turned over to the Loudoun County Hospital.

The entries and weights for the Llangollen:

Axon (148), Bazatelle (143), Border Warrant (138), Celeritas (135), Daniel Soot (149), Gaston (143), George Jessell (138), Hopeful Jim (135), Huffy (143), Liverton Lodge (142), Lord Johnson (143), Luckite (148), Melita (139), Old Bachelor (158), Poppyman (136), Redbridge (141), Rideway (155), Rockland (154), Tequila (130), Watsonia (148).

Columbians Need Players.

Entries for the Columbian League will be held open until October 21 in order to fill openings in the 100-pound class, which is the only one with vacancies. Managers of 100-pound teams wishing to enter, please write to Joe Cohen, 600 Tennessee avenue northeast.

*Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—STAR CHASE, $8.40, $6.10, $4.00; JINNEE, $66.30, $24.80; GUNWALE, $5.20.

STAR CHASE, kept in close attendance of the leaders after the break, moved up strongly approaching the home stretch, took command when coming to the outside and was under pressure at the end. JINNEE went prominently under urging and held on well in the closing drive. GUNWALE made frequent efforts while following close to the leaders, but was not good enough in the final test. FOXTEE finished with good speed on the outside. BRILLFALON broke well, but dropped back immediately. He swung wide in the late stages and came willingly. SEA FINN went evenly. CHINESE INDIAN had no mishaps. IWINTOO stopped. ALWINTOUR bolted out midway of the turn and lost all chance. HIGH FLAG refused to break and was left.

SECOND RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800. For maiden 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:12. Off at 2:13½. Winner, E. R. Bradley's b. g. (3), by Legate—Princess Margaret II. Trained by W. Hurley. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 2-5, 1:13 4-5, 1:39 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BIOGRAPHY, $6.70, $3.70, $2.80; CARABINIER II, $4.40, $3.00; LEGENDARY, $3.70.

BIOGRAPHY outran his field to the first turn, met repeated efforts from CARABINIER II in the last half mile, then held on stoutly under strong handling. CARABINIER II, in close pursuit of the winner throughout, offered stiff contention in the last half mile and fought it out resolutely until the finish. LEGENDARY worked his way up on the outside, closed gamely, but could not reach the leaders. MATAR went along forwardly for six furlongs, then tired as he swerved out during the stretch drive. RUSTIC REST stopped and was knocked back when the break came, went wide for racing room after reaching the back stretch, but was unable to enter a contending position. STOOL PIGEON stopped after six furlongs.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 2:42. Off at 2:46. Winner, J. A. Jones' ch. g. (4), by My Play—Book-Love. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:11 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ST. STEPHENS, $4.10, $3.10, $2.60; SIR TEN $13.70, $7.60; BELIEVER, $3.40.

ST. STEPHENS, rated under steadying restraint while following BAND WAGON closely, assumed command without effort at the stretch turn, drew clear and had speed in reserve at the end. SIR TEN improved his position on the outside, came with good courage, but could not menace the winner. BELIEVER, kept on the outside from the beginning, closed gamely when reaching the home stretch. BAND WAGON had good speed while setting the pace, but tired fast after being displaced. CHATTERDOO could not better his position. LONGFORD saved ground, but failed to rally when put to a drive. The others were never factors.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $5,000; added. The Maryland Futurity. For 2-year-olds foaled in Maryland. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:17. Off at 3:21. Winner J. W. V. Martin's b. c. (2), by Canter—Love Girl. Trained by L. Feustel. Value to winner, $4,860; second, $1,000; third, $500; fourth, $250. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48, 1:12 4-5.

†S. W. Labrot entry. ‡J. F. Adams entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRULY YOURS, $9.60, $8.80, $6.50; MEMORABLE, $49.20, $13.00; ADAMS EVE, $10.10.

TOOLBOX, in trouble directly after the start, was taken up to come to the outside when settling in stride, went to his field rapidly to enter a forward position, crowded the leaders just inside of the final furlong pole, then came out approaching the finish. The S. W. Labrot entry of three horses was disqualified for interference caused to TRULY YOURS. TRULY YOURS followed close to the leaders from the beginning, was racing strongly when he became badly bottled up and, unable to stride freely at midstretch, when LITTLE DINAH and TOOLBOX formed a wedge. He overcame interference and held on well. LITTLE DINAH forced a steady pace from the beginning, interfered with TRULY YOURS, then stumbled, but held on well. KINGS PLEASURE set a fast early pace, saved ground and also suffered from interference by his stablemates. He could not recover after his mishap. MEMORABLE had brief early speed. ADAMS EVE was bumped midway of the turn. LAST TIME was rushed off his feet early and tired. MANTADOS was outrun. The race was not a truly run event.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,200. The Westminister Handicap. For all ages. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:55. Off at 3:56. Winner, Mrs. D. Howe's ch. c. (3), by Lucullite—Arissa. Trained by P. M. Walker. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23, 0:47, 1:11 3-5, 1:37 1-5, 1:42.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ONLY ONE, $3.80, $3.00, out; SILENT SHOT, $4.20, out; SUN ARCHER, out.

ONLY ONE went into an easy lead going to the first turn, was steadied while saving ground, then responded gamely when hard urged during the closing furlong. SILENT SHOT was kept under urging from the beginning and fought it out strongly. SUN ARCHER was unable to threaten after the opening six furlongs. CHATMOSS stumbled badly at the first turn, while on the inside, and almost unseated his rider. He was done after reaching mid-back stretch.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:27. Off at 4:28. Winner W. M. Hunt's b. g. (6), by Kal-Sang—Katrina. Trained by M. Kuykendall. Value to winner, $435; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $15. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:14 2-5, 1:41, 1:47 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ARAB, $21.80, $9.00, $4.50; PLUFFY LEE, $4.60, $3.00; GENERAL LEJEUNE, $2.70.

ARAB swung wide into the home stretch when moving to the leaders, gained command in the closing furlong, then came out under strong pressure. PLUFFY LEE weakened after racing abreast of GENERAL LEJEUNE. Latter faltered fast after holding a slight lead. INFERNO LAD could not better his position in the last five-sixteenths. McDONALD H. was outrun.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:57. Off at 4:58. Winner, A. C. Compton's ch. g. (3), by Pot Au Feu—Peace and Plenty. Trained by H. G. Bedwell. Value to winner, $435; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $15. Time, 1:47.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—POTION, $7.80, $4.90, $3.20; RESURRECTION, $5.00, $3.30; DR. SYNTAX, $3.80.

POTION moved up fast when reaching the final turn, shook off the leaders and was under urging until the end. RESURRECTION went prominently, made a strong bid at the final turn and then held on well. DR. SYNTAX could not gain on the leaders during the last half mile. CHEROKEE SAL was never able to better her position. OLAMAY was knocked off stride when HEREWARD crowded over to the inside with the break. She closed a big gap after recovering. HEREWARD outbroke his field, but stopped after having nice speed for six furlongs.

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Dear Al: Laurel Race Track.

I'm certainly glad Bucky Harris is managing the Red Sox and I hope he continues to manage the Red Sox for a long time to come. I don't want Bucky applying for my job. Not after what I overheard in the clubhouse yesterday afternoon. The former Washington pilot was standing with a group of friends. One said: "Let's steal a little money here by betting the Labrot entry to show. Come on, fellows, let's make it $10 apiece." Several reached for their bankrolls and began peeling. The horses were parading to the post as Bucky looked them over. "Something tells me there is going to be a disqualification. Count me out of that pool," said Bucky. A few minutes later they were taking down the numbers of the Labrot entry, and not many minutes afterward Harris was beseiged by friends who asked, "What do you like in the next?" The ruling moved our Yours Truly into the win hole and gave us two winners for the day.

BILL.

First race—I'm going to try to put one over on the boys today. I mean Outbound. I have watched this one closely and believe today is the day of days. Red Wagon is traveling in rather poor company and will have some say in the purse distribution. Sir James drew a lot of play last out and has little left. That race might have tightened him.

Second race—The possibility of rain forces me to go to Idle Flirt and Cantoria. Both like the off going and are in top shape. Toano has been breaking alertly and may find this field suitable for a good showing.

Third race—Cherry Brandy was a consistent jumper in New York during the late summer. Won two purses and finished second twice. Shipped here in fine form and will have to be caught. Blackcock threw down his backers last out but must be respected. Teakwood won impressively in two tries. Moves up today.

Fourth race—Indian News barely missed graduate at the Graw. Raced over his head last out and made a creditable showing. Unless there is a real wake-up, this one should bring us win money. Khelaboo has knocked at the door several times this year. A very busy horse with education enough to be dangerous. Sundrops might surprise.

Fifth race—Galon Boy finished a neck behind Sun Erin before trying unsuccessfully to run with Go Quick and the others. Drops back a little today and I'm struggling along

Florida and Tulane Prime for Southeast Conference Feature Game Saturday

First Battle Of Rivals in 12 Years

Louisiana State Opens Against Auburn; 5 Other Games.

By Kenneth Gregory.

ATLANTA, Oct. 10 (AP).—The University of Florida, stronger and more versatile than in several seasons, makes its first Southeastern Conference stand Saturday when Tulane's powerful Green Wave rolls into Gainesville for a new renewal of relations after a lapse of 12 years.

This game offers one of the feature attractions of a program that includes three other intraconference battles and a trio of interloop clashes with Southern Conference teams.

Florida football fans will be given a chance to observe the progress made by the 'Gator alumni coaching staff, composed of former star players, in the tangle with Tulane. It's a tough assignment for the Gainesville squad, but the players are being primed for the Greenies and conceding nothing in advance.

On the other hand, Tulane's experienced squad of hefty line men and triple threat backs has been given a top rank in the championship forecasts and will go into the fray favored. The Wave has been impressive in whipping Chattanooga and Auburn, while Florida gave a god exhibition in defeating Virginia Tech after a slow start against Rollins.

Opens Against Auburn.

Louisiana State opens its conference slate against Auburn at Baton Rouse Saturday night and looks like the victor, judging from the Tigers' great comebacks, to tie Rice and Southern Methodist in earlier games. The Plainsmen put up a great battle against Tulane last week before losing by two touchdowns, and may be difficult to handle.

After romping over outside foes in their first two games, Mississippi and Tennessee square off at Knoxville for a Southeastern conflict, and Alabama, the defending title holder, entertains Mississippi State at Tuscaloosa.

Of the three interconference tussles, the clash at Durham between Georgia Tech and Duke is drawing the most attention. The Blue Devils are preparing for the game mindful of the 6-to-0 licking administered by the Yello wJackets in the last game of the 1933 season after the Duke eleven had bowled over nine consecutive opponents.

A rivalry begun in 1895 will continue at Athens, with Georgia entertaining the University of North Carolina. It is the thirteenth game between the two institutions and is the "rubber" battle as each has emerged victorious six times.

Kentucky to Play.

The University of Kentucky continues its outside competition in its fourth straight nonconference contest, meeting Clemson College, of the Southern, in an interleague game at Lexington.

Vanderbilt, after consecutive conference victories over Mississippi State and Georgia tech, takes a rest this week-end as the Commodores go to Cincinnati to engage Cincinnati in a night game Saturday.

In one of its rare home games, Sewanee entertains Tennessee Wesleyan on its gridiron atop the Cumberland Mountains. The Tigers lost their opening conference match to Alabama by a one-sided score.

Furman and Wake Forest open the week's card in a game at Florence, S. C., tomorrow, followed by a scattering of games Friday afternoon and night, including several important S. I. A. A., encounters.

Navy Soccerists Win Over W. Maryland, 4-0

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 10 (Spl.).—The Annapolis Midshipmen opened their soccer season in auspicious fashion today, winning from the strong team of Western Maryland College of Westminster by a score of 4 to 0.

The up-State booters had a number of chances to count, but their efforts were thwarted by the clever work of Reich, Navy goalie.

Three of Navy's four tallies were crowded into the second period, after the teams had waged a nip-and-tuck battle in the opening session. Miller booted the first goal only in the second period. For several minutes the teams continued the fight on even terms. Dick Teel, substituting for Reed, started for both of them. Eisenback scored the fourth goal in the third period. Throughout the fourth stanza, both teams displayed fine defensive work near the goal posts.

Navy.	Position.	West. Md.
Reich	Goal	Gumpa
Hall	R.F.	Wyand
Merritt	L.F.	Boyer
Ross	R.H.	Strausbaugh
Ward	C.H.	Pamble
Gimber	L.H.	Church
Reed	O.R.	Pridinger
Eisenbach	I.R.	Rockord
Daugherty	O.F.	Randle
Miller	I.L.	Martin
Sanderson	O.L.	Belt

Navy	0	3	1	0	—4

Goals—Teel (2), Miller, Eisenbach. Substitutes—(Navy) Sadler for Hall, O'Handley for Ross; Shamer for Ward, Moore for Shamer, Teel for Reed, Kramer for Eisenbach, Zellers for Miller; (Western Maryland) Holmes for Church, Moore for Pridinger, Connell for Moore, Wright for Belt. Referee—A. S. Gordon (Baltimore). Time of periods—22 minutes each.

Illini Show Speed, Smoothness in Drill

Champaign, Ill., Oct. 10 (AP).—The Illinois varsity showed more speed and smoothness today than at any other time during the week, in a hard scrimmage.

The regulars had almost no trouble stopping the reserves who used Ohio State formations. Wilbur Henry, sophomore back, was used at quarter back and probably will see service Saturday in any one of the back field jobs.

Through Edgren's Eyes

Scientists say a rattlesnake strikes so swiftly that the fastest camera can't "stop" its speed and catch an unblurred picture.
What a boxer this man could be! He has more speed than a rattlesnake!
R. Edgren 10-11
John Licciardi, age 21, while working in a CCC camp near Sacramento, Calif., was attacked by a rattlesnake. As the snake struck he seized it by the neck and killed it by striking it's head against the rock wall. Sept. 12, 1934.

Pilgrims Snub Vanderbilt At Feast

Rainbow's Skipper Retires Early as Sopwith Is Praised.

LONDON, Oct. 10 (AP).—Practically everybody except Harold S. Vanderbilt, skipper of the victorious Rainbow in the recent America's Cup yacht races, was present tonight at the Pilgrim's banquet in honor of T. O. M. Sopwith, who sailed the British challenger, Endeavour, Mrs. Sopwith and the yacht's amateur crew.

While dozens of bemedaled admirals, generals and other officers toasted the defeated crew of Endeavour and spoke fondly of cordial relations between England and America, Vanderbilt presumably retired early at his hotel nearby. The victorious skipper's name was neither mentioned directly nor by inference.

Sopwith's remarks were much in the same tenor as those he made before leaving the United States, regretting that he and the New York Yacht Club were unable to agree upon interpretations of the rules.

"I still have hopes," he said, "that I may in the near future start all over again on a proper basis. No one in the New York Yacht Club is any more satisfied with the result of this series than I am."

Mrs. Sopwith had the distinction of being the first woman to attend a Pilgrim dinner. Lord Derby explained that the committee, looking for a precedent for her invitation, had discovered women were among those aboard the Mayflower.

Emory and Henry Star Hurt, Out for Season

Emory, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—Mark Kegley, Emory and Henry's star half back in 1933, who has not played so far this year because of an early season leg injury, was definitely lost for the season today when he was injured again in a scrimmage. Coach W. S. Jackson said Kegley would undergo an operation in the hope of being able to play next season.

Game Is Wanted.

The Arlington 135-pound grid team has a field and desires a game for Sunday. The team will practice under Coach William Pound Thursday night at the Arlington firehouse. For games, call Dick Read at Met. 6339, daytime.

"Love" Feast

Princeton, Harvard Grid Teams to Dine Together.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 10 (AP). The football teams of Harvard and Princeton will do more than just play each other on the day when they resume relations on the gridiron at the Harvard stadium November 3. They will sit down to dinner together and talk it over afterward!

So came the announcement from Harvard officials today. Prof. Julian L. Coolidge, master of the Lowell House, is behind the dinner. He first suggested that the rivals dine together on the eve of the game, but William J. Bingham, director of athletics, proposed that the dinner follow the contest. Subsequently the idea was accepted by Princeton.

Mrs. Opal Hill Ousted by New Golf Star

23-Year-Old Jean Bauer Enters Quarter Finals at Huntingdon.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10 (AP). Out of Providence, R. I., the city which gave Glenna Collett to golf, a new star of the links game came today—23-year-old Jean Bauer—to assume a leading role in the current battle for the classic Berthellyn Trophy.

In a smashing performance over the Huntington Valley Country Club course, she upset all advance calculations by crushing Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, the trans-Mississippi champion and a semi-finalist in last week's National titular play, 5 and 4, to enter the quarter-finals of the competition.

Her triumph was followed quickly by two more upsets before the quarter-final bracket was filled. These were the 1-up conquest of Deborah Verry, of Worcester, Mass., over a former National champion, Mrs. Clarence H. Vanderbeck, and another 1-up win, in 19 holes, by Edith Quier, of Reading, Pa., over Mrs. Leon Solomon, of Memphis, Tenn.

The other five winners of second-round matches had little difficulty. The defending trophy-holder, Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, former National champion, advanced by default over Mrs. Dan Chandler, of Dallas, Tex.—the first default win for Mrs. Hurd in her 39 years of tournament golf.

Walker's Illness Halts Local Bout

May Fight Natie Brown at Auditorium Oct. 24.

Pleading a heavy cold, Mickey Walker, the Jersey Toy Bulldog, yesterday was granted a postponement for his projected bout against Natie Brown, which was to have occupied the spotlight at the Auditorium Monday night.

Indications last night were that the Mick and Brown would be matched for the Auditorium on October 24. That date was sanctioned by the Boxing Commission yesterday.

Mickey Serrian, seventh-ranking welterweight, and Frankie Hughes, who were to have occupied the semifinal spot on the Walker-Brown card, will appear as the main attraction on Monday over the ten-round route.

Cary Wright and Roy Manley will appear in the eight-round feature. An eight-round semifinal and a six-round preliminary are in the making.

Maryland A. C. Ready For Tilt With Palace

Bulwarked by Al Wertzell, Southern Conference guard from Washington and Lee, and Earl Darby, St. Mary's Celtics full back, the Maryland A. C. is looking forward to its game Sunday afternoon with Palace A. C. The contest, a league battle, will be played at 3 o'clock in the Duffy Memorial Stadium at Seat Pleasant.

Virginia Rice Marries.

Boston, Oct. 10 (U.P.)—Miss Virginia Bingham Rice, one of the country's ranking women tennis players, was married to Melvin Maynard Johnson, jr., of Brookline, at Emmanuel Church, late today.

Jimmy Foxx Remains In Winnipeg Hospital

Winnipeg, Oct. 10 (AP).—Jimmy Foxx, first baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics, was still in a hospital here today recovering from injuries suffered Monday when he was hit on the head with a pitched ball in an exhibition baseball game. He probably will not be released for two or three days.

Rangers Trade Pusse.

New York, Oct. 10 (U.P.)—The New York Rangers Hockey Club announced today that Gene Pusse, defense man, had been traded to the Boston Bruins for Percq Jackson, erstwhile goalie of the Bruin's Cubs team. No cash was involved.

Mixed Scotch Foursome For Today

60 to Compete in Event on Washington Club Golf Course.

A GOOD old fashioned mixed Scotch foursome tournament will be staged this afternoon by the Middle Atlantic Golf Association at Washington Golf and Country Club's course, with a field of 60 golfers competing.

The tournament is being held in conjunction with the Middle Atlantic Women's championship, and will start at 12:40 o'clock.

Many prominent local men and women golfers will team up to battle for a number of prizes to be offered by the association. There is no entrance fee, and post entries will be accepted.

George P. James, Middle Atlantic president, will have Miss Susan Hacker, of Chevy Chase, as his partner, while Dick Hoffman, of the host club, will team with Mrs. Jack Scott, of Congressional. They will tee off first.

Alternate shots will be the order for each team. An outstanding twosome will be that of Mrs. David Clark and her husband, Lieut. Comdr. Clark.

tow some will be that of Mrs. David

'Just Trying to Protect Myself,' Says Medwick of Spiking Fray

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 10 (U.P.)—"Ducky-Wucky" Medwick's momentous kick, which echoed around the baseball world and precipitated a near riot in the closing game of the World Series at Detroit, was merely a protective gesture which never landed on the person of Marvin Owen, Detroit third baseman.

That's what Outfielded Medwick said today when he returned here with the world champion St. Louis Cardinals. Medwick's version of what happened is this:

"Here is exactly what happened: Martin was on second base, and I hit a long drive to center field. Coach Gonzales (off third base) motioned for me to keep running as I rounded second, and then signaled for a slide.

"As I came into third ahead of the throw, I slid. The throw was wide, and I had it beat by several feet. Owen, however, came over and trampled on me—his right foot coming down on my left leg as I came into the bag.

"As there had been a lot of spiking from the start of the series, I figured I was to be the victim this time, and my right foot went up for protection. That is what the fans saw—they overlooked the fact that Owen came into me first. I didn't touch Owen, though I did kick at him in an effort to keep him away from me."

When finally called with Owen to the box of Commissioner K. M. Landis, Medwick said, "the judge asked Owen if he had done anything to me to warrant my kicking him. Owen said, 'No.' The judge then asked me if I had kicked Owen and I said, 'No, I was just trying to protect myself.' And Landis simply said: 'Mr. Medwick, you're out of the game—to prevent bodily harm from the fans.'"

Notre Dame Drills For Block and Tackle

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 10 (AP).—Determined Notre Dame shall block and tackle well against Purdue Saturday, Coach Elmer Layden devoted today's practice to these fundamentals.

The Irish have shown improvement every day this week, enough to cause even Layden to admit it. John Lauder again was in Rocco Schiralli's former place at right guard.

Garden Gets Jackson For 3 Eastern Bouts

New York, October 10 (U.P.)—Young Peter Jackson, Los Angeles junior welterweight, who is slated to fight Tony Falco, of Philadelphia, at Madison Square Garden on November 2, agreed today by telephone to fight three additional bouts under the Garden promotion. After that the Garden has an option for three more fights. Jackson is expected to arrive from Los Angeles on October 20.

Big Brother Wins Caddies' Crown

Bucky Noonen Is Victor at Beaver Dam.

A brotherly golf feud, inaugurated a few years ago, flared anew yesterday, and ended triumphantly for Bucky Noonen, 19, who defeated his 17-year-old brother, Tommy, in the finals of the Beaver Dam caddy championship.

Winning 2 and 1 after leading 1 up at the turn, Bucky shot an 81, while his brother carded an 85.

Second-flight honors went to Persian Merkle, conqueror of Phil Kearns, 2 and 1.

Claude Tyler, who won the medal with a 39, 38—77, was eliminated earlier in the championship.

Murdoch Is Eligible For Syracuse Contest

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 10 (AP).—Part of Gil Dobie's problem was solved today when Frank Murdoch, statr right tackle of two seasons ago, was declared eligible to play with Cornell against Syracuse, but he still encountered difficulties with his back field line-up. Capt. Walter Switzer has been troubled with stiffness in his right leg and he is the only regular punter when Johnny Scott isn't on the field.

Booters Boot Baltimore.

The German Sport Club soccer team of Washington will meet the Stonewall Democratic booters at Baltimore Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The annual dance of the local club will be held Saturday night at Indian Spring Country Club.

Death to Caribou.

Moraga, Calif. (AP).—In explaining his nickname to Coach Madigan, of St. Mary's, Francis Brickner, preseason reserve end on the varsity, "reckoned" he was called "Caribou" because he bagged 17 of the "critters" up in Alaska. His home address is Spokane, Wash.

George, Szabo To Wrestle Tonight

To Be Principals in Main Bout at Auditorium; 6 Other Events.

TWO wrestling gems of the purest ray serene will gleam in the feature match of the regular Thursday night meeting of the Snicker and Snarl Society at the Auditorium tonight.

Gem No. 1 is no less than Ed (Don) George, coclaimant of the world's heavyweight championship. Gem No. 2 is Sandor Szabo, the hapless Hungarian, who keeps a finger in the plum pudding by laying claim to the heavyweight wrestling championship of his native country.

George pinned the acrobatic Hungarian in a previous engagement, but in accordance with a time-honored custom, doubt was allowed to remain regarding the validity of the fall. Szabo claimed he was the victim of a 1-3 count, and that his shoulders weren't touching the mat anyway. Both boys were working entainingly until the finish.

Graber, Fields in Semifinal.

A buoyant semifinal will bring together Henry Graber and Harry Fields. A product of the same Iowa cauliflower belt that produced Earl Craddock and Joe Stecher, Graber has gone undefeated both in the amateur and professional ranks.

Frank Brunowicz and Scotty McDougall, a brace of 40-minute eggs, will brawl in a 30-minute time limit preliminary which may develop into a scuffle of bar room proportions.

Show openers will pit Steve Znoski against Mayes McLain and Joe Tonti against Chris Davos. The latter is a newcomer and a nephew of George Zaharias, if that's to write about.

Army Regulars Shine.

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 10 (AP).—Army's regulars made a good showing today in a defensive scrimmage against a plebe squad equipped with Drake plays. The yearlings were able to break through occasionally, but the regulars held the upper hand. Casey Vincent, big center, was especially effective in breaking up passes.

Golf Group Elects Mason.

Boston, Oct. 10 (U.P.).—Charles E. Mason, of the Country Club, Brookline, was named president of the Massachusetts Golf Association today to succeed Charles H. Cross, of Unicorn. Mason was secretary of the association.

"GUESS?—NO, TEST!" said Seagram's

—and in 60 days CROWN WHISKEY became America's Favorite!

Seagram's never says "Take it on faith!" Seagram's says "Test it yourself!" Then, "Judge by its taste!"

Seagram's invites you to read the Crown Whiskey Test Booklet—to test Crown Whiskey the way professional buyers test costly whiskies. Then decide for yourself if it doesn't taste far smoother, far warmer, far mellower than any other moderately priced whiskey you ever tried.

It's a fair invitation, isn't it? It's the reason why Crown Whiskey now outsells all others of moderate price everywhere throughout America today. Seagram continues to say "Test it yourself. We believe you'll like it—but you are the only judge!"

Close Scrutiny Discloses That "Bring on the Girls" Is Not a Musical Opus

Cogent Satire Not Dependent On Chromatics

Pokes Fun at New Deal Without Aid of Tunes; Theater Chat.

By Nelson B. Bell.

The most surprising piece of news at the moment, it seems to me, is the announcement by the Sam H. Harris office that "Bring on the Girls," by George S. Kaufman and Morrie Syskind, scheduled for the National Theater following Fred Stone in "Jayhawker," is not a musical piece.

In these columns, as well as other dedicated to the faithful reporting of affairs of the theater, this impending event was heralded as something handsomely tricked out with tunes, dances and what have you in the way of a sophisticated entertainment.

And now comes the blow-off, in a manner of speaking.

Mr. John ePter Toohey, an erstwhile contributor to the Saturday Evening Post, an exceptionally cogent observer of the passing scene in the land of "Let's Pretend," a showman, whose talents have not been entirely lost by Mr. Harris' silent scrutinies, informs me, during the course of an enjoyable personal conversation that this is one of the most interesting contacts that he has encountered.

"Bring On the Girls," it appears, is a story that will appeal to the average theatergoer. It has color, movement and action, and also a lot of feminine puchritude that has no bearing on the story. That is what makes it so intriguing. It has never been done before in just this fashion.

This Mr. John Peter Toohey, who years ago was a feature writer on this paper and since has been a chronicler of parts, is responsible for the story, "Bringing On the Girls."

There is nothing musical about this opus, but there is a great deal that is satirically and hysterically funny.

All of these attributes will be apparent to those who buy their tickets early.

Catholics Here In School Talk

Teachers Assemble for Annual Conference of National Association.

Representatives from all parts of the United States gathered yesterday for the annual meeting of the superintendents' section of the National Catholic Educational Association at the Catholic University.

Delegates to the convention, which opened yesterday, were greeted by the Most Rev. James H. Ryan, bishop of modra and rector of the Catholic University.

The Rev. James A. Byrnes, superintendent of schools of St. Paul, Minn., will address the delegates today on "What the Catholic Schools Can Do for the Hard-of-Hearing Child," and the Rev. E. Lawrence O'Connell, of Pittsburgh, Pa., will speak on "Vocational Guidance in the Catholic School," at the morning session. During the afternoon a talk will be made by the Rev. Dr. George Johnson, of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, who will discuss the work of the department of education of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Arrangements for the two-day convention were made by the Rev. Richard Quinlan, superintendent of archdiocesan schools of Boston, Mass.

Auxiliary Headed By Mrs. Kirchner

Silver Spring Legion Body Plans Installation.

Mrs. Lester F. Kirchner was elected president of Cissel-Saxon unit, American Legion Auxiliary, of Silver Spring, Md., at the annual meeting in Jesup Blair Community House.

Other officers are: Vice president, Mrs. Harold S. Giusta; secretary, Mrs. F. Paul Clark; treasurer, Mrs. Gertrude M. Ludwig; chaplain, Mrs. Benjamin Hardesty; historian, Mrs. H. H. Howlett, and sergeant at arms, Mrs. George A. Hood.

Plans for a joint installation with the local legion post were discussed. Mrs. Lauman T. Faulconer was appointed chairman of the committee in charge of the affair, at which State officers will be guests of honor.

The group voted to assist the legion post in the development of the historical room in Jesup Blair Community House.

Renomination Won By Senator Hebert

Providence, R. I., Oct. 10 (AP).—United States Senator Felix Hebert was renominated and Gen. Luke H. Gallan, veteran of the Spanish-American and World Wars, was nominated for Governor at the Republican State convention today.

Nominated with them, without opposition, were former United States District Attorney Henry M. Boss, jr., for lieutenant governor; George R. Beane, assistant U. S. attorney, for attorney general; Thomas J. Paolino for secretary of State, and Joseph Pratt, former Woonsocket city clerk, for general treasurer.

John C. Cosseboom, of Woonsocket, was nominated for Congress in the first district, and former General Treasurer George C. Clark was named in the second.

Stars on Next Week's Screens

Harold Lloyd, pictured at left, above, returns to the screen after a long absence, in a picture unlike any he has heretofore done, at Loew's Fox next week, where the feature will be "The Cat's Paw," adapted from the story by Clarence Budington Kelland. At right is that fabulous youngster, little Miss Shirley Temple, who shares honors with Carole Lombard and Gary Cooper in "Now and Forever," the film feature at the Earle, also beginning on Friday.

Straight From the Studios

More of James Hilton's Novels Find Way to Screen; Rudy Vallee Goes West for More Film Work; Chatter of the Gelatin City.

By Philip K. Scheuer
(Pinch Hitting for Edwin A. Schallert).

Hollywood, Oct. 10.—Popularity of James Hilton novels with the studios again is shown by M-G-M's purchase of "Dawn of Reckoning." No further plans have been revealed, but the studio reports the yarn an unusual psychological drama.

NOVARRO.

The same studio previously acquired rights to "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," also by Hilton. But still unpurchased is his "Ill Wind," which this column hailed months ago as just the thing the studios have been looking for. "Ill Wind" is a revival of the one-locale "Grand Hotel" angle, with a list of characters scattered to the four corners of the earth, all reacting, by a series of coincidences, one upon another.

Athletic Stories Inspired.

It must be open season for athletics. Warner Brothers have purchased "Sport Page," by Clarence Bricker, New York sports writer. The story gives the lowdown on professional shenanigans, as seen through the eyes of a reporter.

Connolly Signed For Dances.

The same company has presented Bobby Connolly with a long term contract. Connolly, with a distinguished record as a director of ensembles for Ziegfeld and others, has devised the dances for two of Warners' forthcoming musicals, "Flirtation Walk," the Hawaiian-West Point romance, and Jerome Kern's operetta of old New York, "Sweet Adeline."

Rudy Arriving To Star for Warners.

Rudy Vallee, last seen as one of the mainstays of George White's "Scandals," returns to town Sunday to perform before the microphones for Warners. Vallee is bringing his Connecticut Yankees with him, and they will go into "Sweet Music" immediately.

Berkeley Shows Up Again.

Reginald Berkeley, British author and playwright, usually may be depended upon to pop up when Winfield Sheehan and Fox are about to attempt one of those super-super affairs. Berkeley did the scripts on "Cavalcade" and "The World Moves On." He has just returned from three months in England, and Sheehan, also a returning traveler, is expected within a few days. Just what the pair may be concocting is unknown at this stage of the game.

Film Pageant In Review.

"The Night Is Young" got under way this week with Donald Cook and Charles Judels included in the support surrounding Evelyn Laye and Ramon Novarro.

Fay Wray and Victor Jory have the leads in "White Lies."

Joe May will direct "Love Without Words," a musical based on the life of Tschaikowsky.

Rose Frankan, author of "Another Language," has been signed by Fox to think up something nice for Shirley Temple.

Guinn (Big Boy) Williams, Donald Meek and Harold Goodwin have been added to the cast of "Romance in Manhattan," starring Francis Lederer with Ginger Rogers.

Church Faces Greatest Test, United Brethren Session Told

Officers Are Elected at 145th Gathering at Hagerstown.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 10 (Spl.). The greatest need of the church and world today is a genuine spiritual revival, because the church is challenged with the greatest program it has ever faced in all its history, declared the report of the commission on evangelism submitted today to the 145th session of the Pennsylvania Conference of the United Brethren. The Rev. G. L. Rider, Hagerstown, chairman, submitted the report.

Officers elected at today's session included the Rev. G. A. Heiss, of Wormleysburg, Pa., treasurer; the Rev. John W. Fisher, of Walkersville, Md., secretary Christian stewardship; the Rev. P. E. Holdcraft, of Hagerstown, secretary, historical society; the Rev. F. B. Plummer, of Hagerstown, and the Rev. J. A. Shetttel, pension board; the Rev. P. R. Koontz, of Baltimore; the Rev. C. M. Ankerbrand, of Waynesboro, Pa., missionary branch and extension board; the Rev. G. C. Daugherty, of Hanover, Pa.; the Rev. J. H. Lehman, of Lemoyne, Pa., and the Rev. C. Guy Stanbach, of Baltimore, board of education; the Rev. J. H. Yess, of York, Pa.; the Rev. G. I. Rider, of Hagerstown; Albert Watson and O. W. Reachard, of Dallastown, Pa., Lebanon Valley College trustees; the Rev. A. C. Crone, of Jefferson, Md.; the Rev. D. J. March, of Scotland, Pa.; the Rev. P. E. Rhinehart, of Dillsburg; the Rev. R. J. Tyson, of Mount Alto, Pa., and the Rev. H. L. Fehl, of Rayville, Pa., historical secretary, and C. A. Chandler, of Carlisle, Pa., trustee bishop's parsonage.

The selection of next year's conference city will be made tomorrow morning, ordination of elders in the afternoon and assignment of ministers will be made at night.

Bishop A. B. Statton, Kansas City, of Southwestern diocese, delivered tonight's sermon, his subject being "Come Unto Me." A resolution was offered by the resolutions committee urging "the scrutinizing of investments of religious and charitable institutions so that none may be found deriving any income from sources which are enriched by sale of liquor" and a number of others relative to law enforcement were ratified at the morning session.

Marriage Wow

Boy, 16, and Girl, 14, Quit School to Wed.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 10 (AP).—Ann Georgia Pedigo, 14, and Jimmy Pease, 16, have quit reading, writing and arithmetic of the Northside Junior High School for a long lesson in matrimony, it was made known here today.

They were married in Washington severel days ago, with the father and mother of the bride as witnesses.

They met a year and a day before they were married. Jimmy proposed on the second date. They planned to be married last Christmas, but postponed it.

Ann says she thinks married life is "fine." Jimmy says he thinks so too. Ann says she's boss. Jimmy mildly protests. Ann says Jimmy has gotten stouter already "on my cooking." Jimmy doesn't deny it. The youngest bridegroom of Richmond hasn't a job yet, but he expects to have one Monday. When he goes to work they plan to take a honeymoon.

Paint is a mixture of solid particles (called the pigment) and a liquid (called the vehicle) which dries solid when spread out in thin layers, protecting and decorating the surface to which it clings.

New Week Is a Field Day for Picture Hits

Varied Programs Offered in Theaters for the Impending Week.

"Jayhawker," the new play by Sinclair and Lloyd Lewis—not related—to be presented in the National Theater next week, beginning Monday night, is the first drama of the Civil War that has not expressed itself in terms of romantic melodrama. In place of that conventional treatment, this play will offer a realistic version of certain aspects of the conflict between the States which will be comparable to the reflection of the Great War that was afforded by "What Price Glory."

Fred Stone, former musical comedy star, who makes his debut as a serious actor in this Henry Hammond, Inc., production, will appear in the title role, supported by his daughter, Carol, Walter C. Kelly, "The Virginia Judge," and a long cast of distinguished players. The usual matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons.

* * * *

Harold Lloyd will be seen in a new type of vehicle, for him, when "The Cat's Paw" is presented as chief film feature of the bill at Loew's Fox Theater next week, beginning Friday. In this subject, adapted from the story by Clarence Budington Kelland, the bespectacled comedian makes his debut as an interpreter of plays with dramatic continuity as opposed to episodic "gag" construction. The innovation is attended by the utmost success, take it from one who has seen the picture. In this comedy of the son of a Chinese missionary who revolutionizes American political practices, Lloyd strikes a new and hilarious note. He is supported by Una Merkel, Alan Dinehart, George Barbier, Nat Pendleton, J. Farrell MacDonald, Warren Hymer and a score of others. The stage bill will be headlined by Eleanor Powell, greatest of the feminine tap dancers.

* * * *

At the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater next week, beginning Friday, that baby prodigy, Shirley Temple, again will demonstrate with what aplomb she is able to dominate a picture by stealing the acting honors from Gary Cooper and Carole Lombard, in "Now and Forever," a screen subject in which the foremost of the juveniles once more asserts her supremacy over the tawdry business of crookdom. Gary Cooper is cast as her dad and Miss Lombard as her foster mother in a picture that also affords Sir Guy Standing a splendid opportunity. On the stage, Irene Beasley, the tall songstress from the Southland, will headline the bill. The usual house features will augment the program.

* * * *

The literary skill of Edith Wharton will be reflected on the screen of RKO-Keith's Theater next week, beginning Friday, when the chief feature of the bill will be "The Age of Innocence," in which John Boles and Irene Dunne are presented as costars. In this romantic tale of a mad infatuation the most mature performances of a pair of costars of wide popularity will be disclosed. Lionel Atwill, Laura Hope Crews and Helen Westley lead the supporting cast. The surrounding bill will include short-reel subjects of the first rank.

* * * *

"The Barretts of Wimpole Street," one of the most notable of the current season's releases, will be continued as a downtown, first-run attraction at Loew's Columbia Theater next week, beginning Friday, with Norma Shearer, Frederic March and Charles Laughton in the featured roles, supported by Maureen O'Sullivan, Ralph Forbes and a strong cast. Abbreviated camera subjects will augment the bill.

* * * *

The Metropolitan Theater, intent on extracting the last drop of blood from "Belle of the Nineties," latest of the vehicles for Mae West, will carry on for the platinum blonde until something better comes along—which seems a long way off. Roger Pryor, Johnny Mack Brown, John Miljan and a number of others complete a bill of some importance.

* * * *

At the Gayety next week, beginning with the customary performance Sunday afternoon, the attraction will be "Paris Nights," in which the principal roles will be played by Billy Arlington, Nora Murray and Milma Horber.

Cruise Planned By President

Will Return on His Yacht From Williamsburg Ceremonies.

President Roosevelt said yesterday that he will return to Washington by the water route after attending the dedication of a veterans' hospital at Roanoke and college ceremonies at Williamsburg, Va., at the end of next week.

He will leave Washington October 19 to make an address at the Roanoke exercises. Continuing by train to Williamsburg the next day, he will take part in the inauguration of John Stewart Bryan as president of William and Mary.

From there the President plans to motor to Yorktown, where he will go aboard the yacht Sequoia for a leisurely return to the Capital over the week-end. He suggested jokingly that correspondents accompanying him might take a vacation at Point Comfort or Virginia Beach, nearby.

Mr. Roosevelt said he will not go to Hyde Park October 29, as had been planned, because of a delay in the dedication of the Theodore Roosevelt Memorial at the Museum of Natural History in New York. He will go the week-end before the November elections, however, in order to cast his vote.

None of the White House staff will go with him, the President said, explaining that he would remain only a few days. After the Hyde Park trip, Mr. Roosevelt plans another short vacation—a two weeks' visit to his "other home" at Warm Springs, Ga., which he makes every Thanksgiving.

Carson Denies Proffer of Job

Won't Discuss Set-up of New Conservation Board at Richmond.

Riverton, Va., Oct. 10 (Spl.).—William E. Carson, chairman of the State Conservation and Development Commission, said last night he had made no decision whether he would accept a full-time chairmanship which would become effective with the reorganization of the commission in January. It had been previously reported that Carson's lime business and other interests would prevent him from taking the paid chairmanship, which would require him to live in Richmond.

"I have naturally made no such statement about whether I would accept a position the Governor has never offered me," Carson said.

Other names before the Governor are E. Griffith Dodson, of Norfolk, and Thomas L. Farrar, of Charlottesville.

The membership of the new commission to be organized in January will be reduced from seven to five.

Voters' Special Train Goes to N. Y. Friday

A special train to New York, arranged for by the Absentee Voters Headquarters, operated at the Willard Hotel by the Democratic National committee, will leave Washington Friday at 5 p. m., over the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Arriving in New York at 9:30 p. m., Friday, the passengers are to return by a special train leaving New York at midnight Sunday. The New York State campaign committee of the Young Democratic Clubs of America, District of Columbia Division, is distributing indentification cards.

Former Diva's Four Children Shine on Shenandoah Campus

Hildred Hanson Hostetter Appears With Them in Recital.

Dayton, Va., Oct. 10 (Spl.).—Mrs. Hildred Hanson Hostetter, famous operatic star of the past decade, has given to Shenandoah College one of its most interesting groups of students in the school's history.

Four of the Hostetter children are students in the conservatory of music and all have shown marked talent in the field. Mrs. Hostetter, with daughters, Ruth, 18, and Rose, 15, gave a song recital in the college chapel recently, singing as a trio. They also performed as soloists.

Robert, 19, the only boy in the family, has confined his music work to string instruments, playing the violin in the college orchestra. Muriel, 12, the youngest, has just begun her music work at Shenandoah.

Mrs. Hostetter was the first vocalist to sing over the radio in Los Angeles. She has been on the Shenandoah campus for three weeks and will leave next week for a concert tour which will take her to the Pacific Coast.

O. E. S. Chapter Visitation Held

Delegates From 15 Lodges at Program in Carroll County.

Westminster, Md., Oct. 10 (Spl.).—With representatives from 15 lodges present, grand visitation was held at Westminster (Carroll County) Chapter, Order Eastern Star, last night.

Among the officers present were Mrs. Minnie Hopple, Baltimore, worthy grand matron; D. Ross Vansant, of Annapolis, worthy grand patron; Mrs. Blanche Askew, of Baltimore, grand marshal; Mrs. Leonard Mason, of Towson, grand chaplain; Miss Nellie Blentlinger, of Middletown, grand electa, and Leonard Mason, of Towson, past grand patron.

A musical program was presented with Nevin Fisher, of Blue Ridge College, New Windsor, as pianist, and Henry Ackley, of Westminsiter, soloist.

Huckleberry Code 'Caught' by Brave And Price Rises

The Dalles, Oreg., Oct. 10 (AP).—An old Indian named Simon, who constitutes the Hood River district's one-man huckleberry industry, made his season call at the store of H. F. Linse here recently and bought some picket rope for his ponies. The price of the rope was up, and Linse explained the increase was due to the application of NRA rules to industry.

Today Simon returned with a picking of berries and stopped to sell three gallons to Linse. Simon rejected the customary $3 payment.

"Indian ketchum code," said Simon. "Code make huckleberry price dollar six bits gallon this year."

He got it.

Stocks Drive Higher Under Speculation

Gains of 1 to 3 Points Listed as Sales Jump to 987,030 Shares.

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—Stocks and staples were the leading performers on the financial market stage today as speculative sentiment took a decided turn for the better.

Gains of 1 to 3 or more points were recorded over a wide front in the share dealings.

Sterling continued its decline against the dollar, but the shaky gold currencies of yesterday improved.

Merchandising Shares Up.

Merchandising equities led the forward push in stocks, apparently meeting a renewed demand on reports of a further expansion in retail sales. A number of other issues came to life under the spur of individual circumstances.

It was the best day's business for the share brokers in some weeks. Transfers totaled 987,030 shares, the largest day's aggregate since August 22 last.

The Standard Statistics average for 90 selected issues advanced 1.9 points, to 72. This was the sharpest recovery for a single session since August 9.

Conjectures on Upturn.

Just how much the upturn in the stock division was due to the lessening of the European tension caused by the assassinations at Marseilles, and how much to some improvement in the domestic economic picture was a matter of conjecture among market observers.

Word from Washington that the President feels commodity price levels are still too low for any move toward stabilization, it was though in some quarters, may have furnished some of the fuel for the relighting of trading fires.

Much interest was expressed in the administrative conclusion that a further advance in prices, generally, is to be desired so that the National assets can be kept well above liabilities. The Chief Executive, however, pointed out that he had never held out 1926 price levels as the ideal and that no runaway prices or values would be permitted.

Most Stocks Higher.

Most stocks were higher throughout the session, despite some profit-taking. Among issues that climbed the fastest were U. S. Smelting, Case, McCrory Stores common and preferred, New York Air Brake, Westinghouse Air Brake, Spiegel-May-Stern, Macy, Marshall Field, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Allied Chemical, American Telephone, General Motors, Chrysler, Western Union, DuPont, Columbian Carbon, Johns-Manville, American Commercial Alcohol, American Can, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Union Pacific and Southern Pacific.

McLellan Stores sagged at one time under realizing, but came back to finish moderately higher.

Continental Can drew only a moderate following upon the declaration of a 60-cent dividend, which will also apply on the new shares to be issued as a stock dividend.

Air Brake Issues.

The flurry in the air-brake issues was coincident with advances that the majority of the Class I roads had declined to equip existing freight cars with a new type of brake.

While Iron Age estimated current steel operations throughout the country at 24½ per cent of capacity, as against 24 per cent last week, the U. S. Steel Corporation reported September shipments of finished steel products had declined 7,717 tons under the August aggregate of 378,023 tons.

Some attention was attracted to the metal shares when foreign bar silver was advanced here ⅜ of a cent an ounce, to 51⅛ cents.

Goods Markets.

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—Print cloths were lower today and other gray cloths were quiet. Finished cottons were in moderate demand. Rayon yarns for November delivery sold moderately. Rayon goods were in slightly better call. Silk goods were quiet in the gray goods division. Satins, taffetas and velvets did best in finished goods. Trade in wool goods continued quiet, especially in dress and coating lines. Burlaps were steady.

Prices of Commodity Futures Move Lower as Demand Lags

Sugar and Coffee Prove Exceptions to General Decline; Check in Foodstuffs Rise Meets Further Drops During Week.

New York, Oct. 10.—With only a few exceptions, notably sugar and coffee, values in fuures markes for commodities moved lower in the past week, due largely to the lack of speculative demand. Trade demand also was lacking in the cash markets and spot prices followed the trend in futures.

As a result, price changes in the regular weekly compilation of wholesale prices, as prepared by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., showed advances less numerous than declines for the first time since the first week of August.

There were only 22 advances in the present week, as against 26 in both the preceding week and the like week of 1933, while declines totaled 39, compared with 21 last week and 30 in the same week last year.

Evidence of Decline.

A further evidence of the downward trend in commodity prices is found in the Dun & Bradstreet Daily Commodity Index, which declined to 117.03 on October 1, the lowest it has been since August 3. The latest figures compare with 117.85 a week earlier and shows a drop of 3.92 points from the peak of 120.95 touched on August 29.

The prolonged advance in foodstuffs, which was temporarily checked two weeks ago, met with another setback in the latest period. Advances in that group numbered only 9, as against 20 declines, whereas a week ago there were 15 advances and 11 declines.

Reflecting the improvement in trading volume in the spot markets, caused by the purchasing of roasters in anticipation of an improvement in seasonal demand, the general tone in the coffee futures market was steady and firm during the week, with fluctuations confined to a narrow range.

Decline in Trading.

A decline in trading activity caused some concession to be made in butter markets and prices eased off about ½ cent during the week. The decline was partly attributed to the fear of reduced consumption as a result of higher prices at retail.

Recent advices indicate a further slight decrease in butter production. The egg market showed firmness toward the close of the week, as the result of cooler weather and lighter offerings. Mixed-colored fresh eggs advanced ¾ cents per dozen, while top grades of large fresh white eggs were 1 cent higher. Refrigerator eggs remained about steady.

Weakness in world market prices exerted a depressing influence on domestic grain markets, which continued rather unsettled throughout the week.

Cash Wheat Drops.

Cash wheat declined 3⅛ cents from last week's quotations, reflecting indifferent mill demand and weakness in the foreign situation. Rye also weakened considerably, with a drop of 6⅜ cents per bushel. Corn showed some independent firmness, closing only ⅜ cents lower.

Oats and barley also were weaker, wtih demand dull. Offerings of Argentine oats below current domestic values were a further weakening influence in the oats market. Reflecting the decline in wheat, flour prices closed the week from 5 cents to 25 cents lower.

All live stock prices worked lower last week, as a result of larger receipts at the leading markets and smaller demand for dressed meats. Heavyweight hogs dropped 55 cents to $6.42 per hundredweight, which compares with $4.75 a year ago. The top price fell to $6.85, against $7.20 the week before. Steers, sheep and lambs were also lower.

U. S. Cattle Buying Lags.

Government purchases of cattle for relief purposes have been declining, while sheep purchases have been sharply increased.

The raw sugar market displayed strength last week, as refiners bought heavily of stocks or sugar in warehouses. Prices were raised 8 points to 2.98 cents, duty paid, the highest price since January, 1930. In the refined sugar market, the undertone was firm, reflecting the advance in raws. Withdrawals were good and prices held on the basis of 4.75 cents per pound.

Hide prices generally were firm and tended upward, as a good week's business was recorded for most branches of the market.

Light Cows Lower.

The only weakness was in light native cows, which were off one-half cent, easing to 7 cents, because of the surplus of this grade, and the overhanging threat of the eventual appearance of the hides from drought cattle, which fall within this group.

Packers No. 1, on the other hand, were marked up one-half cent to 10 cents, which compared with 12 cents at this time a year ago. An advance of one-half cent carried heavy native cows to 8 cents. No. 1 calfskins advanced to 12 cents, which is the highest level that has been reached in eight weeks.

The hesitant attitude which buyers of cotton have assumed toward covering even urgent requirements has caused general weakness in the price structure. The only listed declines for the week, however, were in brown sheetings, 4-yard, which dropped one-quarter cent to 8¾ cents.

Bond Market Is Unchanged; At 83.6 Level

Carrier Issues Firmer; Transfers Increase to $11,143,000.

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—The bond market recovered some of its poise today, and the majority of domestic corporate loans moved higher. The foreign section, unsettled yesterday by developments in Europe, was steady, but U. S. Government issues sagged.

Transfers approximated $11,143,000, par value, compared with $14,566,000 on Tuesday, and the turnover in United States Governments aggregated $3,830,000 against $7,400,000 the day before.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate loans held unchanged at 83.6.

Market Trend Reversed.

The trend of the market reversed itself in afternoon trading when lower-priced issues, especially the carriers, firmed after being irregularly lower in the forenoon.

Chicago & Great Western 4s were 1¾ points higher at 29¾, McCrory Stores 5½s added another 1⅛ points to the gains of yesterday to close at 66½, and Pressed Steel Car 5s made an extreme advance of 6 points to 50. Parmelee Traction 6s were 5½ higher at 25.

Other loans advancing around a point or so included some of North American Edison, Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron, Rio Grande Western, Southern Pacific, Southern Railway, United Drug, Chicago & Northwestern, Interboro Rapid Transit and Laclede Gas.

Prime Investments Higher.

Prime investments were generally higher, but the advances were confined mostly to the fractional variety.

Most United States Government bonds sold 2-32ds to 3-32ds lower, including Treasury 3½s of 1944-46, which declined ¼ of a point, to 100.30, and Home Owners Loan 2¾s, off 6-32ds, at 93.21. Federal Farm Mortgage 3¼s advanced 7-32ds, to 99.24.

Jugoslav State Mortgage Bank 7s advanced 2½ points, to 34½, and other foreign issues that sold off yesterday were generally higher, including French 7s and Japanese 6½s. German 5½s were 2⅛ higher, at 26⅝.

Curb's Prices Move Higher; Trading Wider

Leaders Capture Advances as Sales Climb to 136,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—Curb stocks moved into higher territory today as trading interest broadened. Closing gains ranged from fractions to around 2 points.

Specialties were particularly firm. Alcohols recorded substantial progress, while utilities and metals were higher. The trend pointed steadily upward from the start and final prices were around the day's best.

Singer Manufacturing rose 6 points to 222, for a new 1934 high.

Mead Johnson was an isolated weak spot, dipping nearly 4. Pittsburgh Plate Glass got up more than 2, while other issues finishing around 1 to 2 higher included Aluminum Co. of America, Babcock & Wilcox, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Ford Motor of Canada, Hiram Walker, Newmont, Pepperell, A. O. Smith, Davenport Hosiery, Gulf Oil and United Shoe Machinery.

Electric Bond & Share, American Cyanamid B, Lake Shore and Swift & Co. also improved.

Transfers increased to 136,000 shares, compared with 102,000 Tuesday.

Wheat Values Rise Sharply In Active Sales

Advance Aided by Gain in Liverpool Prices; Other Grains Up.

Chicago, Oct. 10 (AP).—Buoyantly advancing, with more activity than for a long time past, wheat scored a maximum gain of 3¼ cents a bushel today.

With foreigners as well as domestic mills brisk buyers of wheat futures in Chicago, indications were also that a big export business in Canadian wheat was under way from both the Atlantic Coast and the Pacific.

Much notice, too, was taken of Washington reports that the Administration was seeking a general higher priced level, and that although there was no intention of permitting runaway prices, there was nevertheless no immediate intention of putting on brakes.

Wheat Closes Firm.

Wheat closed firm, 2½ to 3⅛ cents above yesterday's finish; December new, 99½@99⅝; corn, 1½ to 1⅞ up; December new, 75⅝@75¾; oats, 1¾ to 2¼, advanced, and barley, up 2 cents to 5 cents. Provisions closed varying from 7 cents decline to 17 cents gain.

An almost vertical rise of prices distinguished wheat trading from start to finish.

The initial upward impulse came from decidedly higher Liverpool quotations than had been looked for. In addition were disquieting reports of need of moisture in domestic winter wheat sections stretching from western Nebraska and eastern Colorado through parts of Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

Scantiness of Offerings.

An outstanding feature during most of the day in the wheat pit was scantiness of offerings, despite the upturn of prices. Meanwhile, Liverpool dispatches said European continental countries were buying wheat abroad, Minneapolis reports told of unusually large demand for flour, and upturns of securities and of cotton at New York acted as a further stimulus. At the day's high, wheat was up 6 cents from last week's low, with premiums for immediate delivery showing new gains.

Corn and oats were bullishly affected by correct belief that the Government crop estimates, due to the close of trading, would show a material reduction as to corn.

Provisions, although easier at the start owing to setbacks of hog values, were tronger afterward in response to strength shown by cereals.

Foreign Silver Prices Reach Five-Year Peak

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—Silver continued its record-breaking course today as the New York price for foreign silver reached another five-year peak.

Handy & Harman, bullion brokers, established today's price at 51⅛ cents an ounce, a rise of three-eighths of a cent from yesterday and another new high since 1929. The rise was largely in reflection of an advance of an eighth of a penny in the London quotation, which rose to 23¾ pence an ounce, also the highest since 1929.

Iron and Steel Cited as Aids To Trade Gains

Ingot Production Climbs as Lakes' Ore Cargoes Reflect Activity.

Cleveland, Oct. 10 (AP).—An impressive list of business gains will be the contribution of the huge iron and steel industry and of Great Lakes shipping this year when the Nation takes stock of its 1934 recovery.

Authoritative sources made this evident this week with figures for the year's first three quarters showing gains ranging from 17 to 68 per cent over the corresponding period of 1933.

Topping the list is pig iron production, estimated by the magazine Steel at 13,041,339 tons from January 1 to October 1, 1934, compared with 7,754,026 tons in the corresponding period of 1933—a gain of approximately 68 per cent. The total for all of 1933 was 13,221,707.

Ingot Output Larger.

Steel ingot production in the first nine months of 1934 is roughly 18 per cent larger than in 1933. The figures for the present year to date are estimated at 20,441,832 tons, compared to 17,189,390 in the first three quarters of the previous year, and compared to 22,594,079 for all of 1933.

Shipments of iron ore from Lake Superior ports also reflect the industry's improvement.

Although the September total this year was 3,439,375 tons, compared with 5,504,175 tons in September, 1933, shipments in the first three quarters of 1934 amounted to 19,125,586 tons, about 17.3 per cent greater than the 16,301,573 tons in the corresponding period of 1933.

Coal Cargoes Larger.

Coal cargoes on the Great Lakes are about 20 per cent larger this year than last. The total from January 1 to October 1, 1934, was 22,319,315 tons, compared to 18,640,694 tons in the corresponding period a year ago.

The figures, from the Lake Carriers Association, show total ore shipments in 1933 were 21,623,898 tons, only a little larger than the total for the first nine months of 1934.

Total coal shipments last year were 31,351,353 tons, which shippers expect will be exceeded this year by a margin of approximately 4,000,000 tons.

Security and Commodity Marts Close Tomorrow

New York, Oct. 10 (AP).—The principal security and commodity markets here and in other leading centers will be closed on Friday in observance of Columbus Day. An extra holiday will be observed Saturday by the New York Commodity Exchange, Coffee and Sugar Exchange and Cocoa Exchange.

questing Cochrane to give them to Rowe to keep in his pocket for luck on that day.

Mike and His Rabbit Foot.

Cochrane's explosive remark, "Blankety blank! Here, hurry up and give these to Rowe and tell him to shove them in his pocket. We'll give everything a chance. We've got to win today." . . . The sheepish look on Cochrane's face a moment later, changing to a boyish smile as he dug into his own pocket and produced three articles . . . They were a moth-eaten and flattened rabbit's foot, a copper crucifix, and a beautifully carved ivory cross . . . "I got a pocket full myself," he admitted. "This one here," pointing to the copper crucifix, "won the British Open for Tommy Armour. He lent it to me. This ivory one came from Ireland. I never caught a game without this rabbit's foot." . . . Sitting up in the press box during that game watching Rowe get licked and wondering whether he had the little wooden shoes in his pocket.

The discovery made in the dugout, shortly before the seventh and final game, in Detroit, that the Tigers were whipped before they put on their gloves and went out onto the field, by their downcast faces and listless demeanor . . . Mickey Cochrane's strange remark as he shoved his hand into his catcher's mitt and ran out of the dugout . . . "Well, we're going down swinging, anyway . . ." . . . The generally strained atmosphere in the Tiger lair, compared to the rough and ready up-and-at-'em spirit in the St. Louis hutch . . .

From Goat to Hero.

The black looks Rogell got in St. Louis from his teammates when he showed up at the ball yard the first day with a taped ankle and asked to be excused from playing . . . The decision by Cochrane to make him play . . . and the subsequent change of Rogell from goat to hero in the two games Detroit won in St. Louis . . . The ball thrown by Rogell bouncing off Dean's skull for more than 50 feet into the air and far out toward right field . . . Turning the field glasses on Dizzy Dean as his teammates were carrying him off the field and wondering whether he had been killed . . . Thinking at the moment of a similar scene but in the Yale Bowl when Jack Sheridan, the Army end, was carried off the field with a broken neck . . . Remembering that Sheridan looked pasty white, and horribly limp . . . Dizzy was pink and just looked like a fighter who had been clipped on the jaw . . .

Ducky Medwick, flat on his back at third base in the last game, kicking at Owen's stomach with his spiked feet . . . The comedy of the shower of garbage that flew from the bleachers when Medwick came out to play his position in the Tiger half of the sixth inning and the grim reminders that tragedy might lie close in the glassware that bounced and tumbled along the field at Medwick's feet . . . Owen's look of injured innocence at the brief trial in front of Judge Landis' field box at which Medwick was found guilty and thumbed from the inclosure . . .

Making Greenberg Bite.

The great Dean brothers' formula for striking out Hank Greenberg at the crucial moments—two strikes in close which Hank would take with his hat on his shoulder, and then the third a bad ball, high and wide on the outside on which he would strike out . . . Both Deans using it by rote . . . The grin on Dizzy Dean's face in the final game when he was striking Greenberg out twice, an impish, Puckish smile at the corners of the mouth each time Hank fanned at one . . . The terrible riding they gave poor Schoolboy Rowe from the Cardinal dugout . . . "Hey Mom, hey Edna . . . How'm I doin'? . . ." The feeling that Edna and Mom had more or less cost Rowe the series . . . The conviction that the Cardinals were the roughest, toughest, hardest, slam-bangingest ball club I have ever seen, and the nearest thing to the old-time baseball nines that the present generation has seen.

counters. The closest the Cardinals ever came to subduing this particular enemy was last year, when the local aggregation was downed, 20 to 7, after Catholic University team had led, 7 to 6, through three periods.

Galludet emerged practically intact from last week's 6-6 tie with the Louisburg College. Ted Hughes, Galludet coach, has been busy ironing out the wrinkles in his charges' tackling and interference, and expects them to show to better advantage on the Eastern Shore.

from the barrier and in the battle around the far turn Adams Eve was bumped and forced to pull up.

Aside from the feature, the day's most interesting incident occurred in the first race. High Flag, carrying wads of the public money, represented a statue as the field went away, and Alintour, enjoying a wide lead, went to the outside fence at the last turn and finished a sagging thirteenth. Star Chase turned up the winner.

A crowd bordering on 8,000 was present, but the betting mart was anything but brisk.

AUCTION SALES

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1934—
THOMAS J. OWEN & SON, Auctioneers.
1431 Eye Street Northwest.
TRUSTEE'S SALE OF VALUABLE REAL ESTATE, BEING A TWO-STORY BRICK DWELLING, CONTAINING SIX ROOMS AND TWO BATHS, KNOWN AS 1430 MONROE STREET NORTHWEST.

By virtue of a certain deed of trust recorded in Liber No. 5442 at folio 354 of the land records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of the party secured thereby, the undersigned will sell at public auction, in front of the premises on TUESDAY, THE SIXTEENTH DAY OF OCTOBER, 1934, AT THREE-THIRTY O'CLOCK P. M., the following-described land and premises, situate in the District of Columbia: All of lots numbered nineteen (19), sixty (60), sixty-one (61), sixty-two (62), sixty-three (63) and sixty-four (64) in William Redin, trustee, and others subdivision of square one hundred and eighty-two (182) as per plat recorded in Liber W. F. folio 70, of the records of the office of the surveyor of the District of Columbia, excepting the north one foot front by depth of said lot (60), sold together with all buildings and improvements thereon consisting of the "Jefferson Apartments," and all furnishings, fittings and fixtures thereon which said trustee is authorized, by said deed of trust, to sell and convey.

TERMS OF SALE: One-third of the purchase price to be paid in cash on or before the thirtieth day of November, 1934, balance in two equal installments, payable on or before one and two years from date of sale, respectively, with interest thereon at the rate of six per centum per annum from day of sale, said interest payable semiannually, and to be secured by a first deed of trust on the property sold, or all cash at the option of the purchaser. The said trustee will receive no bid from anyone offering to bid who shall not, at or before the hour of sale, or any adjournment thereof, deposit with said trustee, as a pledge that such bidder will make good his bid in case of its acceptance, a deposit of $15,000, either in cash or certified check on a local bank or trust company, made or indorsed payable to the undersigned trustee, or in lieu thereof bonds of the par value of $30,000, in form transferable by delivery, secured by said deed of trust, said bonds to have all unpaid coupons attached thereto. The deposit of any unsuccessful bidder will be returned to him immediately after the sale. In case any successful bidder shall fail to complete his purchase by November 30, 1934, in accordance with the said terms of sale, said deposit may be forfeited at the option of the said trustee, or without forfeiting the deposit said trustee may avail itself of any legal or equitable rights against defaulting purchaser. The said trustee reserves the right to reject any and all bids and withdraw the property from sale. Adjustments with respect to taxes, assessments, insurance, rentals, income from operation of property, interest and all other adjustments shall be made as of the date of sale. The said trustee, however, will continue to manage and operate said property, and collect the income therefrom from date of sale to date of transfer upon settling terms as set forth in said deed of trust. After settlement of sale said trustee will not be answerable for any bills or expenses incurred in the management or operation of said property. Terms of sale to be complied with by November 30, 1934; otherwise the said trustee reserves the right to forfeit said deposit or to resell the property at the risk and cost of defaulting purchaser upon the foregoing terms, after advertisement of such resale published three times per week for two successive weeks in two newspapers published in Washington, D. C.

AMERICAN SECURITY AND TRUST COMPANY,
By CORCORAN THOM, President.

Walt Mason, Himself

Another Crisis.

There is a crisis every day, in some far corner of the world, and statesmen shake their fists and say that thunderbolts will soon be hurled, unless the other fellow wilts, and puts away his shining blade, and takes his dolls and crazy quilts to some back seat, far in the shade. Alas the other fellow feels that bluffs and threats will make a hit, and straps some spurs upon his heels, and throws a very warlike fit. The colonels would be cutting ice, the captains would be sawing wood, but that the nations lack the price to make their threats of warfare good. The world would reek with battle smoke, we'd hear the deadly cannon roar, if all the nations were not broke, and standing at the pawnshop door. There's poverty all around the globe, which seems to cool the martial fire; the king must soak his ermine robe to buy his car a rubber tire. It doesn't much increase one's debt to quall a large and foaming stein, and hurl a hot and lurid threat at fellows just across the line. A king or ruler thus may prance at and raise a crisis now and then, just so he makes no rash advance against the foe with fighting men. It doesn't cost a cent to roar and throw harsh words at neighbor folk; but when he'd go ahead for gore he is reminded that he's broke.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Yesterdays — By Harry J. Tuthill

WHAT A SURPRISE! THE MOMENT THAT MRS. KARAMBA SAID HER NAME HAD BEEN WREN I REMEMBERED YOUR SISTER TELLING ME ABOUT HER. PEOPLE HAVING JUST WADS OF MONEY.
FLO WREN! HOW TIME FLIES!
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. 10-11
SHE TRIED TO AVOID SHOWING IT BUT YOU COULD SEE IT JUST GAVE HER THE CREEPS TO BE REMINDED OF HOW LONG AGO SHE WAS YOUNG. IT SORT OF GIVES ME THE WILLIES TOO.
HER BROTHER SAT ON THE FIRST DERBY HAT I EVER OWNED. THAT COOKED PRACTICALLY THE WHOLE FAMILY WITH ME.
ALL YOUR SISTER TALKED ABOUT WAS FLORENCE WREN. HER COMPLEXION AND WAVY HAIR. AND THAT WAS IN THE DAYS WHEN YOU COULDN'T GET THINGS LIKE THAT BY JUST WAITING FOR YOUR TURN IN A BEAUTY SHOP.
HER HUSBAND'S NAME, SIRDAR KARAMBA, SOUNDS LIKE SOMETHING YOU'D BUY AT A DRUG STORE TO GET RID OF ANTS.
THEY'RE BOTH NICE PEOPLE. MY STARS, I WISH I HAD THOSE TIMES TO LIVE OVER AGAIN. BUSTED HEARTS AND ALL. THOSE DAYS WERE JUST WONDERFUL.
YOU'RE TELLING ME! MY ONLY WORRY THEN WAS THAT A MANDOLIN STRING WOULD LET GO WHILE I WAS SPANKING OUT A HOT NUMBER LIKE, OH PROMISE ME.

Joe Palooka — No Enthusiasm — By Ham Fisher

ANN, I'VE DECIDED THAT IF JOSEPH IS NOW BEING TAKEN UP BY HIS MAJESTY, FREDRIKE OF HANGOVERIA, THAT I'LL AGREE TO YOUR MARRIAGE.
OH MOTHER, I'M SO HAPPY. I'VE WAITED SO LONG FOR THIS AND DARLING, DID YOU SEE THE LATEST PAPER?
THE REVOLUTION IS OVER IN HANGOVERIA. THE REPORT SAYS JOE AND THE KING WON THE POPULACE OVER. ISN'T THAT SIMPLY GORGEOUS?
YES, YES, DEAR. AND NOW I MUST CALL THE SOCIETY EDITORS AND TELL THEM THE PARTICULARS.
10-11
MAYBE I COULD MAKE PERSONAL APPEARANCES IN VAUDEVILLE THEATRES OR SIGN TESTIMONIALS FOR SHAVING CREAM IN YOUR COUNTRY.
THEY SAY THAT PAYS EXCELLENT STIPENDS. I'M SO ANXIOUS TO HELP YOU GENTLEMEN.
AND I MUST REPLENISH OUR TREASURY TOO.

DIXIE DUGAN — Wait for More News! — By J. P. McEvoy and J. H. Striebel

DUMBFOUNDED - DIXIE HEARS PUBLISHER SLEWSTER "ACCUSE" HER OF BEING THE AUTHOR OF "GENTLEMEN BEWARE!" AND OF HAVING CLEVERLY CHANGED HER OWN NAME TO "SUDLEY NAEGUD" - DIXIE IS BAFFLED BY THE CHARGE - BUT CAN YOU EXPLAIN IT?-
10-11
TO REFRESH YOUR MEMORY— DIXIE AND EDGERTON HAD WORKED OUT HIS PEN-NAME TOGETHER "SUDLEY" BEING HIS FATHER'S NAME, AND FOR A LAST NAME—
I'VE GOT IT! WHEN I WAS A KID, MY OLD SCOTCH NURSE CALLED ME A "NAE-GUDE" - THAT'S SCOTCH FOR "NO-GOOD" S'POSE THEN I CALL MYSELF "SUDLEY NAEGUDE"—
BUT DIXIE THOUGHT THAT "NAEGUDE" LOOKED A BIT TOO QUEER, SO THEY DECIDED TO LEAVE OUT ONE OF THE "E's"—
"SUDLEY NAEGUD"—YES! THAT WOULD BE A DISTINCTIVE NAME—AND FUNNY THING - IT ALREADY SEEMS AS IF I'M USED TO IT—
PUBLISHER SLEWSTER OF COURSE, DIDN'T KNOW ALL THIS, BUT STILL— WHY ON EARTH SHOULD HE HAVE THOUGHT THERE WAS ANY CONNECTION BETWEEN "SUDLEY NAEGUD" AND "DIXIE DUGAN"?
HERE'S ONE CLUE FOR YOU! REMEMBER HOW HE GOT TO THINKING ABOUT THE NAME AND—"SUDLEY!"—SAY— WHEN I WAS A DOUGHBOY IN FRANCE — HEY!— WHERE'S MY FRENCH DICTIONARY—!
NOW SEE IF YOU CAN GUESS EXACTLY WHY PUBLISHER SLEWSTER IS SO SURE THAT "SUDLEY NAEGUD" IS DIXIE DUGAN

THE GUMPS — Spare My Blushes

MR. GUMP—I'M GOING TO READ THE COURT A LETTER FROM YOU TO MRS. DE STROSS AFTER SHE BEGGED YOU TO GO THROUGH WITH THE WEDDING—
"DEAR MRS. DE STROSS— I'M AFRAID MY MARRIAGE TO MILLIE IS OUT OF THE QUESTION—FOR THE FIRST TIME IN MY LIFE I HAVE DISCOVERED WHAT REAL LOVE IS— GREAT THOUGH MY GRIEF WAS IN LOSING YOUR DAUGHTER, I HAVE FOUND ANOTHER LITTLE GIRL EVEN SWEETER, WHO HAS BROUGHT ME TRUE HAPPINESS AT LAST— BENJAMIN GUMP—" 10-11
OF COURSE I DON'T DENY LOVING THIS OTHER GIRL— SHE WAS LITTLE NELL— A MERE CHILD— SHE CAME TO ME WHEN HER GRANDFATHER DIED—YOU'RE SURE SHE WAS ONLY A LITTLE GIRL? CAN YOU PRODUCE HER? WHAT PROOF HAVE YOU?
I'M SORRY TO SAY I HAVE NO PROOF— SHE DISAPPEARED— I DON'T KNOW WHERE SHE IS—
GENTLEMEN— CAN WE POSSIBLY BELIEVE THIS? OR ISN'T IT OBVIOUS THAT THIS "LITTLE NELL" IS AN INVENTION— A CREATURE WHO NEVER EXISTED— AND THIS HEARTLESS MAN WAS IN LOVE AGAIN— A WEEK AFTER THE BROKEN WEDDING—

QUICK MOTHAW! SOMEONE'S RUINED THIS BRAND NEW FRENCH MODEL THAT WAS ENTRUSTED TO MY CARE!!
GOOD LAN'S! WHAT A SHAME!! WELL, LET'S TRY TO FIX IT
I HAVEN'T DONE FANCY DRESS-MAKIN' FOR YEARS, WINNIE!
GOSH, WE MUST DO SOMETHING, MOTHAW! I'LL GET BLAMED FOR THIS AND IT WILL MEAN MY JOB!!
WHY DON'T Y'GO TO BED, WINNIE?
NOT TILL THIS JOB IS DONE, OLD PAL!!
-AND THE HOURS TICK BY.. A BLACK NIGHT SLOWLY CHANGES TO A GRAY DAWN AS WINNIE AND HER MOTHER FRANTICALLY WORK ON.. WHAT WILL BE THEIR RESULT?

Two Are Jailed After Robbery Of Rum Shops

Pair Suspected of Attempt at Third Holdup; Loot Totals $820.

Two suspects were arrested yesterday in connection with two holdups Tuesday night, in which the loot totaled $820. The prisoners are suspected of having attempted a third holdup on O'Donnell's Cafe, 1200 block of E street, in which they obtained nothing.

John C. Greene, 30, of the 1300 block of Park road, and Leon Larson, 38, who gave his address as the Transient Bureau, are the men held. Greene was arrested early yesterday and Larson late yesterday afternoon.

Liquor Holdup Suspects.

Both are believed by police to have entered the Star Liquor Co., in the 500 block of Eleventh street northwest, in an intoxicated condition, held up Nathan N. Wallach, the manager, and escaped with $700 from the cash register. Eight persons were in the store at the time. The robbers escaped on foot.

A short time later the same two men, police said, entered the Cut Rate Liquor Store, and robbed the manager, Richard Rosenfeld, of $120. This time they made their getaway in an automobile, driven by a third man.

A man about 25 sauntered into O'Donnell's Sea Food Cafe 45 minutes later.

Pistol Misses Fire.

He drew a pistol on Gordon Wilson, the head waiter, and attempted to rob the place. He walked to the check-writing machine, thinking it the cash register, and snapped his weapon several times at Wilson, according to the police, but it did not fire.

Both suspects were to appear in the police line-up.

Juror in Edwards Trial Denies Threatening Him

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Oct. 10 (AP).—John Luft, one of the jurors who convicted Robert Allan Edwards for the "American tragedy" slaying of his friend, Freda McKechnie, today denied that he had threatened to "burn" the young mine surveyor two days before he was selected for the jury.

Edwards, sentenced to death for the killing, has petitioned for a retrial on the grounds Luft prejudiced the case. He attached to his petition three affidavits in which neighbors of Luft quoted the juror as voicing the threat.

Gardner to Address North Carolina Alumni

With former Gov. O. Max Gardner of North Carolina as speaker, the University of North Carolina Alumni Club of Washington will meet for supper at the Cosmos Club at 7 p. m. today. The meeting will be part of the Nation-wide celebration of the 141st birthday of the institution, which claims the distinction of being the oldest State university in the United States.

Alumni of North Carolina College for Women and of North Carolina State University are invited to attend.

Realty Office Is Looted Of $9 by Holdup Man

An armed robber held up employes and patrons of a real estate office at 1326 U street northwest and escaped with $9 yesterday.

Mrs. Ida K. Tinner, wife of Guy Tinner, proprietor of the office, was forced to surrender money to the bandit, described as a shabbily dressed colored youth. Several patrons were forced into a rear room, but were not robbed.

CAN YOU DRAW 4 STRAIGHT LINES, TOUCHING EVERY DOT, WITHOUT RETRACING OR LIFTING YOUR PENCIL..?
10-11-34

A strange mental ability possessed by William W. Lord, private in the Quartermaster Corps of the United States Army, enables him to do several things at the same time, each one of which would require the full attention of the ordinary mind. He is able to perform difficult mental feats without conscious thought or effort.

For example, Private Lord can copy headlines from a daily paper—just to make it more difficult he copies them upside down and backward—mentally cube any two-digit number you mention, recite almost any familiar poem, as well as add up six columns of figures, all at the same time. And likely as not he will be thinking about something else all the time.

Psychoanalysists have described his mental agility as due to "the ascendancy of the subconscious because of a frustration complex caused by a contrary course of events." In spite of his mental achievements, Lord admits that the explanation given above is beyond him.

He has willed his brain to the Burt G. Wilder Brain Collection of Cornell University for post-mortem study.

The modern world series play began in 1903 when the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Boston Red Sox played an eight-game series. In the following year, however, the New York Giants refused to play the Red Sox on the ground that they did not represent a major league.

Police Hold Three Men After 'Numbers' Raid

Three men were arrested yesterday on charges of setting up a gaming table when police raided third-floor quarters of a building in the 1500 block of Fourteenth street northwest.

The men, allegedly "numbers" operators, were booked at the Second Police Precinct Station as Thomas A. Bryant, colored, 24, of the 2300 block of Ontario road northwest; Alfred Jones, colored, 32, of the 1400 block of T street northwest, and Ralph Jones, colored, 23, of the 1200 block of Sixteenth street northeast. They were released under bonds of $2,000 each.

Dog With Tail Cut Off Is Summoned to Court

Mayfield, Ky., Oct. 10 (AP).—Kentucky justice halted here today until a cur dog appears to twitch what is left of his tail in evidence against the man who cut it off.

His master, Bob Acree, charges that Johnny, "Babe" or C. Gibson, cousins, mutilated his pet after a row at his home near Dublin. He showed a 4-inch tail to County Judge W. B. Sullivan when the three went on trial for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. Sullivan adjourned the case until next Wednesday and summoned the dog.
